WHILE RUNNING TROT LINE

Bernice Boy, 16, Falls From Boat, Drowns In Lake

HOMER (SPECIAL)—A fishing mishap early yesterday morning claimed the life of Billy Wiltcher, 16-year-old Bernice youth who drowned in Corny Lake while running a trot line. Officials at the Claiborne Parish Sheriff's Department said the youth was in a boat with a brother, Barney Wiltcher Jr., 24.

Barney told officers that he was examining a trot line at one end of the boat when he heard a splash. He looked around and saw his brother floundering in the water.

"I don't know how he happened to fall out of the boat, the brother said.

Barney jumped in after his younger brother and yelled for help. Three other fishermen, Willis and Billy Cockrell and H. L. Waganor, were on the bank nearby. They were able to pull the older boy from the water but could not save Billy.

Billy could barely swim, according to his brother.

Claiborne Parish officials recovered the body at 3:10 a.m. yesterday, about three hours after the tragedy.

WATER DEPTH

The water where the body was found was eight feet deep. Officers described the site as just north of Highway 9, in the smaller part of Corny Lake.

The drowning was the third boating accident reported in the area this week. Two Nebo cousins, Archie and Irvin Bignar, drowned in Catahoula Lake near Jena on Monday. Their bodies were recovered Friday.

Funeral services for the Wiltcher youth will be conducted at 2:30 p.m. Sunday at the Shiloh Baptist Church near Bernice. The Revs. M. L. Copeland and D. D. Cantrell will officiate, with interment in Shiloh Cemetery under the direction of Pratt Funeral Home of Junction City Ark.

In addition to his brother, Barney Wiltcher Jr. of Bernice, he is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Barney Wiltcher Sr.; another brother, Bobby Wiltcher; a sister, Betty Jo Witcher, and his paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Wiltcher, all of Bernice.

He was a student at Bernice High School.

Funeral arrangements were incomplete yesterday for Dr. B. E. Spencer, 53, well-known Ouachita Parish doctor and member of the Ouachita Parish School Board, who died Friday night in Los Angeles, Calif., where he had gone for a medical check-up.

Dr. Spencer, who resided in Sterlington where he operated a clinic, was well known in the medical profession here and throughout Louisiana.

He was serving a second term as a member of the Ouachita Parish School Board where he was chairman of the board's building committee. School Board President C. G. Wall Jr. received news of Dr. Spencer's death with "extreme regret. The death of Dr. Spencer inflicts a severe loss upon the school board," Wall said.

A native of Spencer, La., just north of Sterlington in Union Parish, Dr. Spencer was a member of a well known and respected family.

Survivors, in addition to his widow, the former Marthield Knight of Springhill, include four children, Martha, Bennie, Margaret and Richard Spencer, all of Sterlington; three brothers, J. V. Monroe Resident Receives Burns

A Monroe man was hospitalized with burns on his face, neck and hands which he received when attempting to put out a fire near a Rayville drilling rig yesterday.

H. W. Montgomery, field superintendent for Southwest Gas Producing Company, sustained the burns when a can of gasoline exploded near him as he was extinguished a grass fire at Hammett No. 1 in Rayville Field.

He was taken to a local hospital by private car. Relatives said he was doing well last night and no facial plastic surgury would be necessary.

Local School Revenue Hike Is Proposed

Research Expert Says State Tax Raise Unlikely

BATON ROUGE (AP) — A governmental research expert suggested Saturday Louisiana's public schools must find more money from local sources because higher state taxes are unlikely.

Other members of the panel on financing public schools at the Louisiana Press Assn. convention agreed with executive director Edward J. Steimel of the Public Affairs Research Council (PAR).

Robert Angers of the weekly Franklin Banner-Tribune summed it up, "Until we decide at home that we're going to pay the bill at home, we're not going to solve the problems of public schools in Louisiana."

STATE PAYS MOST

Steimel, commenting on a study of public school financing released Saturday by his independent research agency, said the state contributed 77 per cent of all school funds in Louisiana and 85 per cent of operating funds, about double the national average.

He said in the last 11 years school revenues climbed 331 per cent, or from 52 million dollars to 226 million per year, a 220 per cent boost figured in terms of "constant dollars" which allow for inflationary effects.

"Local revenues for operation and construction in Louisiana amounted to 20 per cent of total revenues," Steimel said, "whereas the average for the country was more than 56 per cent.

"In Louisiana, 13 systems provided less than 10 per cent of all their school operating and construction funds and 48 provided less than 20 per cent of their total revenues. Only three provided more than 30 per cent of operating and construction funds."

But Steimel said Louisiana had

Weather Satellites To Aid Forecasters

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The next generation of weather satellites is expected to put an end to false hurricane alarms.

Hurricanes are tricky and erratic. They have been known to threaten a dozen or so different places along the East Coast before deciding where to hit.

All of the threatened communities suffered from tension and anxiety even if they were spared actual physical blows.

Dr. Francis W. Reichelderfer, director of the Weather Bureau, believes this uncertainty will be ended by satellites equipped to keep a television watch on storms.

A TV view of the atmosphere from above it, he told United Press International should enable the weathermen "to fix the hurricane cloud system and follow its center at sea far from the usual shipping lanes where sometimes a storm exists for a day or more before we know anything about it."

In its many daily passes around the earth," "the satellite should observe the center or eye of the hurricane several times a day and thus pick up any erratic movements."

The TV satellite, he said, will fill "gaps in our knowledge" and make possible "more accurate determination of a hurricane's time

Iran To Sign U.S. Mutual Defense Pact

Shah Announces Plans Despite Soviet Threats

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — The Shah of Iran announced Saturday that despite Soviet threats his government will sign a mutual defense pact with the United States.

Provisions of the pact will be invoked only in the case of aggression, the Shah told a news conference. He said the agreement did not involve missile bases.

"Our regime is definitely representative of the people and it will last — while the world may mourn the destruction of others," Shah Reva Pahlevi said. The implication was that Western ideologies will outlast Communism.

CONFIRMS PLEDGE

The Shah's announcement confirmed Foreign Minister Ali Ashgar Hakmet's promise last Sunday that Iran will stay solidly in the Western camp and not "neutral and isolationist."

Earlier this year a top - level team of Soviet negotiators came to Tehran to discuss a proposed non - aggression treaty with its smaller neighbor.

After the talks collapsed Moscow angrily complained Iran was bent on maintaining a hostile attitude toward Russia. Radio Moscow launched bitter tirades against Iran, charging its foreign policy was dictated by Washington.

The Kremlin also attacked Iran's membership in the Baghdad Pact and negotiations for a mutual defense treaty with the United States.

Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev personally declared that Iran would have to bear the consequences of a policy which, he said, Russia could not ignore because Iran borders the Soviet Union.

The Shah said in revealing his decision to go ahead with signing the alliance with the United States that his government's foreign policy would remain unchanged as far as Russia is concerned.

Despite the recent propaganda offensive from Moscow Iran will continue an attitude of neighborliness toward Russia, he said.

Ike Flies Home, Asserts Mexico Visit Successful

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Eisenhower returned Saturday from a "very successful" goodwill visit with Mexican President Adolfo Lopez Mateos Acapulco.

He flew here non - stop and passed up a planned weekend of golf at Augusta, Ga., because of cold weather.

White House press secretary James C. Hagerty, who accompanied the President, told reporters Mr. Eisenhower felt it was a "very successful" visit. He said the chief executive returned with "the feeling that he has a friend" in Lopez Mateos and that the two will be "working in close touch" hereafter.

Soon after his plane landed the President drove to Walter Reed Army Hospital to visit Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, who is under treatment for cancer.

Hagerty said Eisenhower's meeting with the Mexican president would make it easier for experts of the two nations to follow

Walker Invested With Presidency

The investiture of Dr. George T. Walker as president of Northeast Louisiana State College here yesterday climaxed a series of ceremonies which included representatives of 92 of the nation's colleges and universities.

Alfred E. Roberts, vice president of the Louisiana State Board of Education, officiated at the investiture in Brown Hall auditorium on the Northeast campus in an impressive ceremony following an academic procession in traditional caps and gowns.

Dr. Lawrence G. Derthick, the United States Commissioner of Education from Washington, D.C., was guest speaker for the occasion. He had headed a delegation which made a study tour of the Soviet Union last spring and included observations of the Russian educational system in his address.

TOP PRIORITY

The speaker pointed to the top priority the Russians are giving education because they believe it to be a "pass key to the economic and cultural conquest of the world." He noted the presence everywhere of a setting of competition in schools farms and factories in Russia to "reach and overreach America."

In contrast, Derthick recalled the United States was the first country in the world to give all of its citizens a free education "Because of our early and continuing dedication to this principal, we have become a strong nation and a prosperous one. Our moral and spiritual values have been nourished and sustained by our educational system, and we must never forget this," the speaker said.

He stressed that while the Russian devotion to education had the same elements of thrift and hard work of frontier days in this coun-

Both men were killed instantly and the unidentified man, a passenger in the Fontenot car, was taken to Moosa Memorial Hospital in Eunice, Joubert added.

Bodies of the victims were at Ardoin Funeral Home in Eunice late last night.

Mobilizing Suggested For Crisis

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, Army chief of staff, has suggested to Congress that mobilization of the entire nation might be necessary if the Russians use military force this spring to prevent access to Berlin.

Taylor said in closed-door testimony given Feb. 2 and released Saturday that "we have all the strength that is necessary if we are willing to mobilize it and to do so in time." He appeared before the Senate disarmament subcommittee.

Sen. Russell B. Long (D-La.) asked whether Taylor meant "mobilize the entire nation."

"Yes," the general replied. "You cannot play around in this business unless you have a lot of blue chips in your pocket. This is unlimited poker."

Long had previously asked what would happen if, on expiration of the Soviets' May 27 deadline for getting the West out of Berlin, the United States attempted to send tank-guarded land convoys to Berlin and the Russians tried to stop them.

He suggested that the Soviets might seek a military solution in a "step-by-step approach so that there is never a particular point

Army Bugler Charged With Bank Slaying

FT. BRAGG, N. C. (UPI)—An off-duty Army bugler was arrested Saturday and charged with shooting down a civilian teller who tried to thwart his $13,373 holdup of a branch bank on this Army post.

FBI agents and police found $10,000 of the loot hidden in the attic of the home of the suspect, S-4 Charles Thomas Bradford, 26, of nearby Fayetteville. Bradford waived preliminary hearing on charges of bank robbery and murder, and was held in lieu of $50,000 bond.

ON FURLOUGH

Bradford played the trumpet in the 100-member Third Army Band and was on an 18-day furlough from his post at Ft. McPherson, Atlanta, Ga. Until last September, Bradford was stationed at the Airborne Infantry center here.

The FBI and military authorities said witnesses identified Bradford as the man wearing civilian clothes, seen loitering in the bank office near the Bragg Helicopter

Soviet Told Of Suicidal War Danger

MOSCOW (UPI) — British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan opened summit talks with Nikita S. Khrushchev Saturday by appealing for greater East - West understanding lest the big powers "muddle" their way into a suicidal war.

The two chiefs of state plunged into the first of a series of discussion on such world problems as Berlin and Germany almost immediately after Macmillan arrived aboard a Comet jetliner from London to a rigidly formal welcome.

Soviet Premier Khrushchev, in jovial mood, said at the airport he looked forward to "useful talks." Macmillan said his 10-day mission was to seek "better understanding" between the world power blocs.

AMPLIFIES REMARKS

At a Kremlin reception later, Macmillan amplified his remark in a speech that ranged generally over major issues and reduced them to the basic fear that a war in the nuclear age could destroy the world.

He reminded the audience that for more than 10 years with only intermittent "thaws," the East and West have been "confronting each other with ever more terrible instruments of destruction."

"I wish with all my heart that this competition would cease," he said.

"It is not that we fear acts of calculated aggression, and I hope that you do not. In modern conditions, such aggresion, between the great powers, at least, would be suicidal folly.

"At the same time it is impossible to hide from ourselves the dangers of a war by miscalcula-

Aid Invited In War On Gangsters

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. John L. McClellan (D-Ark) said Saturday phonograph record manufacturers would be justified in refusing to sell to outfits that supply gangster-ridden jukebox operations.

McClellan, chairman of the Senate Labor-Management Committeel told newsmen that if such action could be termed a boycott, he thinks it would be a legitimate one.

McClellan's comments were prompted by testimony about the operations of the Lormar Distributing Co. of Chicago, described by committee Council Robert F. Kennedy as gangster-run.

The committee plans to explore the company's activities further when it resumes public hearings Tuesday in a widespread investigation of the extent to which mobsters and shady union officials have nuseled in on the jukebox business.

A staff investigator testified Friday that Chicago jukebox operators have to pay more than $100,000 a year to maintain peace in the industry and keep from losing the locations for their machines.

One of the witnesses to be called this week is Charles (Chuck) English, described by the committee as owner of the Lormar Co.

Kennedy said English will be questioned, among other things, about testimony that the company last year had distributed counterfeit records to jukebox operators at cutrate prices.

These reproductions carry counterfeit labels of the original record manufacturers, Kennedy said, and no royalty payments are made on them.

COUPLE FINALLY WED

Comedy Of Errors Delays Honeymoon

BUFFALO, N. Y. (AP) — Orchestra leader Alfonso d'Artega of New York City and the former Vita Viviano of St. Louis were honeymooning Saturday—married after a week-long comedy of errors.

The couple was married Friday in St. Anthony's Catholic church. D'Artega has appeared here as a guest conductor with the Buffalo Philharmonic.

The couple arrived on Friday the 13th, too late to get into the marriage license bureau.

The state requires blood tests, so another day was lost.

Then a laboratory aide dropped the vial containing Miss Viviano's blood sample. There went another day.

Then they learned of the state's three-day-wait law. Three more days were lost.

Meanwhile, D'Artega found that he needed proof of bachelorhood in order to be married by a priest. But he couldn't find his birth and baptismal certificates.

He flew to New York to get a certificate from a priest who had known him for a long time. But his plane was forced down for a time in Wilkes-Barre, Pa. The priest was out of town for a day, too.

Finally, it occurred to D'Artega and his bride-to-be that there was a Lenten restriction on marriages. Besides, the banns had not been published for three weeks. But the sympathetic chancellor of the Buffalo diocese waived the rules.

CONFIRMS PLEDGE

The Shah's announcement confirmed Foreign Minister Ali Ashgar Hakmet's promise last Sunday that Iran will stay solidly in the Western camp and not "neutral and isolationist."

Earlier this year a top - level team of Soviet negotiators came to Tehran to discuss a proposed non - aggression treaty with its smaller neighbor.

After the talks collapsed Moscow angrily complained Iran was bent on maintaining a hostile attitude toward Russia. Radio Moscow launched bitter tirades against Iran, charging its foreign policy was dictated by Washington.

The Kremlin also attacked Iran's membership in the Baghdad Pact and negotiations for a mutual defense treaty with the United States.

Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev personally declared that Iran would have to bear the consequences of a policy which, he said, Russia could not ignore because Iran borders the Soviet Union.

The Shah said in revealing his decision to go ahead with signing the alliance with the United States that his government's foreign policy would remain unchanged as far as Russia is concerned.

Despite the recent propaganda offensive from Moscow Iran will continue an attitude of neighborliness toward Russia, he said.

Ike Flies Home, Asserts Mexico Visit Successful

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Eisenhower returned Saturday from a "very successful" goodwill visit with Mexican President Adolfo Lopez Mateos Acapulco.

He flew here non - stop and passed up a planned weekend of golf at Augusta, Ga., because of cold weather.

White House press secretary James C. Hagerty, who accompanied the President, told reporters Mr. Eisenhower felt it was a "very successful" visit. He said the chief executive returned with "the feeling that he has a friend" in Lopez Mateos and that the two will be "working in close touch" hereafter.

Soon after his plane landed the President drove to Walter Reed Army Hospital to visit Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, who is under treatment for cancer.

Hagerty said Eisenhower's meeting with the Mexican president would make it easier for experts of the two nations to follow

Walker Invested With Presidency

The investiture of Dr. George T. Walker as president of Northeast Louisiana State College here yesterday climaxed a series of ceremonies which included representatives of 92 of the nation's colleges and universities.

Alfred E. Roberts, vice president of the Louisiana State Board of Education, officiated at the investiture in Brown Hall auditorium on the Northeast campus in an impressive ceremony following an academic procession in traditional caps and gowns.

Dr. Lawrence G. Derthick, the United States Commissioner of Education from Washington, D.C., was guest speaker for the occasion. He had headed a delegation which made a study tour of the Soviet Union last spring and included observations of the Russian educational system in his address.

TOP PRIORITY

The speaker pointed to the top priority the Russians are giving education because they believe it to be a "pass key to the economic and cultural conquest of the world." He noted the presence everywhere of a setting of competition in schools farms and factories in Russia to "reach and overreach America."

In contrast, Derthick recalled the United States was the first country in the world to give all of its citizens a free education "Because of our early and continuing dedication to this principal, we have become a strong nation and a prosperous one. Our moral and spiritual values have been nourished and sustained by our educational system, and we must never forget this," the speaker said.

He stressed that while the Russian devotion to education had the same elements of thrift and hard work of frontier days in this coun-

Winnsboro Man Killed In Crash

WINNSBORO (Special)—A head on collision between two cars rounding a curve on U. S. 190 east of Eunice last night instantly killed James Emfinger, 39, of Winnsboro, and Charles Fontenot, 21, Ville Platt, and left an unidentified man critically injured.

Trooper Donald Joubert of State Police Troop K, Opelousas, said Emfinger was headed east and the Fontenot vehicle west when the accident occurred.

Both men were killed instantly and the unidentified man, a passenger in the Fontenot car, was taken to Moosa Memorial Hospital in Eunice, Joubert added.

Bodies of the victims were at Ardoin Funeral Home in Eunice late last night.

Emfinger is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer "Bud" Emfinger, Winnsboro; a brother, Dewey, Winnsboro; a sister, Mrs. Margie Houston, Monroe; two half-brothers, Eli Emfinger, Winnsboro, and Eddie Emfinger, St. Francisville:; a half-sister, Mrs. Aline Roland, Winnsboro, and two children, Marilus and Ruthie, both of Monroe.

Mobilizing Suggested For Crisis

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, Army chief of staff, has suggested to Congress that mobilization of the entire nation might be necessary if the Russians use military force this spring to prevent access to Berlin.

Taylor said in closed-door testimony given Feb. 2 and released Saturday that "we have all the strength that is necessary if we are willing to mobilize it and to do so in time." He appeared before the Senate disarmament subcommittee.

Sen. Russell B. Long (D-La.) asked whether Taylor meant "mobilize the entire nation."

"Yes," the general replied. "You cannot play around in this business unless you have a lot of blue chips in your pocket. This is unlimited poker."

Long had previously asked what would happen if, on expiration of the Soviets' May 27 deadline for getting the West out of Berlin, the United States attempted to send tank-guarded land convoys to Berlin and the Russians tried to stop them.

He suggested that the Soviets might seek a military solution in a "step-by-step approach so that there is never a particular point

Army Bugler Charged With Bank Slaying

FT. BRAGG, N. C. (UPI)—An off-duty Army bugler was arrested Saturday and charged with shooting down a civilian teller who tried to thwart his $13,373 holdup of a branch bank on this Army post.

FBI agents and police found $10,000 of the loot hidden in the attic of the home of the suspect, S-4 Charles Thomas Bradford, 26, of nearby Fayetteville. Bradford waived preliminary hearing on charges of bank robbery and murder, and was held in lieu of $50,000 bond.

ON FURLOUGH

Bradford played the trumpet in the 100-member Third Army Band and was on an 18-day furlough from his post at Ft. McPherson, Atlanta, Ga. Until last September, Bradford was stationed at the Airborne Infantry center here.

The FBI and military authorities said witnesses identified Bradford as the man wearing civilian clothes, seen loitering in the bank office near the Bragg Helicopter

COUPLE FINALLY WED

Comedy Of Errors Delays Honeymoon

BUFFALO, N. Y. (AP) — Orchestra leader Alfonso d'Artega of New York City and the former Vita Viviano of St. Louis were honeymooning Saturday—married after a week-long comedy of eros.

The couple was married Friday in St. Anthony's Catholic church. D'Artega has appeared here as a guest conductor with the Buffalo Philharmonic.

The couple arrived on Friday the 13th, too late to get into the marriage license bureau.

The state requires blood tests, so another day was lost.

Then a laboratory aide dropped the vial containing Miss Viviano's blood sample. There went another day.

Then they learned of the state's three-day-wait law. Three more days were lost.

Meanwhile, D'Artega found that he needed proof of bachelorhood in order to be married by a priest. But he couldn't find his birth and baptismal certificates.

He flew to New York to get a certificate from a priest who had known him for a long time. But his plane was forced down for a time in Wilkes-Barre, Pa. The priest was out of town for a day, too.

Finally, it occurred to D'Artega and his bride-to-be that there was a Lenten restriction on marriages. Besides, the banns had not been published for three weeks. But the sympathetic chancellor of the Buffalo diocese waived the rules.

Soviet Told Of Suicidal War Danger

MOSCOW (UPI) — British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan opened summit talks with Nikita S. Khrushchev Saturday by appealing for greater East - West understanding lest the big powers "muddle" their way into a suicidal war.

The two chiefs of state plunged into the first of a series of discussion on such world problems as Berlin and Germany almost immediately after Macmillan arrived aboard a Comet jetliner from London to a rigidly formal welcome.

Soviet Premier Khrushchev, in jovial mood, said at the airport he looked forward to "useful talks." Macmillan said his 10-day mission was to seek "better understanding" between the world power blocs.

AMPLIFIES REMARKS

At a Kremlin reception later, Macmillan amplified his remark in a speech that ranged generally over major issues and reduced them to the basic fear that a war in the nuclear age could destroy the world.

He reminded the audience that for more than 10 years with only intermittent "thaws," the East and West have been "confronting each other with ever more terrible instruments of destruction."

"I wish with all my heart that this competition would cease," he said.

"It is not that we fear acts of calculated aggression, and I hope that you do not. In modern conditions, such aggresion, between the great powers, at least, would be suicidal folly.

"At the same time it is impossible to hide from ourselves the dangers of a war by miscalcula-

Aid Invited In War On Gangsters

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. John L. McClellan (D-Ark) said Saturday phonograph record manufacturers would be justified in refusing to sell to outfits that supply gangster-ridden jukebox operations.

McClellan, chairman of the Senate Labor-Management Committeel told newsmen that if such action could be termed a boycott, he thinks it would be a legitimate one.

McClellan's comments were prompted by testimony about the operations of the Lormar Distributing Co. of Chicago, described by committee Council Robert F. Kennedy as gangster-run.

The committee plans to explore the company's activities further when it resumes public hearings Tuesday in a widespread investigation of the extent to which mobsters and shady union officials have muscled in on the jukebox business.

A staff investigator testified Friday that Chicago jukebox operators have to pay more than $100,000 a year to maintain peace in the industry and keep from losing the locations for their machines.

One of the witnesses to be called this week is Charles (Chuck) English, described by the committee as owner of the Lormar Co.

Kennedy said English will be questioned, among other things, about testimony that the company last year had distributed counterfeit records to jukebox operators at cutrate prices.

These reproductions carry counterfeit labels of the original record manufacturers, Kennedy said, and no royalty payments are made on them.

try, there was a strong atmosphere of regimentation in the Soviet Union with its emphasis on the state rather than the individual.

MUCH TO LEARN

The U. S. Commissioner indicated there was much we could gain from observations of the Russian educational system without working toward their ends.

"The Russians," he noted, "must turn down five out of the six qualified applicants eager to play the teacher role. Teachers are honored members of society with beginning pay equal to that of other professions. Their classes average about 20 pupils per teacher as against 26 or more in this country and working hours are shorter—teaching is looked upon as a privilege. Here in the most prosperous nation on earth, we began the school year with a shortage of more than 132,000 qualified teachers."

STATISTICS

"Whenever I use a set of statistics about our teacher shortage it is with a feeling of frustration at the failure of all too many of our fellow citizens to grasp their significance—to realize that the good teacher is a gift beyond price to every life that he or she may touch."

Derthick pointed to the tremendous impression progress in the Russian educational system was making on the neutral, "uncommitted" nations which comprise two-thirds of the earth's population.

The speaker stressed the powers of democracy were without the ceiling which is bound to be imposed in the "planned society" of communism. "All we have to do to unleash the power is release the brakes of complacency, and sharpen the values and ideals which have inspired democracy," he declared.

He concluded with congratulations to President Walker and to the college for all it has contributed and "what it will continue to contribute" to the national welfare.

SALUTATIONS

Miss Glenda Bennett, member of the Northeast student council; Wood Sers, president of the college alumni association, Mrs. Maud Merritt Benthrup, librarian at Northeast, and the Hon. F. E. Cole, Louisiana State Senator, delivered addresses of salutation to President Walker on behalf of the students, alumni and faculty at Northeast and the Governor of Louisiana, respectively.

In his remarks prior to formally investing the new president of Northeast with his official powers, Alfred E. Roberts, vice president of the Louisiana State Board of Education, pointed out the "price of quality education is high, but that of mediocrity is higher."

"Reasonable taxation and adequate funds for education may never reach a common level, but aggressive leadership has, I believe, been provided," Roberts said. At this time Roberts installed Walker as president of the Monroe school.

RESPONSE

Walker thanked the people of the area and the students and faculty at the college for their cooperation since he arrived on campus in July. He pointed to the foresight shown by the late T. O. Brown and the late Judge Percy Sandel Sr., in founding the school as a junior college.

He further emphasized the progress the school had made under Dr. C. C. Colvert, the late Dr. S. A. Caldwell, Dr. Rodney Cline and Mr. Lewis C. Slater—all of whom were former administrative heads of the institution.

In surveying possible problems of the future, President Walker listed the pressures of the increasing numbers of college-age youth coming on the scene, the honoring of quality and quantity in educational goals, the need for better salaries for faculty members, better teaching methods and improved curriculums, a wider use of guiding and counseling and the general need for more adequate financing.

He closed by emphasizing education as a means against intellectual and moral deterioration. "Public education at all levels is our first line of defense," Walker concluded.

At a luncheon in the Northeast Student Center following the inauguration ceremonies, official delegates from colleges, universities and learned and professional organizations were introduced.

of arrival on our coasts, or its intensity, and of its geographical extens."

Local School Revenue Hike Is Proposed

much to be proud of in its school system:

1. Louisiana outranks all Southern states except Florida, Texas and North Carolina in per cent of teachers with college degrees.

"This may not be the best measure of a teacher's ability," he said, "yet it is the only general measure we have on a nationwide basis."

2. Louisiana average teachers' salaries ranked 21st in the nation last year — above all Southern states except Florida — while the state ranked 37th in per capita income.

3. Louisiana trimmed one-teacher schools from more than 100 in the 1956-57 school year to 33 in 1957-58, where the nationwide average was 734 one-room schools per state, with eight states having over 2,000 one-room schools.

4. Louisiana has an efficient administrative organization, with 67 schools districts compared to a national average of over 1,000 per state.

But he added the state still needed to consolidate many small high schools "Which cannot offer the best in educational opportunities."

And Steimel said the state must "make some decisions on how extensively we intend to subsidize lunches for the children of parents well able to buy their lunches."

Louisiana's costly school lunch program not only provides free lunches for needy, but offers a cut-rate meal for those who can afford to pay, in most parishes.

As a possible solution to the problem of local financing, Angers suggested a number of south Louisiana parishes band together, with legislative permission, and levy a one cent sales tax mainly for schools. He said this could be done in many areas.

C. J. Dugas of the weekly Donaldsonville Chief said he doubted property taxes, chief source of local revenues, could be increased in many areas for schools, "except where they now are at a minimum."

But Steimel said, "It's going to be a lot easier to raise more money at the local level through new taxes than at the state level."

The two-thirds legislative vote required for new or higher taxes has all but stymied any attempts to raise more state revenues.

Despite a host of efforts in the 1956 and 1958 Legislatures, only one major tax was passed, a one cent hike in the natural gas gathering tax dedicated to teacher pay. Even this tax was trimmed in half in a compromise move to drum up needed votes.

In its study, PAR said, "It is helpful in making plans for financing public schools to examine the growth of school revenues in recent years and the reason for this growth."

The best management possible will be required to stretch state and local school funds, PAR said.

High point of the PAR study:

1. In terms of constant dollars in the postwar period, school operating revenues rose 204 per cent compared with a 146 per cent increase in revenues for other state functions and a 58 per cent increase in personal incomes.

2. School costs have climbed because of a 48 per cent jump in enrollment over the 11-year period, inflation cut dollar power, teachers' salaries have nearly doubled.

3. Louisiana ranks third in the nation in its effort to support schools of $4.42 for every $100 of personal income in the 1957-58 fiscal year.

4. Louisiana ranks second in the nation in its effort at the state level to support education, 39th in its effort at the local level.

5. Local school systems have available taxing authority to raise an additional 20 million dollars a year for school support.

"Our people say that if they cut us off from Berlin, we are not going to take it lying down but that we will try to move through, that we will send a tank division through to Berlin," Long said.

Military leaders are known to have suggested land convoys if necessary. They have contended that an airlift could not again supply Berlin's needs as in 1948-49.

Taylor, in answer to further questions, said a scheduled reduction from 15 to 14 regular Army divisions would not help provide "blue chips." But he added: "We have a mobilization base, in proved reserves and so on."

The army chief placed the strength of the National Guard at 27 divisions and said there are 10 proved reserve divisions.

Taylor appeared with Gen. Thomas D. White, Air Force Chief of staff, to testify on the effects of banning nuclear weapons tests.

The press secretary also disclosed that Eisenhower told Lopez Mateos at the Acapulco airport last night that he hoped the Mexican leader could visit the United States.

Eisenhower and Lopez Mateos wound up their meeting Friday night by agreeing to go ahead with construction of a 100-million-dollar dam on the Rio Grande.

tion or by middle. That indeed would be a calamity for us all."

Macmillan, making the first summit contact between East and West since the Soviets set May 27 as the deadline for allied withdrawal from West Berlin, stressed the need for "some basis of confidence."

To Khrushchev's economic challenge to the West, he declared that it is this kind of competition on which Britain and the other Western powers thrive.

"We prefer it to other sorts," he said.

"If we could channel all the energies which at present are devoted to the manufacture of armaments, both conventional and nuclear, what an upsurge there might be in the scale of production for peaceful purposes.

"I do not pretend that this is an easy task, but let us attempt it nevertheless. Meanwhile let us and the other governments concerned try to avoid hazardous courses," he concluded.

It was on this basis that Macmillan was expected to thrash out details of the cold war quarrels with Khrushchev.

The Soviet press and radio played up his visit as a chance for a cold war thaw. The press printed pictures of Macmillan. Radio Moscow broadcast live to the nation his introductory remarks at Vnukovo Airport.

The weather itself was in "thaw." It was a relatively mild 44 degrees in usually freezing Moscow as Macmillan stepped from the airliner at 3 p.m. (7 a.m. (EST) to be welcomed with a handshake from Khrushchev.

The British prime minister donned a Russian hat and reviewed a 200-man honor guard which goose-stepped in review.

There was none of the popular excitement such as was evident when Indian Premier Jawaharlal Nehru visited Moscow. About 50 airport travelers looked curiously through a lounge window.

The 75 newsmen and photographers, who viewed the scene from an enclosure noticed that the formalities were carried out with rigid correctness—save for the beaming smile of Khrushchev who doffed his hat and told Macmillan:

The 11 crewmen were either transferred to rescue ships or picked up after jumping into the icy waters, the station said. The skipper of the ship fell into the sea and was reported missing.

"Reasonable taxation and adequate funds for education may never reach a common level, but aggressive leadership has, I believe, been provided," Roberts said. At this time Roberts installed Walker as president of the Monroe school.

RESPONSE

Walker thanked the people of the area and the students and faculty at the college for their cooperation since he arrived on campus in July. He pointed to the foresight shown by the late T. O. Brown and the late Judge Percy Sandel Sr., in founding the school as a junior college.

He further emphasized the progress the school had made under Dr. C. C. Colvert, the late Dr. S. A. Caldwell, Dr. Rodney Cline and Mr. Lewis C. Slater—all of whom were former administrative heads of the institution.

In surveying possible problems of the future, President Walker listed the pressures of the increasing numbers of college-age youth coming on the scene, the honoring of quality and quantity in educational goals, the need for better salaries for faculty members, better teaching methods and improved curriculums, a wider use of guiding and counseling and the general need for more adequate financing.

He closed by emphasizing education as a means against intellectual and moral deterioration. "Public education at all levels is our first line of defense," Walker concluded.

At a luncheon in the Northeast Student Center following the inauguration ceremonies, official delegates from colleges, universities and learned and professional organizations were introduced.

Dr. W. R. Hammond, dean of liberal arts at the college, presided at the inauguration ceremonies, and L. L. Price, head of the department of agriculture and home economics, presided at the luncheon. The college concert choir under the direction of Davis Bingham, Mrs. Florence Z. Albritton and Miss Beth Brown, organists, provided music during the occasions.

Reichelderfer said some people "think we are stretching our imaginations when we speculate that satellites also may detect tornadoes."

But it is well within the realm of scientific possibility, he said, that tornado clouds are in some way peculiar enough in appearance that a view from above could distinguish them from thunderstorms.

Local School Revenue Hike Is Proposed

much to be proud of in its school system:

1. Louisiana outranks all Southern states except Florida, Texas and North Carolina in per cent of teachers with college degrees.

"This may not be the best measure of a teacher's ability," he said, "yet it is the only general measure we have on a nationwide basis."

2. Louisiana average teachers' salaries ranked 21st in the nation last year — above all Southern states except Florida — while the state ranked 37th in per capita income.

3. Louisiana trimmed one-teacher schools from more than 100 in the 1956-57 school year to 33 in 1957-58, where the nationwide average was 734 one-room schools per state, with eight states having over 2,000 one-room schools.

4. Louisiana has an efficient administrative organization, with 67 schools districts compared to a national average of over 1,000 per state.

But he added the state still needed to consolidate many small high schools "Which cannot offer the best in educational opportunities."

And Steimel said the state must "make some decisions on how extensively we intend to subsidize lunches for the children of parents well able to buy their lunches."

Louisiana's costly school lunch program not only provides free lunches for needy, but offers a cut-rate meal for those who can afford to pay, in most parishes.

As a possible solution to the problem of local financing, Angers suggested a number of south Louisiana parishes band together, with legislative permission, and levy a one cent sales tax mainly for schools. He said this could be done in many areas.

C. J. Dugas of the weekly Donaldsonville Chief said he doubted property taxes, chief source of local revenues, could be increased in many areas for schools, "except where they now are at a minimum."

But Steimel said, "It's going to be a lot easier to raise more money at the local level through new taxes than at the state level."

The two-thirds legislative vote required for new or higher taxes has all but stymied any attempts to raise more state revenues.

Despite a host of efforts in the 1956 and 1958 Legislatures, only one major tax was passed, a one cent hike in the natural gas gathering tax dedicated to teacher pay. Even this tax was trimmed in half in a compromise move to drum up needed votes.

In its study, PAR said, "It is helpful in making plans for financing public schools to examine the growth of school revenues in recent years and the reason for this growth."

The best management possible will be required to stretch state and local school funds, PAR said.

High point of the PAR study:

1. In terms of constant dollars in the postwar period, school operating revenues rose 204 per cent compared with a 146 per cent increase in revenues for other state functions and a 58 per cent increase in personal incomes.

2. School costs have climbed because of a 48 per cent jump in enrollment over the 11-year period, inflation cut dollar power, teachers' salaries have nearly doubled

3. Louisiana ranks third in the nation in its effort to support schools of $4.42 for every $100 of personal income in the 1957-58 fiscal year.

4. Louisiana ranks second in the nation in its effort at the state level to support education, 39th in its effort at the local level.

5. Local school systems have available taxing authority to raise an additional 20 million dollars a year for school support.

Military leaders are known to have suggested land convoys if necessary. They have contended that an airlift could not again supply Berlin's needs as in 1948-49.

Taylor, in answer to further questions, said a scheduled reduction from 15 to 14 regular Army divisions would not help provide "blue chips." But he added: "We have a mobilization base, in proved reserves and so on."

The army chief placed the strength of the National Guard at 27 divisions and said there are 10 proved reserve divisions.

Arson Attempt At Church Fails

HATTIESBURG, Miss. (UPI)—Attempted arson was discovered Saturday at a Methodist church here and fire chief Ed Barksdale said it "fit the pattern" of other arson attempts here recently.

A soft drink vendor went to the church to fill a drink machine in the basement and discovered that someone had placed a cardboard box next to an inside door to the kitchen and set the box afire.

Soviet Told Of Suicidal War Danger

tion or by middle. That indeed would be a calamity for us all."

Macmillan, making the first summit contact between East and West since the Soviets set May 27 as the deadline for allied withdrawal from West Berlin, stressed the need for "some basis of confidence."

To Khrushchev's economic challenge to the West, he declared that it is this kind of competition on which Britain and the other Western powers thrive.

"We prefer it to other sorts," he said.

"If we could channel all the energies which at present are devoted to the manufacture of armaments, both conventional and nuclear, what an upsurge there might be in the scale of production for peaceful purposes.

"I do not pretend that this is an easy task, but let us attempt it nevertheless. Meanwhile let us and the other governments concerned try to avoid hazardous courses," he concluded.

It was on this basis that Macmillan was expected to thrash out details of the cold war quarrels with Khrushchev.

The Soviet press and radio played up his visit as a chance for a cold war thaw. The press printed pictures of Macmillan. Radio Moscow broadcast live to the nation his introductory remarks at Vnukovo Airport.

The weather itself was in "thaw." It was a relatively mild 44 degrees in usually freezing Moscow as Macmillan stepped from the airliner at 3 p.m. (7 a.m. (EST) to be welcomed with a handshake from Khrushchev.

The British prime minister donned a Russian hat and reviewed a 200-man honor guard which goose-stepped in review.

There was none of the popular excitement such as was evident when Indian Premier Jawaharlal Nehru visited Moscow. About 50 airport travelers looked curiously through a lounge window.

The 75 newsmen and photographers, who viewed the scene from an enclosure noticed that the formalities were carried out with rigid correctness—save for the beaming smile of Khrushchev who doffed his hat and told Macmillan:

Freighter Sinks, Captain Drowns

ESBJERG, Denmark (UPI) —A small German freighter sank in choppy seas off Jutland Saturday, but all aboard except the captain were saved, Danish officials reported.

The coastal station at Blaavand said the 742-ton vessel Helene B. Schupp went down off the west coast of Jutland after being buffeted by strong winds and high waves.

The 11 crewmen were either transferred to rescue ships or picked up after jumping into the icy waters, the station said. The skipper of the ship fell into the sea and was reported missing.

Disaster Hospital Equipment Here

Complete equipment for a 200-bed emergency and disaster hospital, valued at approximately $50,000, was received Friday from the Louisiana Civil Defense Agency and is being housed in the St. Francis Hospital Nursing School on Oak Street.

W. G. Higginbotham and Don Luttrell came to Monroe last fall to explain details of the plan to St. Francis Hospital and other Northeast Louisiana medical centers.

Higginbotham of Baton Rouge, is state civil defense liaison representative, and Luttrell, of New Orleans is state property officer.

Following the fall meeting, Higginbotham returned to Monroe in December to have the contracts signed.

Mother Marie Gertrude, administrator of St. Francis Hospital, is custodian of the emergency facilities. Contracts were signed by her, as administrator; Mayor W. L. "Jack" Howard, representing the City of Monroe, and Maj. Gen. Raymond E. Hufft, representing the federal government. Hufft is director for the New Orleans state civil defense agency.

AVAILABLE

A total of 23 such emergency hospitals are available for Louisiana, with 4 or 5 expected to be placed in the Northeast area.

Among the items included in the emergency unit, which could be set up ready to receive patients within a matter of hours, are canvas cots, towels, blankets, heating pads, operating gowns pillows, sheets, gasoline lanterns, pitchers basins, a field operating table with drapes, oxygen, sterilizers, ether, nitrous oxide, three laboratory chests, each with all necessary equipment for laboratory tests, a gasoline generator, water pumping unit and water storage tank.

Transformer X-ray apparatus is also included in the package, and a processing machine with radiographic paper. Ample supplies of bandages, splints, and adhesive tape are available, along with text books on treatment of fractures and books for clinical records.

Probe Launched In Embezzlement Of Over $80,000

ATLANTA (UPI)—The highest state authorities, on orders of Gov. Ernest Vandiver, began an investigation Saturday of an alleged embezzlement by a Revenue Department official amounting to more than $80,000.

It was the latest in a series of large scale embezzlement charges laid at the door of the state's huge money collecting agency. It was headed by T.V. Williams until Vandiver's administration put Dixon Oxford in his place.

Vandiver advised Atty. Gen. Eugene Cook in communications made public Saturday that an audit had uncovered alleged large scale misappropriation of funds by H. E. Jones, director of the Motor Fuel Tax Unit in the previous administration.

Jones was not available for comment.

Vandiver directed Cook to start an immediate investigation and that "the offender or offenders be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law." Cook said he would comply at once.

In a report by auditors, Oxford was advised that Jones set up bank accounts for three dummy truck lines and through them embezzled at least $80,573.97.

American Labor Leaders Reject Soviet Invitation

SAN JUAN, P.R. (UPI)— The AFL-CIO Executive Counsil Saturday bluntly rejected Russian overtues for visits by American labor leaders to the Soviet Union.

The council unanimously approved a statement branding Soviet trade unions as puppets of the Communist Party.

The statement said the United States' top union leaders oppose sending delegations to any nations which outlaw free trade unions or penalize workers for union activity.

The statement was a direct answer to Soviet Deputy Premier Anastas Mikoyan, who repeated invitations to American labor officials to visit his homeland durisg his recent U.S. tour.

AFL-CIO Vice President James B. Carey had lunch with Mikoyan at his home with four other union vice presidents. United Automobile Workers Union President Walter Reuther latei reported the luncheon discussion was a bare-knuckled verbal slugfest. The main topic of conversation was the proposed sending of union delegations to Russia.

Mikoyan said on returning home that American capitalist businessmen were more amiable than the AFL-CIO leaders.

SOVIETS TO SEE U.S. SHOW

Fair May Increase Thaw In Cold War

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ironically but happily, at a time when the cold war looks more frigid than over, a slight thaw can be detected at the edges.

For Harold C. McClellan, a man who almost qualifies as a Moscow commuter, is in town with a progress report on the national fair this country will stage in the Soviet Union this summer.

"These fellows," says McClellan of the Soviets, "are doing just about everything you can imagine to be helpful."

True, it hasn't always been this way. When these exhibits were first planned—the Soviet companion show will start in New York June 28—it took five long, plodding weeks to agree on details.

"Now we've developed mutual confidence," McClellan said, "and it's justified. It's justified."

An example of what he's talking about: McClellan left for Moscow Saturday, made substantial changes in planning, and was back here in time for lunch Wednesday.

In private life he's a Los Angeles paint maker who once served as president of the National Assn. of Manufacturers.

He put in a couple of years, 1955 to 1957, as assistant secretary of commerce for international affairs. And when the American exhibit was planned for Moscow, he came back to be its general manager.

Unlike the Brussels Fair of last year, where many nations showed their wares, this will be exclusively a U. S. show, the first in the history of the Soviet Union.

It's an attempt to show the people how the American people live.

Naturally all this takes money, somewhere around four million dollars.

"Maybe I'm overly optimistic, but I'm hoping we can put on something, without political overtones, that may bring some easing of the tension," McClellan said.

If you wonder how a man prepares himself to negotiate with the Soviets, here's the McClellan plan: He helped with the bargaining that moved the Brooklyn Dodgers baseball team to Los Angeles.

An old redhot fan, eh?

"Haven't seen a game in 10 years," he said, "and I saw the Dodgers only three times last season."

Unless Moscow suddenly gets a big league franchise, he won't be seeing any this year either.

Nasser Says Russian Aid To Continue

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI)—President Gamal Abdel Nasser said Saturday Russia has pledged to continue support of the United Arab Republic despite "ideological differences" between them.

In a speech at a rally marking the first anniversary of the merger of Syria and Egypt into the UAR, Nasser said he received the pledge in a letter Friday from Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev.

Nasser has been cracking down on Egyptian and Syrian Communists. A number of them have been rounded up since Nasser attacked local Reds in a speech last December at Port Said. The crackdown did not please the Russians but Nasser has warned he would brook no interference in UAR internal affairs.

There have been reports recently of a cooling in Soviet-UAR relations, while relations between Nasser and the West have been warming somewhat.

The President told a cheering crowd that Russia promised its backing because of the UAR's struggle for independence and the realizations of the Middle East country's dreams.

Nasser spoke after conferring for 30 minutes in the presidential palace with visiting President Tito of Yugoslavia, whose independent brand of communism has angered the Soviet. Tito is touring Afro-Asian countries.

Despite increased friction between local Communists and the Nasser government — which brought criticism at the Moscow party congress this month-Russia recently agreed to a 100 million dollar aid program to help Nasser start work on his cherished goal of a high dam across the Nile at Aswan-the same project which helped trigger the Suez crisis in 1956 when the Western powers backed out of a plan of aid for the dam.

Naturally all this takes money, somewhere around four million dollars.

"Maybe I'm overly optimistic, but I'm hoping we can put on something, without political overtones, that may bring some easing of the tension," McClellan said.

If you wonder how a man prepares himself to negotiate with the Soviets, here's the McClellan plan: He helped with the bargaining that moved the Brooklyn Dodgers baseball team to Los Angeles.

An old redhot fan, eh?

"Haven't seen a game in 10 years," he said, "and I saw the Dodgers only three times last season."

Unless Moscow suddenly gets a big league franchise, he won't be seeing any this year either.

Nasser Says Russian Aid To Continue

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI)—President Gamal Abdel Nasser said Saturday Russia has pledged to continue support of the United Arab Republic despite "ideological differences" between them.

In a speech at a rally marking the first anniversary of the merger of Syria and Egypt into the UAR, Nasser said he received the pledge in a letter Friday from Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev.

Nasser has been cracking down on Egyptian and Syrian Communists. A number of them have been rounded up since Nasser attacked local Reds in a speech last December at Port Said. The crackdown did not please the Russians but Nasser has warned he would brook no interference in UAR internal affairs.

There have been reports recently of a cooling in Soviet-UAR relations, while relations between Nasser and the West have been warming somewhat.

The President told a cheering crowd that Russia promised its backing because of the UAR's struggle for independence and the realizations of the Middle East country's dreams.

Nasser spoke after conferring for 30 minutes in the presidential palace with visiting President Tito of Yugoslavia, whose independent brand of communism has angered the Soviet. Tito is touring Afro-Asian countries.

Despite increased friction between local Communists and the Nasser government — which brought criticism at the Moscow party congress this month-Russia recently agreed to a 100 million dollar aid program to help Nasser start work on his cherished goal of a high dam across the Nile at Aswan-the same project which helped trigger the Suez crisis in 1956 when the Western powers backed out of a plan of aid for the dam.

Schools, Welfare

Interesting facts concering money spent in Louisiana on schools and welfare were discussed recently by Paul T. Hendershot, head of the economics department at Louisiana Polytechnic Institute at Ruston, who appeared before the Southwestern Economics Forum at Lafayette. The educator flailed some businessmen who "maintain a complacent attitude about enormous sums spent on public welfare" while directing criticism at Louisiana's educational system. He said:

"It is a real tragedy, in an era of substantial prosperity, to be so pinch-penny and niggardly in our attitude toward secondary and college education when we, year by year, see our children and young adults increasing our educational enrollments by leaps and bounds.

"It is most serious to contemplate the fact that our problems of welfare will never be solved by merely passing out more money in public welfare benefits, instead of educating our people to be economically productive, capable of earning a living and able to take care of themselves.

"It is rank stupidity, in terms of morality and economics, to continue public support of profligate women who bring 10 to 15 illegitimate children into the world, while at the same time denying adequate support of our educational system on all levels.

"The relief of the destitute must command the most unstinted praise but welfare expenditures strike at the symptom and not at the cause of the cancer that gnaws at the very heart of our economic systems.

"We need to support vigorously the serious efforts to enhance our educational potentials, because we can defeat Communism more readily in the classroom than in the pool room. We need to support, with increased taxes, if necessary, the more than doubled enrollment that will be in our colleges in Louisiana by 1971."

Stating his hopes that the system of free enterprise and free public education can survive, he said:

"If they do not survive, I would venture to forecast that they will be destroyed by businessmen, statisticians and educators. Free enterprise might well be destroyed by our zealous uninformed American businessmen and free public education might well be dealt a death blow by the same businessman and his research statisticians, with a substantial assist from the educator whose 'progressive' idea of 'having fun' in school may cause us to miss the real necessity of mastering the basic three R's of traditional education."

Prof. Hendershot thus appears to sound calls for lower expenditures and less waste in welfare programs, more money and more taxes for schools, more local taxation for school support, more sincerity in education in the schools and more devotion to education by businessmen.

There is considerable logic in what the educator says and, if he sees only the need for more money for the schools and does not see the need for some kind of slow-down in taxation, it undoubtly is because his life is so tightly tied up with school work that he does not know anyone can fail to realize the tremendous importance of education.

There appears to be ample justification for the professor's attack on profligate spending for welfare, particularly for those persons who become eligible for assistance only through their transgressions of the laws of morality and decency.

Louisiana is second highest in the nation in the amount of money it spends per capita for public welfare. For every person in the state, it spends an average of $45.82 annually on welfare. This compares with a national average of $19.94 making the Louisiana expenditure about two and one fourth times as large as the national average. Virginia spends only $6.77 per person.

Prof. Hendershot's charge that Louisiana and its businessmen are "pinch-penny and niggardly in our attitude toward secondary and college education" does not seem to be borne out by figures on amounts spent by this state and others.

A census bureau study revealed that Louisiana spends an average of 86.49 per capita on education against a national average of $83 and an average of $47.34 for the District of Columbia.

Louisiana's state-supported colleges and universities cost $14.70 per citizen in 1957, compared to the average of $11.50 in all states.

Thus we find that in all categories of public education the amount spent in Louisiana per capita is above average.

On the same occasion, Edward J. Steimel of Baton Rouge, executive director of the Public Affairs Research Council, offered suggestions for increasing taxes if the normal increase from existing tax sources is insufficient to meet the needs. He proposed making greater use of local tax resources now authorized or seeking additional authorizations, ending various property tax exemptions and raising state taxes. Mr. Steimel said Louisiana school systems do have substantial resources available to them through local taxation, if they need it and if they desire to use it or can gain support from local property owners in tax elections.

In this connection, it is interesting to note that Louisiana is one of the states in which schools are financed principally from state funds rather than from local funds. In Louisiana 72 per cent of school support comes from state funds and only 28 per cent from local funds. Nebraska schools are supported almost entirely by local funds, 95 per cent coming from that source and only five per cent from state funds. Delaware, on the other hand, gets 83 per cent of its school support from state funds.

This does not mean that either Louisiana or Delaware citizens get off lighter because they pay less local taxes than do those in Nebraska. It merely means that in the two former states most of the taxes are collected by the state, rather than locally, and that, therefore, the state pays a larger proportionate share of school costs.

If Louisiana were to enact local taxes comparable to those in Nebraska and if the citizens continued to pay state taxes at the same rate, our total taxation system would be tremendous.

It is likely that, in spite of everything we can do, for quite a number of years to come, our educational needs will increase at a faster rate than our state income based on the present per capita rate.

This means that we will be compelled to find ways of practicing economies, both in education and school fatalities and standards for other fields.

The only one of these possibilities that is in any way desirable is the lowering of costs and the practicing of economies which will not interfere with the efficiency and the caliber of our educational system.

Certain Changes Faced In U.S. Foreign Policy

Since the announcement last weekend that Secretary of State John Foster Dulles is suffering from a malignancy the statement has been made by high Administration figures that his illness — even his passing from office— will not alter the foreign policy of the United States.

Nothing could be more misleading. Mr. Dulles more than any Secretary of State in this century is the foreign policy of the United States. Certainly in the event of the passing of Mr. Dulles from office the foreign policy of the United States will be different to the extent that his successor is different to Mr. Dulles. And certainly little vigor of management could be expected if the office long remains on the present caretaker basis.

The reason for the extraordinary manner in which the foreign policy of the United States was in his office in Washington and was in his airplane in the upwards of 560,000 miles he traveled by air in the last six years is that President Eisenhower from the first has virtually delegated to Mr. Dulles the power of decision in these important matters.

It is quite certain also that General Eisenhower if and when he names a successor as Secretary of State will place in that man's hands the management of our foreign relations just as firmly as he placed them in Mr. Dulles' hands. That is the nature of the present President.

And since no one has been optimistic enough to venture the opinion that Mr. Dulles would ever go back to his desk full time the making of a new Secretary of State, powerful beyond any in history, seems inevitable. For Mr. Dulles himself was just entering that period of decisive power. The fateful date is May 27 which Russia has set for Berlin is not far away.

Thus no one here doubts that in a period of a little more than three months the United States will face a crisis as serious as the one in Korea eight and a half years ago, probably more serious.

Secretary Dulles was going into that period enjoying a prestige greater than the nation had ever before accorded him. Indeed, it is not too much to say that most of his countrymen had come to regard him almost as an indispensable man in his crisis. Senator Mike Mansfield, Montana, a careful student of foreign affairs came almost to the point of stating that feeling of indispensability a day or two before the seriousness of the illness of the stricken chief Cabinet officer became known.

Senator Mansfield's appraisal was voiced also by Senator John J. Sparkman of Alabama, the 1952 Democratic Vice Presidential nominee. And now, barring a miraculous recovery by Mr. Dulles, a man whose identity is yet unknown to the American people, must make a decision of almost unprecedented possibilities. Thus daily the magnitude of the misfortune the country has suffered by the Dulles' illness becomes more apparent.

The foreign policy of the nation, of course, must be made by the Executive Department of the Government. The role of Congress does not exceed "advice and consent" and sometimes its advice can be embarrassing. That was illustrated in the aforementioned address of the thoughtful Senator Mansfield, assistant Democratic leader of the Senate.

Senator Mansfield proposed a nine - point program to meet the Soviet challenge in Berlin. Some of the formulas quickly were found to have thrown confusion and uncertainty into the ranks of the western nations. The nature of the Mansfield proposals and the way some of them would play into Khrushchev's hands would require more space than is available here. Suffice to say that when Congress attempts to give guidance in foreign policy it runs the risk of doing far more harm than good.

Since by temperament President Eisenhower could not like Woodrow Wilson actually be his own Secretary of State and since a crisis is upon us the whole nation watches the sick room of the Cabinet premier at Walter Reed Hospital. Dulles' illness could not have come at a more delicate and dangerous time.

FAVORS SIGNALS

Wisner, La.

Editor, Monroe Morning World,

I was interested in your editorial this morning concerning light signals at railroad crossings. I am glad you are taking this means of awakening the general public to this need.

I became suddenly aware of it in April, 1955, when my young son and his three high school companions were killed at such a crossing at 7:30 in the evening. Since that time I have saved many clippings of such incidents.

Shortly after our tragedy I went to Baton Rouge to see if the highway department could assist me to get traffic signals at this particular crossing. From my interview with the then head of the highway department, I learned the following facts that I feel the general public schould know.

Neither the highway department nor the public want the Louisiana stop signs obeyed. The public lacks a sense of its need and therefore ignores it. The highway department doesn't want it enforced because it would slow down traffic by 25 per cent. The law therefore protects no one except the railroad, which was actually its purpose in the beginning. It relieves the railroad from responsibility of accidents at railroad crossings.

My theory is that if the state embraces a law, it is obligated to enforce it. If this law were enforced, many lives would be saved. Also, if it were enforced, the public would rebel against it and it would be revoked. The railroads would then take proper precautions at crossings in self - defense.

A representative of a railroad told our lawyer "it took half a million dollars and a train load of whiskey to get this law passed." This may give one a good idea of its real purpose — which is not protection of the public. The people are entitled to better representation in the state legislature than this.

The only remedy I can see for this hazard is an aroused public opinion. Thank you for your effort to arouse it.

PROUD OF HIS RACE

Monroe, La.

Editor, Monroe Morning World

I desire to say, from pride alone, that I am very proud to be a Negro and more so to be a Negro American. But, I get downright ashamed of my fellow men, both by race and country when a few words in our Constitution are taken and misused through interpretation to make the lives of so many people, especially the school children, so miserable.

I fought in Europe in '44 and '45 for what we have accepted, since the Declaration of Independence, as our way of life with great happiness and progress. Again I answered the call to duty to fight in Korea for what Americans believe in, although, I definitely could see no reason for fighting at all except out of loyalty to my country's decision. And now I feel that more is being imposed upon certain peoples' way of life than that which was in Korea, and is in Red China.

And about Gov. Faubus. The man is not against any particular group of people nor is he for any particular group of people. If he is wrong, then thousands of Americans have died in vain while fighting this country's wars, because the larger percentage of American service men that gave their lives died not because of what they understood was right for us or wrong for others, but because of the rights of free men to make free decisions.

So I say: "When American men and women fail to recognize the freedom of mutual choice and associations, we are no longer the Americans that those who gave so much and received on a cold grave believed us to be.

Use Of Electric Battery Keeps Heart Beating

LONDON (UPI) — British doctors succeeded in keeping a 7-year-old girl's heart beating for 11 days with an electric battery, the medical journal Lancet said Saturday.

The girl now is "very well and has no unpleasant symptoms," the Lancet said. The operation was performed 10 weeks ago in Guy's Hospital by Sir Russell Brock and Dr. Donald Ross.

The child was said to have been born with a half-inch wide hole in the wall separating the lower chambers of the heart. To "darn" the cavity, the doctors diverted blood through a robot pumping machine, then stopped the heart for 28 minutes. When the surgery was completed the blood was allowed to flow back through the separated chambers.

Accident-Prone Drivers Blamed

America has 79 million drivers and some 10 million car accidents a year. But here's the eyeopener: One per cent of these drivers, habitual offenders, cause 15 per cent of the accidents.

What is the talkingest town? Maybe New York City. Its eight million residents make 18,700,000 phone calls a day, or more than two for each person.

Hair-raising history: The nobility of ancient Rome had an odd way to cover up baldness. They wore wigs made from the scalps of the daughters of captured chieftains.

Your're wrong if you think most of today's children are worthless. A survey showed that 7 of 10 youngsters in the 8-to-12-year-old bracket help mother dry the dishes, set the table, make beds, and tidy up the house.

Fine arts note: Some 75 per cent of the visitors to the Louvre in Paris go there to see the Mona Lisa. But when the painting was removed for repairs, the empty space on the wall drew more visitors than the lady normally did herself.

It is getting harder all the time to find a barber who'll give your an old - fashioned straight - edged razor shave—too much bother. Some barbers now even have free shave booths in their shops in which customers, after getting a hair cut, can shave themselves for nothing.

Are you superstitious? Do you carry a good luck piece? The National Geographic Society says the best of all lucky charms is the left hind paw from a rabbit that was killed in a graveyard by a cross-eyed person in the dark of the moon. That's why rabbits wear left hind paws — they're lucky.

Here's a helpful hint for ladies who didn't get a Valentine. There is an old belief, girls, that if you drink white wine and roscater, then look at the moon through a silk scarf, you'll see 'he face of your future husband. Warning: This trick works only for maidens. It's no good for divorcees or hopeful widows.

George Washington, lucky at war, wasn't so lucky at cards. He was an inveterate player, but his diaries note he lost at the card table more often than he won.

Odd facts about women: the average woman prefers bath water five degrees warmer than does the average man. A survey in a Cleveland nursing home showed obesity was eight times more frequent among elderly women than elderly men.

Boxing sidelight: heavyweight champ John L. Sullivan never would enter the ring before his opponent did. He believed that "the guy who goes in first goes out last — feet first." Sullivan broke this lifelong rule in his fight with James J. Corbett and lost his title.

CHARLES O. GRIDLEY

No Man In Sight For Dulles' Post

One reason President Eisenhower hopes that his Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, can continue in that capacity, even with his activity greatly curtailed, is that no successor for Dulles has been groomed and there is no man in sight who measures up to the demands of what has become the most exacting office in government, next to the presidency.

Dulles himself is more responsible for the lack of a trained and schooled departmental head to step into his shoes but few of those familiar with the situation, regardless of politics, blame him for that. He has been the one man state department and while there were good men around him who carried out his directions with skill and finesse, none of them is regarded as capable of carrying out the Dulles policies, as he formulated them.

This is a critical and grave situation with a Big Four foreign minister conference approaching, at which Dulles would have taken the lead for the western powers, in the highly important discussion of Germany's future. It may be expected of course that Russia will take every advantage of any uncertainty displayed among the U. S., Britain and France spokesmen which will probably make any decision even more difficult than it already seemed before Dulles' illness.

The question has been jokingly asked here on many occasions whether Eisenhower guides Dulles or vice versa in the murky waters of foreign policy, but the general conviction is that the latter is true. Now, unless Dulles should decide to retire immediately, the American moves at the Big Four meeting and other diplomatic negotiations within the Communist world will be made by the Eisenhower - Dulles combination, with a "leg man" at the scene of the conference, who will be in a tough spot because he must consult Washington at every turn, which is a disadvantage of itself. Prime Minister Harold MacMillan of Great Britain will logically take a more decisive part in the negotiations than if Dulles were there, which may not be to his liking, as he will probably be preparing for a general election campaign at the same time.

The difficulty of filling the top cabinet post, when and if it arises —and the majority opinion here is that it will arise soon — must take into account the fact that a new secretary of state will serve under this administration only until January 20, 1961. That gives the post little attraction for any individual not now in government.

Those mentioned in that classification include Thomas E. Dewey, who told several newspapermen at a conference early in December that he would under no circumstances accept any appointive position in government; and John J. McCloy, former assistant secretary of war and now board chairman of the Chase Manhattan Bank, who is not regarded as more than an outside possibility, if that.

In government are Under Secretary of State Christian Herter, so crippled with arthritis that he cannot walk without crutches; General Alfred M. Gruenther, president of the American Red Cross and close friend of the president, who insiders think a more likely choice than is generally believed; Under Secretary of State for Economic Affairs C. Douglas Dillon; and U. N. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge.

Lodge, as the best informed government official on the United Nations and probably the best informed American, has worked well with Dulles, but his selection would bring some revision in the policies followed by the present secretary. He has had no experience in running the vast state department. Still, he might turn out to be the best of those available.

Dillon, most recent to emerge on the U. S. foreign affairs stage, is at 50 years of age an example of the way an American family can skyrocket from obscurity to fame, fortune, and prestige in three generations. His grandfather was a small merchant in south Texas, but his father, Clarence Dillon became one of the best known and wealthiest investment bankers in the U. S., when he engineered the sale of Dodge Motor Co., in the '20s.

It was said at the time that the son, C. Douglas Dillon was named ambassador to France in 1953 that his father was one of the largest American investors in French property, both real and personal.

But picking a new secretary of state will be one of the harder tasks to confront the president during the remainder of his term in office, and there is no indication that he has yet made a tentative decision.

Daily Devotional

God forbid that I should sin against the Lord in ceasing to pray for you. — I Sam. 12:23.

Prayer is voluntary petition but it is also an attitude. We can sincerely and devoutly be in prayer if we wish and desire good things for others and mentally ask a loving Father that they be provided. This is why we are admonished to "pray without ceasing," and why Paul said to King Agrippa, "I would to God, that not only thou, but also all that hear me this day, were both almost, and altogether such as I am, except these bonds." This desire that others have good things is the real foundation of prayer and church and civic progress.

Our Heavenly Father, help us to love and pray for others as well as for strength and wisdom for ourselves. In Christ's name we ask. Amen.

Certain Changes Faced In U.S. Foreign Policy

Since the announcement last weekend that Secretary of State John Foster Dulles is suffering from a malignancy the statement has been made by high Administration figures that his illness — even his passing from office— will not alter the foreign policy of the United States.

Nothing could be more misleading. Mr. Dulles more than any Secretary of State in this century is the foreign policy of the United States. Certainly in the event of the passing of Mr. Dulles from office the foreign policy of the United States will be different to the extent that his successor is different to Mr. Dulles. And certainly little vigor of management could be expected if the office long remains on the present caretaker basis.

The reason for the extraordinary manner in which the foreign policy of the United States was in his office in Washington and was in his airplane in the upwards of 560,000 miles he traveled by air in the last six years is that President Eisenhower from the first has virtually delegated to Mr. Dulles the power of decision in these important matters.

It is quite certain also that General Eisenhower if and when he names a successor as Secretary of State will place in that man's hands the management of our foreign relations just as firmly as he placed them in Mr. Dulles' hands. That is the nature of the present President.

And since no one has been optimistic enough to venture the opinion that Mr. Dulles would ever go back to his desk full time the making of a new Secretary of State, powerful beyond any in history, seems inevitable. For Mr. Dulles himself was just entering that period of decisive power. The fateful date is May 27 which Russia has set for Berlin is not far-away.

Thus no one here doubts that in a period of a little more than three months the United States will face a crisis as serious as the one in Korea eight and a half years ago, probably more serious.

Secretary Dulles was going into that period enjoying a prestige greater than the nation had ever before accorded him. Indeed, it is not too much to say that most of his countrymen had come to regard him almost as an indispensable man in his crisis. Senator Mike Mansfield, Montana, a careful student of foreign affairs came almost to the point of stating that feeling of indispensability a day or two before the seriousness of the illness of the stricken chief Cabinet officer became known.

Senator Mansfield's appraisal was voiced also by Senator John J. Sparkman of Alabama, the 1952 Democratic Vice Presidential nominee. And now, barring a miraculous recovery by Mr. Dulles, a man whose identity is yet unknown to the American people, must make a decision of almost unprecedented possibilities. Thus daily the magnitude of the misfortune the country has suffered by the Dulles' illness becomes more apparent.

The foreign policy of the nation, of course, must be made by the Executive Department of the Government. The role of Congress does not exceed "advice and consent" and sometimes its advice can be embarrassing. That was illustrated in the aforementioned address of the thoughtful Senator Mansfield, assistant Democratic leader of the Senate.

Senator Mansfield proposed a nine - point program to meet the Soviet challenge in Berlin. Some of the formulas quickly were found to have thrown confusion and uncertainty into the ranks of the western nations. The nature of the Mansfield proposals and the way some of them would play into Khrushchev's hands would require more space than is available here. Suffice to say that when Congress attempts to give guidance in foreign policy it runs the risk of doing far more harm than good.

Since by temperament President Eisenhower could not like Woodrow Wilson actually be his own Secretary of State and since a crisis is upon us the whole nation watches the sick room of the Cabinet premier at Walter Reed Hospital. Dulles' illness could not have come at a more delicate and dangerous time.

FAVORS SIGNALS

Wisner, La.

Editor, Monroe Morning World,

I was interested in your editorial this morning concerning light signals at railroad crossings. I am glad you are taking this means of awakening the general public to this need.

I became suddenly aware of it in April, 1955, when my young son and his three high school companions were killed at such a crossing at 7:30 in the evening. Since that time I have saved many clippings of such incidents.

Shortly after our tragedy I went to Baton Rouge to see if the highway department could assist me to get traffic signals at this particular crossing. From my interview with the then head of the highway department, I learned the following facts that I feel the general public schould know.

Neither the highway department nor the public want the Louisiana stop signs obeyed. The public lacks a sense of its need and therefore ignores it. The highway department doesn't want it enforced because it would slow down traffic by 25 per cent. The law therefore protects no one except the railroad, which was actually its purpose in the beginning. It relieves the railroad from responsibility of accidents at railroad crossings.

My theory is that if the state embraces a law, it is obligated to enforce it. If this law were enforced, many lives would be saved. Also, if it were enforced, the public would rebel against it and it would be revoked. The railroads would then take proper precautions at crossings in self - defense.

A representative of a railroad told our lawyer "it took half a million dollars and a train load of whiskey to get this law passed." This may give one a good idea of its real purpose — which is not protection of the public. The people are entitled to better representation in the state legislature than this.

The only remedy I can see for this hazard is an aroused public opinion. Thank you for your effort to arouse it.

PROUD OF HIS RACE

Monroe, La.

Editor, Monroe Morning World

I desire to say, from pride alone, that I am very proud to be a Negro and more so to be a Negro American. But, I get downright ashamed of my fellow men, both by race and country when a few words in our Constitution are taken and misused through interpretation to make the lives of so many people, especially the school children, so miserable.

I fought in Europe in '44 and '45 for what we have accepted, since the Declaration of Independence, as our way of life with great happiness and progress. Again I answered the call to duty to fight in Korea for what Americans believe in, although, I definitely could see no reason for fighting at all except out of loyalty to my country's decision. And now I feel that more is being imposed upon certain peoples' way of life than that which was in Korea, and is in Red China.

And about Gov. Faubus. The man is not against any particular group of people nor is he for any particular group of people. If he is wrong, then thousands of Americans have died in vain while fighting this country's wars, because the larger percentage of American service men that gave their lives died not because of what they understood was right for us or wrong for others, but because of the rights of free men to make free decisions.

So I say: "When American men and women fail to recognize the freedom of mutual choice and associations, we are no longer the Americans that those who gave so much and received on a cold grave believed us to be.

Use Of Electric Battery Keeps Heart Beating

LONDON (UPI) — British doctors succeeded in keeping a 7-year-old girl's heart beating for 11 days with an electric battery, the medical journal Lancet said Saturday.

The girl now is "very well and has no unpleasant symptoms," the Lancet said. The operation was performed 10 weeks ago in Guy's Hospital by Sir Russell Brock and Dr. Donald Ross.

The child was said to have been born with a half-inch wide hole in the wall separating the lower chambers of the heart. To "darn" the cavity, the doctors diverted blood through a robot pumping machine, then stopped the heart for 28 minutes. When the surgery was completed the blood was allowed to flow back through the separated chambers.

Accident-Prone Drivers Blamed

America has 79 million drivers and some 10 million car accidents a year. But here's the eyeopener: One per cent of these drivers, habitual offenders, cause 15 per cent of the accidents.

What is the talkingest town? Maybe New York City. Its eight million residents make 18,700,000 phone calls a day, or more than two for each person.

It is getting harder all the time to find a barber who'll give your an old - fashioned straight - edged razor shave—too much bother. Some barbers now even have free shave booths in their shops in which customers, after getting a hair cut, can shave themselves for nothing.

Are you superstitious? Do you carry a good luck piece? The National Geographic Society says the best of all lucky charms is the left hind paw from a rabbit that was killed in a graveyard by a cross-eyed person in the dark of the moon. That's why rabbits wear left hind paws — they're lucky.

Here's a helpful hint for ladies who didn't get a Valentine. There is an old belief, girls, that if you drink white wine and roscater, then look at the moon through a silk scarf, you'll see 'he face of your future husband. CHARLES O. GRIDLEY

No Man In Sight For Dulles' Post

One reason President Eisenhower hopes that his Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, can continue in that capacity, even with his activity greatly curtailed, is that no successor for Dulles has been groomed and there is no man in sight who measures up to the demands of what has become the most exacting office in government, next to the presidency.

Dulles himself is more responsible for the lack of a trained and schooled departmental head to step into his shoes but few of those familiar with the situation, regardless of politics, blame him for that. He has been the one man state department and while there were good men around him who carried out his directions with skill and finesse, none of them is regarded as capable of carrying out the Dulles policies, as he formulated them.

This is a critical and grave situation with a Big Four foreign minister conference approaching, at which Dulles would have taken the lead for the western powers, in the highly important discussion of Germany's future. It may be expected of course that Russia will take every advantage of any uncertainty displayed among the U. S., Britain and France spokesmen which will probably make any decision even more difficult than it already seemed before Dulles' illness.

The question has been jokingly asked here on many occasions whether Eisenhower guides Dulles or vice versa in the murky waters of foreign policy, but the general conviction is that the latter is true. Now, unless Dulles should decide to retire immediately, the American moves at the Big Four meeting and other diplomatic negotiations within the Communist world will be made by the Eisenhower - Dulles combination, with a "leg man" at the scene of the conference, who will be in a tough spot because he must consult Washington at every turn, which is a disadvantage of itself. Prime Minister Harold MacMillan of Great Britain will logically take a more decisive part in the negotiations than if Dulles were there, which may not be to his liking, as he will probably be preparing for a general election campaign at the same time.

The difficulty of filling the top cabinet post, when and if it arises —and the majority opinion here is that it will arise soon — must take into account the fact that a new secretary of state will serve under this administration only until January 20, 1961. That gives the post little attraction for any individual not now in government.

Those mentioned in that classification include Thomas E. Dewey, who told several newspapermen at a conference early in December that he would under no circumstances accept any appointive position in government; and John J. McCloy, former assistant secretary of war and now board chairman of the Chase Manhattan Bank, who is not regarded as more than an outside possibility, if that.

In government are Under Secretary of State Christian Herter, so crippled with arthritis that he cannot walk without crutches; General Alfred M. Gruenther, president of the American Red Cross and close friend of the president, who insiders think a more likely choice than is generally believed; Under Secretary of State for Economic Affairs C. Douglas Dillon; and U. N. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge.

Lodge, as the best informed government official on the United Nations and probably the best informed American, has worked well with Dulles, but his selection would bring some revision in the policies followed by the present secretary. He has had no experience in running the vast state department. Still, he might turn out to be the best of those available.

Dillon, most recent to emerge on the U. S. foreign affairs stage, is at 50 years of age an example of the way an American family can skyrocket from obscurity to fame, fortune, and prestige in three generations. His grandfather was a small merchant in south Texas, but his father, Clarence Dillon became one of the best known and wealthiest investment bankers in the U. S., when he engineered the sale of Dodge Motor Co., in the '20s.

It was said at the time that the son, C. Douglas Dillon was named ambassador to France in 1953 that his father was one of the largest American investors in French property, both real and personal.

But picking a new secretary of state will be one of the harder tasks to confront the president during the remainder of his term in office, and there is no indication that he has yet made a tentative decision.

Daily Devotional

God forbid that I should sin against the Lord in ceasing to pray for you. — I Sam. 12:23.

Prayer is voluntary petition but it is also an attitude. We can sincerely and devoutly be in prayer if we wish and desire good things for others and mentally ask a loving Father that they be provided. This is why we are admonished to "pray without ceasing," and why Paul said to King Agrippa, "I would to God, that not only thou, but also all that hear me this day, were both almost, and altogether such as I am, except these bonds." This desire that others have good things is the real foundation of prayer and church and civic progress.

Our Heavenly Father, help us to love and pray for others as well as for strength and wisdom for ourselves. In Christ's name we ask. Amen.

Mr. Heart Title To Judge Harper

By MARY ANNE CORPIN
STAFF WRITER

A silver-haired Louisiana gentleman with varied interest: his work as city judge. . .efforts to help erring youngsters. . .time devoted to Boy Scouts, Red Cross and the local dramatic group. . . six grandchildren, and his hobby of raising camellias. That's "Mr. Heart", a self-made man with a heart "as big as the parish he serves."

Monroe City Judge W. M. Harper was named to the position this week, and Ouachita Parish was immediately thrown into the national spotlight.

Harper's actions will serve as a model for future "Mr. Hearts" in every state.

Working in the newly-created permanent post of coordinator between the Heart Council and individuals who desire to will money to the fund, Judge Harper will talk with lawyers, and advise them how area residents can leave contributions to specific Heart fund projects or research.

Corporating gifts to the Heart Fund and in-plant collections by employees may also be mailed to Mr. Heart, at Post Office Box 166, Monroe.

ORIGINATOR

Mrs. George Forman, chairman of the parish Heart Council and originator of the idea of "Mr. Heart", explains the project in this way:

"Every family has some history of heart trouble — there are so many forms of heart disease. We now have a program to make it easy and simple for persons to leave money to the specific field of Heart research or equipment which they most want to aid."

This is how it works:

Judge Harper discusses the Heart Fund and legal technicalities for willing money to the fund with area lawyers, and they in turn will be able to advise their clients of how to go about including Heart in their wills.

Recognizing that area industries are vitally interested in the causes, prevention and treatment of a disease which strikes many company officials, the Ouachita Heart Council has also delegated Mr. Heart to be the focal point for corporation and in-plant employee contributions.

The nation has its eye on Monroe. The American Heart Association is anxious to copy our blue print of this type of community service," Fund officials point out

A Judge in the Monroe City Court since 1928, Harper modestly commented of his newest undertaking: "Like so many others engaged in this great humanitarian project, I am happy to do what I can to help."

A resident of Monroe since 1912, he was morse train dispatcher with the Missouri-Pacific Railroad for 12 years. In the meantime, he studied law during his spare time from 1918 through 1924, when he was admitted to the Bar and to the practice of law in Louisaina.

Under his leadership and direction, the City Court has been developed and elevated so that today it ranks as one of the leading judicial tribunals of this type in the country.

INTEREST

His intense interest and tireless work with youngsters who appear in the Juvenile Court Division make him a logical recipient of the title "Mr. Heart" — "he certainly has a big heart where these youngsters are concerned", commented Mrs. Forman.

The Court has had juvenile jurisdiction for 21 years. Last year, Harper attended an institute of instruction conducted by the National Association of Judges of Juvenile Jurisdiction.

As a result, he instituted a number of revisions and adjustments in Monroe's juvenile court procedure, which have resulted in "a marked decline in juvenile delinquency in Monroe," according to Police Department officials.

To assist him in this huge task, Harper organized the Juvenile Court Advisory Council, consisting of 25 leading citizens, and the "Good Friends" group of 150 residents who volunteered to do probation work with children brought to the court's notice.

JUDGE W. M. HARPER

For 31 years, Harper has served in various offices and capacities with the Ouachita Valley Council, Boy Scouts of America. In 1937, he was awarded the Silver Beaver award by the national organization of Boy Scouts, climaxing five years as Council president.

Harper is now an Executive Board member of the Council, in addition to serving as a member of the Juvenile Court Advisory Council of Louisiana, the Louisiana Association of Juvenile Court Judges, and the National Association of Juvenile Court Judges.

While taking an active role in all offices and committees of the Rotary Club of Monroe, he has served as club vice-president, president, secretary for 14 years, and Rotary District governor.

Harper helped organize the Red Cross Blood Bank and served as its chairman for several years. He also was elected to various offices and the post of Chapter Chairman of the Ouachita Chapter of the American Red Cross.

Meantime, he donated time as member of the draft board and the Civilian Advisory Council for the U. S. Fourth Army during World War II.

Varied interests show up in Harper's career. He was elected president of the Little Theater of Monroe for two years, and served several terms as a member of the Board of Directors.

And in his recreation time, he devotes a combination of green thumb and love of beauty to raising roses and camellias.

With his wife, Mrs. Ann Walker Harper, a teacher in Plum Street School, he resides at 710 Joseph Street.

That's the profile of the first "Mr. Heart" in the United States.

Probe Slated On Charges Sheriff Lax

UNION SPRINGS, Ala. (UPI)—A grand jury in March will investigate the Bullock County sheriff's department in connection with alleged laxness in prisoner supervision, United Press International learned Saturday.

The jury will convene March 9, and is expected to look into reports that Sheriff D. C. Beckham had permitted prisoners to roam about, to work for private residents, and to work for him.

The escapee, O. P. Hollis, is in jail here, awaiting trial on burglary charges. He allegedly robbed and assaulted R. C. Parker in his home. Parker said he was beaten with a pistol by the Negro.

Beckham denied the charges of laxness of prisoner supervision, and said a few short term prisoners were made trusties and used for trips to the postoffice and other duties.

IN COMEBACK SUCCESS

Brush With Death Haunting Actress

CHICAGO (UPI) — Even in the flush of a comeback success, actress Ruth Roman is haunted by her brush with death on the doomed liner Andrea Doria.

The former Boston school girl, whose career went up and then down in Hollywood, is now swimming in success for her portrayal of the role of Gittel in the Chicago production of the play "Two For the Seesaw."

The William Gibson play is the story of a plucky Brooklyn Jewess with ulcers and a "lost" lawyer from Nebraska who meet over an icebox and get involved in a romance that helps mature them both.

The play is at the new Michael Todd Theater. Next door to the building is a giant poster with the word "Titanic" on it.

"I see it every time I enter or leave the building," Ruth says.

She was aboard the Italian liner with her son Richard, 6, when it collided with the Swedish ship, Stockholm off the Atlantic coast on a hot August day of 1957.

Fifty lives were lost in the sea disaster. Richard Roman was picked out of the ocean by the Stockholm.

His dark-haired, darker -eyed mother was rescued by an emergency vessel and arrived in New York harbor a considerable time before the crippled Stockholm limped in.

"While I was waiting for Richard," Ruth said, "I was really frightened. A disaster had separated us and I didn't know whether my son was hurt or what. It was then I though that such things you read about happening to others, can happen to you."

"All I could think was that I didn't know whether my son was alive or dead."

Richard was alive and unhurt, and Ruth came out of it with nothing more than a broken tooth —"and a few strong memories."

"Seesaw" has only two parts. Veteran Jeffry Lynn is mixed-up Jerry Ryan. Gittel is a very difficult role and Miss Roman has been away from the stage for a long time.

Some have called her performance one of the most successful comebacks in recent years. Ruth doesn't look at it that way.

"I did my first play when I was 13," she said. "It was the stage for me first and then Hollywood. It's no comback. It's a return."

Chicago critics have called her performance "unusually sensitive." Audiences have been hanging in the balance between laughter and tears. The play is next slated for Los Angeles

"It's a strange thing," she said. "I believe some people are what the Spanish call simpatico—the ability to reach out and touch others with your feelings."

CRUEL RUMOR

WARSAW (UPI)—Polish peasants swarmed around the U.S. Consulate for the sixth day in a row Friday hoping for free passage to the United States on the strength of a cruel rumor. U.S. visa officials had to tell 100 poles that there was no truth to the rumors. The United States is not providing free passage to new jobs in the new world.

The Court has had juvenile jurisdiction for 21 years. Last year, Harper attended an institute of instruction conducted by the National Association of Judges of Juvenile Jurisdiction.

As a result, he instituted a number of revisions and adjustments in Monroe's juvenile court procedure, which have resulted in "a marked decline in juvenile delinquency in Monroe," according to Police Department officials.

To assist him in this huge task, Harper organized the Juvenile Court Advisory Council, consisting of 25 leading citizens, and the "Good Friends" group of 150 residents who volunteered to do probation work with children brought to the court's notice.

JUDGE W. M. HARPER

For 31 years, Harper has served in various offices and capacities with the Ouachita Valley Council, Boy Scouts of America. In 1937, he was awarded the Silver Beaver award by the national organization of Boy Scouts, climaxing five years as Council president.

Harper is now an Executive Board member of the Council, in addition to serving as a member of the Juvenile Court Advisory Council of Louisiana, the Louisiana Association of Juvenile Court Judges, and the National Association of Juvenile Court Judges.

While taking an active role in all offices and committees of the Rotary Club of Monroe, he has served as club vice-president, president, secretary for 14 years, and Rotary District governor.

Harper helped organize the Red Cross Blood Bank and served as its chairman for several years. He also was elected to various offices and the post of Chapter Chairman of the Ouachita Chapter of the American Red Cross.

Meantime, he donated time as member of the draft board and the Civilian Advisory Council for the U. S. Fourth Army during World War II.

Varied interests show up in Harper's career. He was elected president of the Little Theater of Monroe for two years, and served several terms as a member of the Board of Directors.

And in his recreation time, he devotes a combination of green thumb and love of beauty to raising roses and camellias.

With his wife, Mrs. Ann Walker Harper, a teacher in Plum Street School, he resides at 710 Joseph Street.

That's the profile of the first "Mr. Heart" in the United States.

Probe Slated On Charges Sheriff Lax

UNION SPRINGS, Ala. (UPI)—A grand jury in March will investigate the Bullock County sheriff's department in connection with alleged laxness in prisoner supervision, United Press International learned Saturday.

The jury will convene March 9, and is expected to look into reports that Sheriff D. C. Beckham had permitted prisoners to roam about, to work for private residents, and to work for him.

The beating and robbery of a 69-year-old Union Springs man here Monday by a Negro escapee from the jail set off the accusations.

The escapee, O. P. Hollis, is in jail here, awaiting trial on burglary charges. He allegedly robbed and assaulted R. C. Parker in his home. Parker said he was beaten with a pistol by the Negro.

Beckham denied the charges of laxness of prisoner supervision, and said a few short term prisoners were made trusties and used for trips to the postoffice and other duties.

IN COMEBACK SUCCESS

Brush With Death Haunting Actress

CHICAGO (UPI) — Even in the flush of a comeback success, actress Ruth Roman is haunted by her brush with death on the doomed liner Andrea Doria.

The former Boston school girl, whose career went up and then down in Hollywood, is now swimming in success for her portrayal of the role of Gittel in the Chicago production of the play "Two For the Seesaw."

The William Gibson play is the story of a plucky Brooklyn Jewess with ulcers and a "lost" lawyer from Nebraska who meet over an icebox and get involved in a romance that helps mature them both.

The play is at the new Michael Todd Theater. Next door to the building is a giant poster with the word "Titanic" on it.

"I see it every time I enter or leave the building," Ruth says.

She was aboard the Italian liner with her son Richard, 6, when it collided with the Swedish ship, Stockholm off the Atlantic coast on a hot August day of 1957.

Fifty lives were lost in the sea disaster. Richard Roman was picked out of the ocean by the Stockholm.

His dark-haired, darker -eyed mother was rescued by an emergency vessel and arrived in New York harbor a considerable time before the crippled Stockholm limped in.

"While I was waiting for Richard," Ruth said, "I was really frightened. A disaster had separated us and I didn't know whether my son was hurt or what. It was then I though that such things you read about happening to others, can happen to you."

"All I could think was that I didn't know whether my son was alive or dead."

Richard was alive and unhurt, and Ruth came out of it with nothing more than a broken tooth —"and a few strong memories."

But memories or not, the standout of the movie "Champion" a few years ago is rocking Chicago theatergoers with her stage ability.

"Seesaw" has only two parts. Veteran Jeffry Lynn is mixed-up Jerry Ryan. Gittel is a very difficult role and Miss Roman has been away from the stage for a long time.

Some have called her performance one of the most successful comebacks in recent years. Ruth doesn't look at it that way.

"I did my first play when I was 13," she said. "It was the stage for me first and then Hollywood. It's no comback. It's a return."

Chicago critics have called her performance "unusually sensitive." Audiences have been hanging in the balance between laughter and tears. The play is next slated for Los Angeles.

"It's a strange thing," she said. "I believe some people are what the Spanish call simpatico—the ability to reach out and touch others with your feelings."

CRUEL RUMOR

WARSAW (UPI)—Polish peasants swarmed around the U.S. Consulate for the sixth day in a row Friday hoping for free passage to the United States on the strength of a cruel rumor. U.S. visa officials had to tell 100 poles that there was no truth to the rumors. The United States is not providing free passage to new jobs in the new world.

GIVES SPIRITUAL AID

'God's Answering Service' Spreads

PADUCAH, Ky. (AP) — "Troubled?" the classified advertisement asked. "Maybe the Bible will help. Dial 3-6271 now."

Harry B. read the ad. After 10 years of marriage and two children, Harry and his wife, Betty, were having difficulties. Harry decided divorce was the only answer.

In desperation he called the number listed in the ad.

"I believe that marriage was saved because of that telephone call," said Carlton Watkins, a Paducah contractor who answered the telephoned plea.

Watkins is a member of "God's Answering Service," a group of Paducahans who are ready at any time of day or night to help persons with spiritual problems.

"Our purpose is primarily evangelistic," Watkins said. "We are interested mostly in winning persons to Christ because we believe that can solve most spiritual problems."

"Two of us went over to see Harry," Watkins said. "We told him we were not marriage counselors. We told him we did know, however, that the basic problem in his marriage was sin. He became a Christian that night. His wife was converted a few nights later.

"Today they have a happy home and they go to church and read the Bible and pray together with their children."

"God's Answering Service" is sponsored by the "Act 4:20 Club" of Margaret Hank Cumberland Presbyterian Church. Members of other churches also belong to the club and the answering service.

The only membership requirement is a belief in acting upon the Biblical verse (Act 4:20) which says:

"For we cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard."

The telephone number is that of a commercial telephone answering service. The telephone service has a list of members of "God's Answering Service." When an operator receives a call, she goes down the list calling members until she reaches one.

The idea of "God's Answering Service" apparently is spreading. Watkins told the story of the service to church laymen of a number of denominations at a meeting in Louisville. Right now, "God's Answering Services" are in operation or are being organized in Louisville, Atlanta, Jacksonville, Fla., and Harrisburg, Ill.

Hayden Lands In Marquesas Island Group

PAPEETE, Tahiti (UPI) — Swashbuckling actor Sterling Hayden who defied a U. S. court order and sailed for the South Seas with his four children last month aboard an ancient schooner has arrived safely in the Marquesas Islands, it was reported Saturday.

Word that Hayden's 90 - foot schooner, The Wanderer, had put in at Taiohae in the Marquesas removed any doubt that the runaway actor had purposely flouted the order barring him from taking his children out of the United States.

Hayden originally planned to sail to Tahiti on a film - making venture when he left San Francisco Bay last Jan. 18, but recent bad weather may have delayed the voyage to this island paradise nearly 1,000 miles south-southeast of the Marquesas.

The actor also planned to do some filming in the Marquesas, which like Tahiti, are French possessions. The Marquesas are 3,600 miles from San Francisco.

The 42 - year - old actor, last seen on U. S. television four months ago in "The Old Man" on Playhouse 90, was awarded custody of his children early last month in a bitter custody fight with his former wife, Mrs. Betty Anne de Noon Hayden.

Mrs. Hayden went to court, however, and got an order forbidding Hayden from taking the children out of the country. Los Angeles Superior Judge Emil Gumpert issued the order on her claim The Wanderer was unfit for a long voyage and the volunteer crew was inexperienced.

But the schooner slipped quietly out of San Francisco Bay on a Sunday morning and it was days later before "hail and farewell" letters were received by families of the crew.

WITH BALLISTIC MISSILE

U.S. To Bolster Bombers' Power

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Air Force is planning to bolster U.S. retaliatory power with a recolutionary ballistic missile that can be fired from bombers, it was disclosed Saturday.

A highly placed official said the first of the high-speed, nuclear-tipped weapons may be ready by late summer 1960.

They will have a range of more than 1,000 miles and will zoom from beneath the wings of the launching bombers.

The project is known as Bold Orion. So far it has been limited to studies and missile launchings by three companies which have demonstrated the feasibility of the radical new weapon.

Authorities revealed that 24 companies participated in an Air Force conference on the weapon this month. They said a choice would be narrowed to not more than a half dozen companies from which Air Secretary James H. Douglas and Chief of Staff Gen. Thomas D. White would select the contractor.

This contract will call for development only, but a production contract will follow quickly.

Officials said the first weapons should be ready in about 18 months.

Officials said the ALBM (air launched ballistic missile) will have these advantages:

It will be a retaliation weapon that can't be knocked out easily. Hence it will vitally strengthen U.S. deterrent power.

It can extend the useful life of present-day bombers by enabling them to fly well away from enemy defenses and launch missiles over any number of courses. The Air Force has about 1,500 B-47 bombers and several hundred B-52's, all candidates for the new missile. The new supersonic B-58 likewise can carry the weapons and, moreover, launch them while traveling faster than sound.

The weapon could confound Russian defenses because it will be in motion constantly and relatively invulnerable compared with big, fixed - base intercontinental ballistic missiles. Also, it can be flown relatively close to targets in emergencies but recalled. An ICBM cannot be stopped, once it is launched.

The ALBM, because of prior research and development on submarine Polaris and other weapons, can be developed quickly and relatively inexpensively.

Feasibility of the ALBM was demonstrated to Air Force satisfaction last year by the Martin Company, Baltimore, Convair Division of General Dynamics Corp., San Diego, and Lockheed Aircraft Corp., Burbank, Calif.

From a B-47, Martin launched a two-stage test missile over the Atlantic missile range from Cape Canaveral, Fla., and from a B-58 traveling well above the speed of sound. The Convair - Lockheed team launched another version over the same range.

A third version of an ALBM, in very early stages, was tested last week at Cape Canaveral by McDonnell Aircraft Corp., St. Louis. This version was said to involve new principles. It will continue under experimentation, regardless of the decision soon to be made on the production weapon.

PROBLEM FOR CITIES

Trend To Suburbia Leaves 'Grey Belts'

NEW YORK (UPI)—The mass move to suburbia is turning vast big city areas into "grey belts" of slums that might be wiped out by the return of middle - income families or government subsidies, the Committee for Economic Development reported Saturday.

The committee, in a study financed by the Ford Foundation and the Rockefeller Brothers Fund, said rapid economic changes have led to deterioration of the nation's great central cities.

There has been a decline in population, jobs, values and economic activities in the older central cities, the report said, and a failure to find new economic functions for the areas between the downtown hearts and the suburbs.

The cores of the cities continue to thrive, the committee reported, while the grey area has developed around it.

The report, written by Dr. Raymond Vernon, director of the New York metropolitan region study, was based almost entirely on studies of New York City. But Vernon said the same proplems exist in 12 other cities: Baltimore, Boston, Buffalo, Chicago, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Detroit, Los Angeles, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, St. Louis and San Francisco.

"The outward movement of people will be matched by an outward movement of jobs," the report said. "Retail trade will follow the populations. Manufacturing and wholesaling establishments will continue to respond to obsolescence by looking for new quarters and by renting in structures in the suburban industrial areas where obsolescence is less advanced. The movement of jobs will reinforce the movement of residences."

Therefore, Vernon wrote, there is likely to be a long-run decline in the area between the heart of a city and its suburbs.

This leaves two possibilities, he said. Either middle-income families may decide to return to the cities in great numbers or the government will move in with subsidies for low-income housing or open-space projects.

"The first possibility would fly in the face of deep-seated historical trends, based on powerful sociological forces," he said. "The latter demands a scale of intervention much larger than any which heretofore has been contemplated."

DAILY DAMAGE $250,000

Chomping Termites Active In Spring

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Spring brings the time of the termite and much distress to home owners.

Termites venture out on colonizing flights to new homes—possibly your home—as the weather turns warm, the National Geographic Society points out. It estimates that in this country alone they chomp up about $250,000 worth of damage a day.

The way to combat the pestiferous creatures, the experts say, is to reduce moisture around the house to a minimum. They thrive in damp, dark wooden places.

So the drier your foundations, timbers and grounds are, the better prepared you are.

The geographic society notes that the termites' fame — or notoriety—is not limited. "They have chewed into Buddhist temples in Japan, infiltrated the Vatican, gnawed at the homes of Americans stationed on Okinawa, reveled in the famed Latin Quarter of Paris, and traveled to the Pacific's lonely Pitcairn Island in an organ destined for a church.

What can the beleaguered householder do?

Soil poisoning is one counterattack, suggests John M. King, assistant director of the Research Institute of the National Association of Home Builders. But the poison usually works only five years or so and then should be renewed.

King also recommends measures to reduce dampness. If you have a pipe that drips, fix it. The same applies to a rainspout which lets water pour onto the ground.

In the case of a crawl - space house, a plastic sheet or aluminum foil cover on the ground beneath the house will prevent water vapor from rising and condensing on the underside of the house, King said.

Even more effective, according to King, are anti-termite measures in the construction of a house. Many builders impregnate timbers of a house with a preservative and with a poisoning solution.

Shields can also be placed on top of the foundation walls, blocking the termites' access to the upper, wooden part of the structure.

Termites avoid daylight. Hence, they gnaw from the inside out—but not all the way out. To check timbers and boards, try poking them with an ice pick. If it slips in easily after breaking through the surface, it's a danger signal.

Another clue to the presence of termites is the mud tunnels they lay over masonry and metal to get at wood. They build the earthen tunnels to carry darkness and dampness with them.

Termites are known as flying ants because some have wings.

DEMOCRATS AGAINST IT

Ike's Civil Rights Job Plank Opposed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Eisenhower's proposal that Congress give statutory authority to his committee for equal job opportunity under government contracts was running into a political cold front Saturday at the Capitol.

Southern Democrats viewed it as the opening wedge for an overall permanent Fair Employment Practices Commission, the long-controversial "FEC."

And Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson, who has his own moderate civil rights program to push, was pictured as unhappy about Eisenhower's suggestion that the government's job anti-discrimination program be formalized. This is one item in Eisenhower's seven - point civil rights program.

First reaction will come in the House, which starts civil rights hearings March 5. Senate hearings get underway March 18.

Sen. Richard B. Russell (D-Ga.), leader of the southern bloc, said the only purpose of the President's request is to "enhance" Vice President Richard Nixon's stand by "advertising the fact" that he heads the present anti-discrimination committee.

Democratic strategists contend that:

Creating the anti-discrimination commission on jobs under government contract would amount to a declaration of legislative approval of the controversial FEPC approach, even if "only by the back door." Congress never has gone this far. Its 1957 civil rights act dealt only with voting rights.

Raising the issue of discrimination in employment "opens another door" on the civil rights front and thus creates another dispute at a time when many leaders hope the racial crisis will quiet down.

Legislating on the job discrimination question would mean annual appropriations and a "fight every year" in House and Senate.

Like Russell, they see no point in giving Nixon any further civil rights buildup. Some even contend that constitutionally Nixon could not serve as the commission's chairman if it became a formal opening body.

Administration spokesmen said the President's request resulted from legal doubts over the power of a Presidentially-created committee. It now gets its money from the President's special funds, at a $200,000 yearly rate.

The old Roosevelt - Truman FEPC died after Congress, under Russell's urging, refused to permit any more money to go into it without legislative sanction. That sanction never was given.

Physicians Give Marshall 50-50 Recovery Chance

FT. BRAGG, N.C. (UPI) — Physicians treating Gen. George C. Marshall for two strokes and pneumonia gave the famed soldier-statesman "a 50-50 chance" for recovery Saturday.

The condition of the 78-year-old World War II chief of staff and postwar secretary of state and defense appeared to be stabilizing, according to Col. George M. Powell, chief of medicine at Womack General Hospital here.

Marshall was hospitalized Jan. 15 after a mild stroke at his winter home at Pinehurst, N.C. He suffered a more severe stroke last Tuesday and his condition was worsened by pneumonia.

Doctors expressed concern that another stroke might occur. But they said he was "progressing as satisfactorily as can be expected." They said the prognosis "still must be guarded."

Marshall spent a more restful night and was more alert Saturday. He was being nourished by fruit juice fed by a feeding pump.

AIRMAN IN COMA

LONDON (UPI) — Airman 2-C Audie Strickland, 20, of Corinth, Miss., who has been in a coma since Jan. 24, may be returned to the United States for treatment, it was reported Friday. Third Air Force officials said Strickland, injured in an automobile accident, would be flown to a military hospital at Wiesbaden, Germany, for examination and might be sent to the United States from there.

They will have a range of more than 1,000 miles and will zoom from beneath the wings of the launching bombers.

The project is known as Bold Orion. So far it has been limited to studies and missile launchings by three companies which have demonstrated the feasibility of the radical new weapon.

Authorities revealed that 24 companies participated in an Air Force conference on the weapon this month. They said a choice would be narrowed to not more than a half dozen companies from which Air Secretary James H. Douglas and Chief of Staff Gen. Thomas D. White would select the contractor.

This contract will call for development only, but a production contract will follow quickly.

Officials said the first weapons should be ready in about 18 months.

Officials said the ALBM (air launched ballistic missile) will have these advantages:

It will be a retaliation weapon that can't be knocked out easily. Hence it will vitally strengthen U.S. deterrent power.

It can extend the useful life of present-day bombers by enabling them to fly well away from enemy defenses and launch missiles over any number of courses. The Air Force has about 1,500 B-47 bombers and several hundred B-52's, all candidates for the new missile. The new supersonic B-58 likewise can carry the weapons and, moreover, launch them while traveling faster than sound.

The weapon could confound Russian defenses because it will be in motion constantly and relatively invulnerable compared with big, fixed - base intercontinental ballistic missiles. Also, it can be flown relatively close to targets in emergencies but recalled. An ICBM cannot be stopped, once it is launched.

The ALBM, because of prior research and development on submarine Polaris and other weapons, can be developed quickly and relatively inexpensively.

Feasibility of the ALBM was demonstrated to Air Force satisfaction last year by the Martin Company, Baltimore, Convair Division of General Dynamics Corp., San Diego,and Lockheed Aircraft Corp., Burbank, Calif.

From a B-47, Martin launched a two-stage test missile over the Atlantic missile range from Cape Canaveral, Fla., and from a B-58 traveling well above the speed of sound. The Convair - Lockheed team launched another version over the same range.

A third version of an ALBM, in very early stages, was tested last week at Cape Canaveral by McDonnell Aircraft Corp., St. Louis. This version was said to involve new principles. It will continue under experimentation, regardless of the decision soon to be made on the production weapon.

PROBLEM FOR CITIES

Trend To Suburbia Leaves 'Grey Belts'

NEW YORK (UPI)—The mass move to suburbia is turning vast big city areas into "grey belts" of slums that might be wiped out by the return of middle - income families or government subsidies, the Committee for Economic Development reported Saturday.

The committee, in a study financed by the Ford Foundation and the Rockefeller Brothers Fund, said rapid economic changes have led to deterioration of the nation's great central cities.

There has been a decline in population, jobs, values and economic activities in the older central cities, the report said, and a failure to find new economic functions for the areas between the downtown hearts and the suburbs.

The cores of the cities continue to thrive, the committee reported, while the grey area has developed around it.

The report, written by Dr. Raymond Vernon, director of the New York metropolitan region study, was based almost entirely on studies of New York City. But Vernon said the same proplems exist in 12 other cities: Baltimore, Boston, Buffalo, Chicago, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Detroit, Los Angeles, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, St. Louis and San Francisco.

"The outward movement of people will be matched by an outward movement of jobs," the report said. "Retail trade will follow the populations. Manufacturing and wholesaling establishments will continue to respond to obsolescence by looking for new quarters and by renting in structures in the suburban industrial areas where obsolescence is less advanced. The movement of jobs will reinforce the movement of residences."

Therefore, Vernon wrote, there is likely to be a long-run decline in the area between the heart of a city and its suburbs.

This leaves two possibilities, he said. Either middle-income families may decide to return to the cities in great numbers or the government will move in with subsidies for low-income housing or open-space projects.

"The first possibility would fly in the face of deep-seated historical trends, based on powerful sociological forces," he said. "The latter demands a scale of intervention much larger than any which heretofore has been contemplated."

DAILY DAMAGE $250,000

Chomping Termites Active In Spring

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Spring brings the time of the termite and much distress to home owners.

Termites venture out on colonizing flights to new homes—possibly your home—as the weather turns warm, the National Geographic Society points out. It estimates that in this country alone they chomp up about $250,000 worth of damage a day.

The way to combat the pestiferous creatures, the experts say, is to reduce moisture around the house to a minimum. They thrive in damp, dark wooden places.

So the drier your foundations, timbers and grounds are, the better prepared you are.

The geographic society notes that the termites' fame — or notoriety—is not limited. "They have chewed into Buddhist temples in Japan, infiltrated the Vatican, gnawed at the homes of Americans stationed on Okinawa, reveled in the famed Latin Quarter of Paris, and traveled to the Pacific's lonely Pitcairn Island in an organ destined for a church.

What can the beleaguered householder do?

Soil poisoning is one counterattack, suggests John M. King, assistant director of the Research Institute of the National Association of Home Builders. But the poison usually works only five years or so and then should be renewed.

King also recommends measures to reduce dampness. If you have a pipe that drips, fix it. The same applies to a rainspout which lets water pour onto the ground.

In the case of a crawl - space house, a plastic sheet or aluminum foil cover on the ground beneath the house will prevent water vapor from rising and condensing on the underside of the house, King said.

Even more effective, according to King, are anti-termite measures in the construction of a house. Many builders impregnate timbers of a house with a preservative and with a poisoning solution.

Shields can also be placed on top of the foundation walls, blocking the termites' access to the upper, wooden part of the structure.

Termites avoid daylight. Hence, they gnaw from the inside out—but not all the way out. To check timbers and boards, try poking them with an ice pick. If it slips in easily after breaking through the surface, it's a danger signal.

Another clue to the presence of termites is the mud tunnels they lay over masonry and metal to get at wood. They build the earthen tunnels to carry darkness and dampness with them.

Termites are known as flying ants because some have wings.

DEMOCRATS AGAINST IT

Ike's Civil Rights Job Plank Opposed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Eisenhower's proposal that Congress give statutory authority to his committee for equal job opportunity under government contracts was running into a political cold front Saturday at the Capitol.

Southern Democrats viewed it as the opening wedge for an overall permanent Fair Employment Practices Commission, the long-controversial "FEC."

And Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson, who has his own moderate civil rights program to push, was pictured as unhappy about Eisenhower's suggestion that the government's job anti-discrimination program be formalized. This is one item in Eisenhower's seven - point civil rights program.

First reaction will come in the House, which starts civil rights hearings March 5. Senate hearings get underway March 18.

Sen. Richard B. Russell (D-Ga.), leader of the southern bloc, said the only purpose of the President's request is to "enhance" Vice President Richard Nixon's stand by "advertising the fact" that he heads the present anti-discrimination committee.

Democratic strategists contend that:

Creating the anti-discrimination commission on jobs under government contract would amount to a declaration of legislative approval of the controversial FEPC approach, even if "only by the back door." Congress never has gone this far. Its 1957 civil rights act dealt only with voting rights.

Raising the issue of discrimination in employement "opens another door" on the civil rights front and thus creates another dispute at a time when many leaders hope the racial crisis will quiet down.

Legislating on the job discrimination question would mean annual appropriations and a "fight every year" in House and Senate.

Like Russell, they see no point in giving Nixon any further civil rights buildup. Some even contend that constitutionally Nixon could not serve as the commission's chairman if it became a formal opening body.

Administration spokesmen said the President's request resulted from legal doubts over the power of a Presidentially-created committee. It now gets its money from the President's special funds, at a $200,000 yearly rate.

The old Roosevelt - Truman FEPC died after Congress, under Russell's urging, refused to permit any more money to go into it without legislative sanction. That sanction never was given.

Physicians Give Marshall 50-50 Recovery Chance

FT. BRAGG, N.C. (UPI) — Physicians treating Gen. George C. Marshall for two strokes and pneumonia gave the famed soldier-statesman "a 50-50 chance" for recovery Saturday.

The condition of the 78-year-old World War II chief of staff and postwar secretary of state and defense appeared to be stabilizing, according to Col. George M. Powell, chief of medicine at Womack General Hospital here.

Marshall was hospitalized Jan. 15 after a mild stroke at his winter home at Pinehurst, N.C. He suffered a more severe stroke last Tuesday and his condition was worsened by pneumonia.

Doctors expressed concern that another stroke might occur. But they said he was "progressing as satisfactorily as can be expected." They said the prognosis "still must be guarded."

Marshall spent a more restful night and was more alert Saturday. He was being nourished by fruit juice fed by a feeding pump.

AIRMAN IN COMA

LONDON (UPI) — Airman 2-C Audie Strickland, 20, of Corinth, Miss., who has been in a coma since Jan. 24, may be returned to the United States for treatment, it was reported Friday. Third Air Force officials said Strickland, injured in an automobile accident, would be flown to a military hospital at Wiesbaden, Germany, for examination and might be sent to the United States from there.

Many Attend Inauguration Session Here

Industrialists, research men and officials of national organizations were among those representing institutions of learning at yesterday's presidential inauguration ceremonies at Northeast Louisiana State College.

Robert P. Fischelis, secretary and general manager of the American Pharmaceutical Association, said he took advantage of the occasion to visit the newly established school of pharmacy at Northeast. "I was very pleased with what I observed here," Fischelis said.

Northeast has one of two schools of pharmacy in the state approved by the American Association. According to Fischelis, there are 76 such schools in the United States with an enrollment of approximately 16,000 students. "At present," Fischelis said, "there is a good balance in the ratio of teachers to students in this particular field." He added there would be a need for more qualified teachers of pharmacy if the numbers of students increased as anticipated.

RESEARCH

David C. Lea, research and development manager for Olin Mathieson Chemical Corporation said he was generally "in accord" with views expressed in speeches of the educators at the day's ceremonies to the effect that education should be centered around the individual rather than any particular specialty. "Even in scientific research, we notice the person with a through education in historical and cultural subjects does a better job than one who has studied what is now considered an over-specialized course," Lea said.

Representing schools from many points in the nation as well as Louisiana industries were R. F. Scott of Southwestern Electric Power Company, Shreveport, who graduated from the University of Maine; Porter A. Williams, vice president of the Wesson Oil and Snowdrift Company of New Orleans., who attended Trinity University in San Antonia, Texas; and Lewis E. Sub Minus Crew Is Being Sought

FLORENCE, Italy (UPI)— Authorities alerted seafarers Saturday to be on the lookout for a "Flying Dutchman" submarine bobbing around without a crew somewhere in the Mediterranean.

The home-made sub, a 30-footer with a snorkel apparatus which was dubbed the Nautilus, broke loose from its moorings on the Arno River after a rainstorm about a month ago. No trace of it has been found.

The submarine, built by Florentine members of the National Association of Skindivers, was modeled after the American atomic sub Nautilus.

Israel Censured In Border Clash Fatal For Two

GAZA (UPI)— The United Nations Israeli-Egyptian mixed Armistice Commission Saturday censured Israel for a border incident last Tuesday in which two Egyptians were killed and one wounded.

The commission, which Israel has boycoted, charged that an Israeli patrol penetrated more than a mile into Egyptian territory south of Kussaima in the Sinai Peninsula and opened fire on a Bedouin camp. A woman and her son were killed and another woman was wounded, the commission said.

Two Sought In Holdup Of Georgia Bank

LITHONIA, Ga. (UPI)—A bandit with an attractive woman accomplice waiting behind the wheel of his getaway car robbed the Peoples Bank of possibly $11,000 shortly before 1 p.m. Saturday.

The two made a clean getaway but later abandoned their car, a green and white 1959 Chevrolet.

Police swarmed to this small DeKalb County farming and industrial town to begin an investigation and search. Agents from the FBI and Georgia Bureau of Investigation also arrived shortly after the holdup.

I. M. Starr, bank president, estimated the haul at between $7,000 and $11,000. He said the loss was fully covered by insurance.

Starr said all but two bank employes—his uncle, J. C. Starr, who is a teller, and Mrs. Emily Gardner, the bookkeeper — were at lunch. One customer was in front of Starr's window, he said, when a white man of about 35 strode up to the window, pushed aside the customer and stuck a pistol in his face.

The frightened teller took a sack th bandit poked at him and scooped into it some of the money in the teller's cage. But the holdup man angrily thrust it back at him and said:

"If you don't want to get yourself killed, fill it up."

Starr then rammed the sack full of the bills nearby — mostly ones, tens and twenties. No money was disturbed in the bank vault.

Many Attend Inauguration Session Here

Industrialists, research men and officials of national organizations were among those representing institutions of learning at yesterday's presidential inauguration ceremonies at Northeast Louisiana State College.

Robert P. Fischelis, secretary and general manager of the American Pharmaceutical Association, said he took advantage of the occasion to visit the newly established school of pharmacy at Northeast. "I was very pleased with what I observed here," Fischelis said.

Northeast has one of two schools of pharmacy in the state approved by the American Association. According to Fischelis, there are 76 such schools in the United States with an enrollment of approximately 16,000 students. "At present," Fischelis said, "there is a good balance in the ratio of teachers to students in this particular field." He added there would be a need for more qualified teachers of pharmacy if the numbers of students increased as anticipated.

RESEARCH

David C. Lea, research and development manager for Olin Mathieson Chemical Corporation said he was generally "in accord" with views expressed in speeches of the educators at the day's ceremonies to the effect that education should be centered around the individual rather than any particular specialty. "Even in scientific research, we notice the person with a through education in historical and cultural subjects does a better job than one who has studied what is now considered an over-specialized course," Lea said.

Representing schools from many points in the nation as well as Louisiana industries were R. F. Scott of Southwestern Electric Power Company, Shreveport, who graduated from the University of Maine; Porter A. Williams, vice president of the Wesson Oil and Snowdrift Company of New Orleans,, who attended Trinity University in San Antonia, Texas; and Lewis E. Fitch, Olin Mathieson Forest Products division of West Monroe, who represented Cornell University.

Sub Minus Crew Is Being Sought

FLORENCE, Italy (UPI)— Authorities alerted seafarers Saturday to be on the lookout for a "Flying Dutchman" submarine bobbing around without a crew somewhere in the Mediterranean.

The home-made sub, a 30-footer with a snorkel apparatus which was dubbed the Nautilus, broke loose from its moorings on the Arno River after a rainstorm about a month ago. No trace of it has been found.

Republicans Are Against Benson Plan

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Republican sources said Saturday that Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson's plan to solve the wheat surplus problem by cutting price supports "is political poison" to nearly half the GOP senators facing re-election campaigns.

Eleven of the Senate's 34 Republicans are up for reelection in 1960. Five—Andrew F. Schoeppel (Kan.), Gordon Allott (Colo.), Carl T. Curtis (Neb.), Karl E. Mundt (S.D.), and Henry C. Dworshak (Ida.)—are from wheat states.

Farmers are growing their 1959 crop with assurance the government will guarantee a support price averaging $1.81 a bushel to all growers who comply with acreage controls.

If Congress approves Benson's plan, the secretary told the Senate Agriculture Committee, the support price in 1960 would drop to about $1.60 per bushel on the same allotted acreage.

His plan calls for dropping controls only after wheat prices reach much lower levels in later years.

Even sources close to Benson concede the administration could not expect many western lawmakers to greet the plan enthusiastically.

Cutting supports in 1960 without expanding acreage would mean less income for wheat growers, one of Benson's associates pointed out. He said "It will be very difficult for Republican congressmen in wheat areas to run with Ezra's picture on their chests."

Khrushchev's Speech Gets West Study

By J. M. ROBERTS
Associated Press News Analyst

Western diplomats are paying particular attention to the sections of Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev's speech on Tuesday in which he demanded recognition of Communist governments in Eastern Europe.

This includes recognition of two Germanys, although Khrushchev doesn't call it that.

He says Communist regimes in East Germany and other Eastern European countries are facts and, in effect, that their existence is not negotiable.

In this connection the Communists of East Germany have recently taken a position which has been widely discussed among all Germans and which has brought sneers from the West German government.

Walter Ulbricht, chief of the Soviet Union's puppet government in East Germany, told his Parliament that "democratization of political life in Germany" is a prerequisite of German confederation. Democratization is a term sometimes used by the Reds instead of communization.

Confederation is a term used by the Communists for reunification of Germany under a system which would preserve Communist institutions in East German, and give the puppets an equal voice with the elected representatives of the West Germans who are in an overpowering majority.

This, the Bonn government says, would give the Reds a lever for infiltration and eventual ouster of the Bonn government in favor of an all-German government patterned on Moscow lines.

Toward this end Ulbricht ignored majority rights for the West Germans and the vast number of East German non-Communists.

West Germans point out that this would not only give the Communists a voice out of all proportion to the number of people

Republicans Are Against Benson Plan

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Republican sources said Saturday that Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson's plan to solve the wheat surplus problem by cutting price supports "is political poison" to nearly half the GOP senators facing re-election campaigns.

Eleven of the Senate's 34 Republicans are up for reelection in 1960. Five—Andrew F. Schoeppel (Kan.), Gordon Allott (Colo.), Carl T. Curtis (Neb.), Karl E. Mundt (S.D.), and Henry C. Dworshak (Ida.)—are from wheat states.

Farmers are growing their 1959 crop with assurance the government will guarantee a support price averaging $1.81 a bushel to all growers who comply with acreage controls.

If Congress approves Benson's plan, the secretary told the Senate Agriculture Committee, the support price in 1960 would drop to about $1.60 per bushel on the same allotted acreage.

His plan calls for dropping controls only after wheat prices reach much lower levels in later years.

Even sources close to Benson concede the administration could not expect many western lawmakers to greet the plan enthusiastically.

Cutting supports in 1960 without expanding acreage would mean less income for wheat growers, one of Benson's associates pointed out. He said "It will be very difficult for Republican congressmen in wheat areas to run with Ezra's picture on their chests."

Khrushchev's Speech Gets West Study

By J. M. ROBERTS
Associated Press News Analyst

Western diplomats are paying particular attention to the sections of Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev's speech on Tuesday in which he demanded recognition of Communist governments in Eastern Europe.

This includes recognition of two Germanys, although Khrushchev doesn't call it that.

He says Communist regimes in East Germany and other Eastern European countries are facts and, in effect, that their existence is not negotiable.

In this connection the Communists of East Germany have recently taken a position which has been widely discussed among all Germans and which has brought sneers from the West German government.

Walter Ulbricht, chief of the Soviet Union's puppet government in East Germany, told his Parliament that "democratization of political life in Germany" is a prerequisite of German confederation. Democratization is a term sometimes used by the Reds instead of communization.

Confederation is a term used by the Communists for reunification of Germany under a system which would preserve Communist institutions in East Germany and give the puppets an equal voice with the elected representatives of the West Germans who are in an overpowering majority.

This, the Bonn government says, would give the Reds a lever for infiltration and eventual ouster of the Bonn government in favor of an all-German government patterned on Moscow lines.

Toward this end Ulbricht ignored majority rights for the West Germans and the vast number of East German non-Communists.

Operator Of Bar Is Fatally Shot In N. O. Robbery

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Two Negro gunmen escaped with several thousand dollars after shooting to death the opeator of a bar-restaurant, the business partner of the victim said Saturday.

Frank Mortillaro said the bandits, one armed with a shotgun and the other with a pistol, scooped the money from two cash registers Friday night after one killed Sam Zuppardo 61, partner and brother-in-law to Mortillaro.

Mortillaro said the robber carrying the shotgun walked behind the bar and when Zuppardo told him to get out, "Without a word he fied the shotgun into Mr. Zuppardo's chest. He must have been about eight feet from him."

After the shooting, the gunmen ran outside and three other Negro accomplices fired a half dozen shots back into the building before fleeing in a station wagon. No one else was hit.

Mortillaro said he usually kept a large sum of money on hand Fridays to cash pay checks in the combination cafe, bar and pool-room catering to Negroes. Two employes were also in the place at the time of the shooting.

COAL SURPLUS GROWS

GENEVA (UPI)—Western Europe's growing coal surplus jumped from 16 to 45 million tons last year, it was reported Friday. Officials of the Economic Commission for Europe said the increase was symptomatic of the European coal industry's ills. These are caused by overproduction and lower demand, experts said.

Operator Of Bar Is Fatally Shot In N. O. Robbery

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Two Negro gunmen escaped with several thousand dollars after shooting to death the opeator of a bar-restaurant, the business partner of the victim said Saturday.

Frank Mortillaro said the bandits, one armed with a shotgun and the other with a pistol, scooped the money from two cash registers Friday night after one killed Sam Zuppardo 61, partner and brother-in-law to Mortillaro.

Mortillaro said the robber carrying the shotgun walked behind the bar and when Zuppardo told him to get out, "Without a word he fied the shotgun into Mr. Zuppardo's chest. He must have been about eight feet from him."

After the shooting, the gunmen ran outside and three other Negro accomplices fired a half dozen shots back into the building before fleeing in a station wagon. No one else was hit.

Mortillaro said he usually kept a large sum of money on hand Fridays to cash pay checks in the combination cafe, bar and poolroom catering to Negroes. Two employes were also in the place at the time of the shooting.

GENEVA (UPI)—Western Europe's growing coal surplus jumped from 16 to 45 million tons last year, it was reported Friday. Equalization Oil Tariff Is Sought

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Swiss cattle and Swedish pocketknives are involved in arguments Texas independent oil operators are using in suport of an equalization tariff as an effective means of settling the dispute over oil imports.

Attorneys for the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Assn. (TIPRO) argue that a tariff can be used to equalize the cost of foreign and domestic crude oil even though it may discriminate against specific countries or areas.

Swiss cattle, Swedish pocketknives and Cuban tobacco are cited as products which have received special consideration when the United States and other countries have imposed tariffs on specific commodities.

President Eisenhower's special cabinet committee on fuels policy is studying revisions for the 18-month-old voluntary program for the curtailment of imports.

TIPRO believes Congress already has delegated to the President sufficient authority to settle the controversy by levying a tariff or other duty. The Texans also argue that the most-favored-nation clauses of international treaties do not prevent the imposition of an equalization tariff.

1. An equalization tariff specifying different rates for different source countries.

2. An equalization tariff specifying different rates for different types and qualities of crude.

3. An excise tax leviable at each refinery in an amount equal to the difference of cost of foreign and domestic crude at that refinery.

"The amount is paid not on the importation but on the use of the oil," TIPRO said. ". . . The most-favored-nation clause therefore would not be applicable to this method."

The most-favored-nation clause prohibits charging the treaty country a higher duty on a commodity than on the identical commodity from some other country.

"But when the commodiries are not identical the same rule does not apply," TIPRO said. "And one type, grade and quality of crude oil is not identical with another grade, type and quality of crude oil. Thus, if a different rate is placed upon each different grade, this would not be inhibited by the most-favored-nation clause even though the practical effect would be to distinguish rate-wise between oils from different companies."

TIPRO said Germany granted preferential treatment to Swiss cattle by setting up a new classification that included only cattle reared at a spot at least 300 meters above sea level and which have at least one month's grazing each year at a spot at least 800 meters above sea level.

The United States, the brief said, excluded Swedish pocketknives from a high duty rate with a special provision for knives which have steel handles ornated or decorated with etchings or gilded designs.

"This special category was so worded as to apply almost exclusively to pocketknives imported from Sweden," the brief said.

TIPRO said some United States exceptions mention countries by name.

A beautiful and impressive wedding ceremony was held on Tuesday, February 10, 1959, at two o'clock in the afternoon in Grace Episcopal Church, uniting in marriage Miss Ann Jarrell, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Cecil Palmer Jarrell, and Elmer Cuthbert Slagle Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Cuthbert Slagle, all of Monroe. Families and very close friends were present.

Large arrangements of stately white Calla Lilies were placed on either side of the Altar Cross, and casting a soft radiance over the scene were candles in seven branched candelabra and standards of Calla Lilies were used on either side of the Chancel steps.

The nuptial vows were exchanged with The Reverend Donald Davies officiating. Mr. LeRoy Anspach filled the church with music of the organ. The selections were "Melodie" and "Caprice" by Matthews, "Bondinage" by Timmings," "Cantilene" by Demearest, "Entreat Me Not To Leave Thee" by Gonoud, and the Hymn," Green Sleeves" was played just before the wedding march. The two traditional wedding marches by Wagner and Mendelssohn were used.

Guests were seated by the two groomsmen, Speed Bancroft, a cousin of the groom, and Palmer Jarrell, the bride's brother. LeRoy Johns, the groom's brother-in-law served as an usher also.

BRIDESMAIDS

Miss Kay Ketelsen of Houston, Texas, the bride's roommate at Newcomb College in New Orleans, served as maid-of-honor. The two bridesmaids were Miss Diana Cutler, and Miss Harriet Buie, a cousin of the bride. Their pale pink, short taffeta dresses had satin midriffs and tiny satin bows over the skirts. Their veil hats were of a matching shade, trimmed with taffeta ribbon. They wore pink satin slippers and short white gloves. Each one carried an old fashioned nose gay of Ophelia Roses edged in bow knots of satin ribbon to match their dresses.

Shortly after the melody of the Bridal Chorus, which heralded the approach of the bride, who was given in marriage by her father, the bridegroom with his best man, George Marion Snellings Jr., entered from the Vestry to take their places before the Altar.

BRIDE

The petite bride was picturesque in a gown of purest silk peau de sois. A panel of exquisite lace edged the portrait neckline and short puffed sleeves. A full skirt flared from the classic, lily slim bodice and gracefully gathered into tufted panniers that curved to the back where a magnificent bustle-like fullness swept into motion. This opulence, misted with simulated pearl and lace flowers visioned the bride in the grand style of a Watteau pastoral. Long white kid gloves and white satin slippers completed her ensemble. The flare of the shorter crisp imported hand-made, Venetian lace wedding veil added to her doll-like appearance. The veil was purchased by Miss Jarrell in Venice, Italy, on her European trip in 1956. She carried a white prayer book covered in old lace with an airy bouquet of valley lilies and phaenopsis orchids misted lightly with maline.

RECEPTION

A white theme was observed in all the details. The stairs were festooned in loops of delicate California smilax caught up with sprays of white stock. In front of the pier mirror in the entrance hall, cupids were holding an arrangement of white Rannunculus. On the Baby Grand piano in the living room an epergne held white Stock, white Iris and white Tulips. These same flowers were used in silver urns in the dining room. The glassed in porch was decorated with sprays of magnolia leaves and handsome white Chrysanthemums. This overlooked the garden with its blooming pink hyncinths, red tulips and camellias, where many of the guests gathered.

Receiving with the bridal couple were their mothers. Mrs. Jarrell was becomingly dressed in a beige and light brown allover lace dress with an empire beige satin cumberbund, round neckline and three quarter sleeves. Two satin roses, one beige, the other brown, were fastened at the waistline. A satin hat in several tones of beige and brown with brown satin slippers and bag completed the costume. Mrs. Slagle was strikingly attired in a beautiful pure silk floral print dress with a blue flowered veil hat with blue shoes and bag in matching shade. They each had corsages of Cymbidium Orchids pinned to their purses.

WEDDING CAKE

The bride's table covered with a lustrous white cloth of great delicacy held an organdy ruffle that touched the floor. On one end was placed the wedding cake whose tiers were ornamented with valley lilies and white roses. Alternating in serving this were Mrs. Hunter Pierson of Alexandria and Mrs. Roy Johns, the two sisters of the groom. A silver coffee service graced the other end of the table and this was presided over by Mrs. John Downes of Houston, Texas, an aunt of the bride, and Mrs. T. O. Bancroft, a cousin of the groom.

BRIDE'S BOOK

The Memory Candle ornamented with Ophelia roses in a hurricane globe stood on a table on the sun porch where Mrs. James F. Wedgeworth of Ruston, an aunt of the bride, asked guests to place their names.

Mrs. Slagle was wearing a light weight suit of a cool light green shade with flecks of white. Her white straw hat held green leaves and veil, with this she wore short white kid gloves and black patent slippers and bag.

The bride graduated from Neville High School in Monroe and was in her Junior year at Newcomb College in New Orleans, where she is a member of Pi Beta Phi Fraternity. The groom graduated from Culver Military Academy in Culver, Indiana, attended Tulane University and received his Bachelor of Arts Degree and Master of Science Degree in Geology from Louisiana State University in Baton Rouge, where he is a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon Fraternity.

A beautiful and impressive wedding ceremony was held on Tuesday, February 10, 1959, at two o'clock in the afternoon in Grace Episcopal Church, uniting in marriage Miss Ann Jarrell, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Cecil Palmer Jarrell, and Elmer Cuthbert Slagle Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Cuthbert Slagle, all of Monroe. Families and very close friends were present.

Large arrangements of stately white Calla Lilies were placed on either side of the Altar Cross, and casting a soft radiance over the scene were candles in seven branched candelabra and standards of Calla Lilies were used on either side of the Chancel steps.

The nuptial vows were exchanged with The Reverend Donald Davies officiating. Mr. LeRoy Anspach filled the church with music of the organ. The selections were "Melodie" and "Caprice" by Matthews, "Bondinage" by Timmings," "Cantilene" by Demearest, "Entreat Me Not To Leave Thee" by Gonoud, and the Hymn," Green Sleeves" was played just before the wedding march. The two traditional wedding marches by Wagner and Mendelssohn were used.

Guests were seated by the two groomsmen, Speed Bancroft, a cousin of the groom, and Palmer Jarrell, the bride's brother. LeRoy Johns, the groom's brother-in-law served as an usher also.

BRIDESMAIDS

Miss Kay Ketelsen of Houston, Texas, the bride's roommate at Newcomb College in New Orleans, served as maid-of-honor. The two bridesmaids were Miss Diana Cutler, and Miss Harriet Buie, a cousin of the bride. Their pale pink, short taffeta dresses had satin midriffs and tiny satin bows over the skirts. Their veil hats were of a matching shade, trimmed with taffeta ribbon. They wore pink satin slippers and short white gloves. Each one carried an old fashioned nose gay of Ophelia Roses edged in bow knots of satin ribbon to match their dresses.

Shortly after the melody of the Bridal Chorus, which heralded the approach of the bride, who was given in marriage by her father, the bridegroom with his best man, George Marion Snellings Jr., entered from the Vestry to take their places before the Altar.

BRIDE

The petite bride was picturesque in a gown of purest silk peau de sois. A panel of exquisite lace edged the portrait neckline and short puffed sleeves. A full skirt flared from the classic, lily slim bodice and gracefully gathered into tufted panniers that curved to the back where a magnificent bustle-like fullness swept into motion. This opulence, misted with simulated pearl and lace flowers visioned the bride in the grand style of a Watteau pastoral. Long white kid gloves and white satin slippers completed her ensemble. The flare of the shorter crisp imported hand-made, Venetian lace wedding veil added to her doll-like appearance. The veil was purchased by Miss Jarrell in Venice, Italy, on her European trip in 1956. She carried a white prayer book covered in old lace with an airy bouquet of valley lilies and phaenopsis orchids misted lightly with maline.

RECEPTION

A white theme was observed in all the details. The stairs were festooned in loops of delicate California smilax caught up with sprays of white stock. In front of the pier mirror in the entrance hall, cupids were holding an arrangement of white Rannunculus. On the Baby Grand piano in the living room an epergne held white Stock, white Iris and white Tulips. These same flowers were used in silver urns in the dining room. The glassed in porch was decorated with sprays of magnolia leaves and handsome white Chrysanthemums. This overlooked the garden with its blooming pink hyncinths, red tulips and camelias, where many of the guests gathered.

Receiving with the bridal couple were their mothers. Mrs. Jarrell was becomingly dressed in a beige and light brown allover lace dress with an empire beige satin cumberbund, round neckline and three quarter sleeves. Two satin roses, one beige, the other brown, were fastened at the waistline. A satin hat in several tones of beige and brown with brown satin slippers and bag completed the costume. Mrs. Slagle was strikingly attired in a beautiful pure silk floral print dress with a blue flowered veil hat with blue shoes and bag in matching shade. They each had corsages of Cymbidium Orchids pinned to their purses.

WEDDING CAKE

The bride's table covered with a lustrous white cloth of great delicacy held an organdy ruffle that touched the floor. On one end was placed the wedding cake whose tiers were ornamented with valley lilies and white roses. Alternating in serving this were Mrs. Hunter Pierson of Alexandria and Mrs. Roy Johns, the two sisters of the groom. A silver coffee service graced the other end of the table and this was presided over by Mrs. John Downes of Houston, Texas, an aunt of the bride, and Mrs. T. O. Bancroft, a cousin of the groom.

BRIDE'S BOOK

The Memory Candle ornamented with Ophelia roses in a hurricane globe stood on a table on the sun porch where Mrs. James F. Wedgeworth of Ruston, an aunt of the bride, asked guests to place their names.

Mrs. Slagle was wearing a light weight suit of a cool light green shade with flecks of white. Her white straw hat held green leaves and veil, with this she wore short white kid gloves and black patent slippers and bag.

The bride graduated from Neville High School in Monroe and was in her Junior year at Newcomb College in New Orleans, where she is a member of Pi Beta Phi Fraternity. The groom graduated from Culver Military Academy in Culver, Indiana, attended Tulane University and received his Bachelor of Arts Degree and Master of Science Degree in Geology from Louisiana State University in Baton Rouge, where he is a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon Fraternity.

BROILED KIDNEY

Split lamb kidneys that are to be broiled and remove fat and membrane with kitchen scissors. Use medium heat for the broiling and have the kidneys about four inches from the source of heat. Brush the kidneys with butter during the cooking and turn to brown both sides.

February is a lovely month for having parties—as what month isn't? We have lots of possibilities — Lincoln's birthday, Valentine's, George Washington's birthday. If the weather is good, the camellias and the quince and the violets are beautiful. And if the weather is bad, how nice to be inside at a party!

Last week end Valentine's day was the thing. All ages and all types of parties celebrated the occasion. The Cosmopolitan Club held their mid-winter dance on Friday night on the Hotel Frances roof. Large cut - outs of hearts were used on the walls, with a king -size Valentine over the bandstand. A local combo played for dancing between the hours of eight and twelve.

Members of Highland Park Country Club attended a Valentine dance at the club on Saturday night. Red carnations with hearts were used in an arrangement in the entrance. Tables were covered with white cloths overlaid with red nylon net and red satin streamers. Large red candles stood on the floor around the bandstand, with a large red heart pierced by an arrow on the wall behind the musicians.

Valentine's day was also the theme of the home supper dance hosted by the BEN COBBS last Saturday night. Valentine cards pinned around a large red heart set the mood. And as each guest obtained one, the Valentines were found to be dance programs, already filled with the name of a partner for each number . . . Supper was served from a buffet table centered with a red rose tree. The forty guests were then se ted at tables for four. Dancing continued throughout the evening . .. The hostess was wearing a dancing dress with a black bodice and a skirt of black lace over ecru crepe.

Other dresses noted at the various dances were PEGGY TOLSON's pink and white polka dot . . . ELEANOR HORTON's white sheath sprinkled with rhinestones . . . and MARIE TOLSON's full-skirted, strapless black taffeta . . HAZEL JOHNSON's sunburst pin and earrings picked up the lovely purple of her satin dress .. . JOEL JOHNSTON's empire - line silk was printed in shades of blue and white .. . A black flower at the back waistline accented DOT WINN's red lace . . . While roses of the material trimmed EARLINE HAYNES' red satin . . . Also in red was VIRGINIA WHITAKER, with dress and shoes of red lace . . . MRS. BILL EYRE wore pink embossed with white flowers and finished with a big pink bow in back . . . LAMY STODDARD's black linen was made with a square neckline and a bell skirt . . . RUTH USSERY wore champagne silk organza designed with folds of the material outlining the wide neckline. A self - flower was placed at the waist above the full, full skirt.

A bridge luncheon was the Valentine entertainment planned by MARGE MULLENS and NELL FAUCETT. The party was held at the Mullens home, which was decorated with spring flowers. In the living room was an arrangement of flowering quince and pink camellias in a black urn. Coffee was served at ten o'clock before the games began. Centering the dining table were narcissus, quince, and camellias . . . In the family room were long stemmed red camellias in a wooden bucket. Five tables for bridge were set up in this room . . . At noon, the hostesses served a plate with chicken with mushroom gravy, "Valentines" of cranberry jelly, asparagus, hot rolls, and heart-shaped congealed avocado salads nesting on grapefruit. Desserts were pink meringues, heart-shaped, of course, filled with ice cream and strawberries . . . Play continued until mid - afternoon, with CHARLOTTE BRIGHT winning high score. MARILYN CLAY won the slam prize, and MAVIS POWELL, the card bingo.

A skating party honored CAROL SALLEY on her seventh birthday last week end, and here, too, the Valentines were the thing. Cupcakes were iced in red, and favors were bags of Valentne candy with a greeting from Carol attached. Forty children attended, with LYNN M'KENZIE and LESLIE ANN FAUCETT winning the Stop - the - Music game.

SANDRA CALLOWAY celebrated her eleventh birthday on Valentine's day with a supper party at home. The dining table was covered with white, overlaid with a Valentine cloth, and centered with a white and red heart-shaped cake. Nosegays of red camellias were used at each end of the table. Surprise balls were the favors at each place. Hamburgers potato chips, and soft drinks were served to twelve boys and girls invited to share the occasion.

JANET VANDERPOOL was hostess at a Valentine dance at home last Saturday night. Twenty sixth - graders attended, and enjoyed an evening of dancing to the hi-fi . . . An arrangement of red camellias and white hearts in a white bowl centered the dining table. Refreshments were punch and heart-shaped Valentine cakes.

Guests of the FRED FUDICKARS, JR., last weekend were MR. and MRS. LEO M'QUEENY and their daughter, MARY JANE, of Kansas City, Missouri. Rosalie and Mrs. M'Queeny were friends at Webster college. The visitors arrived on Friday night, and on Saturday evening the Fudickars hosted a dinner party in their honor at Bayou DeSiard Country club . . . The BOBBY OLIVERS entertained with a family party Sunday night. Barbecued steak and all the trimmings were served to the Fudickars, the McQueenys, the HARRY OLIVERS, and all the children.

In town this weekend with exciting news are the JIM PHILLIPS of Dallas, Texas. They are flying to San Francisco early next week from whence they will sail on the S. S. Lurline for ten days in the Hawaiian Islands . . . They are here to pick up Mildred's mother, LEONORA KELLER, who will be in Dallas with her grandchildren, MIDGE, JIMBO and MICHAEL, while their parents are away.

The JOHN THIBAUTS of Napoleonville were weekend guests of the JACK TERZIAS. Ann and Tiny were roommates at Newcomb. On Sunday morning the Terzias were hosts at a brunch in honor of the visitors. Ann used pink and white flowering quince with peppermint striped camellias in a most interesting arrangement on the buffet. Real breakfast fare of fresh fruit, eggs Benedict, and hot biscuits were served. Guests included other Monroyans who had known the Thibauts at school.

CLAY OAKLEY's fourth birthday was the occasion for a "George Washington" party Tuesday. A large T - shaped table covered with red, white, and blue was set up in the teen age lounge of the Bayou DeSiard country club. Real "cherry trees" of tiny potted plants loaded with maraschino cherries were alternated with miniature hatchets along the length of the table. The cake was iced to represent the American flag . . . A screen was set up at one end of the room, and movies of children's stories shown to the sixty children who attended.

The BILL RILEYS have returned from a trip to Houston. They were gone from last Saturday until Wednesday of this week.

Cousins got together here this week with the visit of MRS. KIRK LINDSAY and MRS. GEORGE RYAN of Baton Rouge, who visited SARA DUCOTE and HAZEL M'GINN. Another cousin is SHIRLEY LUTZ. All five were guests of their aunt, MRS. J. E. HOLMES, SR., and her daughter-in-law, JUNE HOLMES, for lunch on Wednesday. The visitors returned home Thursday.

It's always a pleasure to report new babies. SCOTT LUSK is the second son of the KENT ANDERSONS. He was born on the ninth of February, and young master MARK ANDERSON seems well pleased with his new little brother.

On Tuesday JIM HOLMES celebrated his seventh birthday with a skating party. Prizes were won by MARY MINTZ and LYNN McKENZIE. Candy and blowouts were given as favors. Cupcakes and soft drinks were the refreshments served to about forty - five little guests.

The BOB CARTERS are parents of a third child, VIRGINIA ANN, born February 12. The new arrival is the granddaughter of the E. E. EAVES of West Monroe. She has an older brother, ROB, and sister, JAN.

And while we are talking about the joys of the season, let us not forget this one, here described by Ogden Nash:

In January everything freezes.
We have two children. Both are she'ses.
This is our January rule;
In February the blizzard whirls.
We own a pair of little girls.
Blessings upon of each the head —
The one in school and the one in bed.
March is the month of cringe and bluster
Each of our children has a sister.
They cling together like Hansel and Gretel,
With their noses glued to the benzoin kettle.
April is made of impetuous waters
And doctors looking down throats of daughters.
If we had a son too, and a Samoyed,
We'd have a dog, and a boy, and two girls in bed.

MERINGUE SHELLS

The only ornament she wore was a string of pearls, a gift of the groom. She carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley showered with ribbon and tulle.

Mrs. Hunt, mother of the bridegroom wore an iridescent blue Chantilly lace and taffeta.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the living and dining area of the Hunt's home. White camellias, hyacinths and white candles were used in profusion about the reception rooms.

February is a lovely month for having parties—as what month isn't? We have lots of possibilities — Lincoln's birthday, Valentine's, George Washington's birthday. If the weather is good, the camellias and the quince and the violets are beautiful. And if the weather is bad, how nice to be inside at a party!

Last week end Valentine's day was the thing. All ages and all types of parties celebrated the occasion. The Cosmopolitan Club held their mid-winter dance on Friday night on the Hotel Frances roof. Large cut - outs of hearts were used on the walls, with a king -size Valentine over the bandstand. A local combo played for dancing between the hours of eight and twelve. Members of Highland Park Country Club attended a Valentine dance at the club on Saturday night. Red carnations with hearts were used in an arrangement in the entrance. Tables were covered with white cloths overlaid with red nylon net and red satin streamers. Large red candles stood on the floor around the bandstand, with a large red heart pierced by an arrow on the wall behind the musicians.

Valentine's day was also the theme of the home supper dance hosted by the BEN COBBS last Saturday night. Valentine cards pinned around a large red heart set the mood. And as each guest obtained one, the Valentines were found to be dance programs, already filled with the name of a partner for each number . . . Supper was served from a buffet table centered with a red rose tree. The forty guests were then seated at tables for four. Dancing continued throughout the evening . .. The hostess was wearing a dancing dress with a black bodice and a skirt of black lace over ecru crepe.

Other dresses noted at the various dances were PEGGY TOLSON'S pink and white polka dot . . . ELEANOR HORTON'S white sheath sprinkled with rhinestones . . . and MARIE TOLSON'S full-skirted, strapless black taffeta . . . HAZEL JOHNSON'S sunburst pin and earrings picked up the lovely purple of her satin dress .. . JOEL JOHNSTON'S empire - line silk was printed in shades of blue and white .. . A black flower at the back waistline accented DOT WINN'S red lace . . . While roses of the material trimmed EARLINE HAYNES' red satin . . . Also in red was VIRGINIA WHITAKER, with dress and shoes of red lace . . . MRS. BILL EYRE wore pink embossed with white flowers and finished with a big pink bow in back . . . LAMY STODDARD'S black linen was made with a square neckline and a bell skirt . . . RUTH USSERY wore champagne silk organza designed with folds of the material outlining the wide neckline. A self - flower was placed at the waist above the full, full skirt.

A bridge luncheon was the Valentine entertainment planned by MARGE MULLENS and NELL FAUCETT. The party was held at the Mullens home, which was decorated with spring flowers. In the living room was an arrangement of flowering quince and pink camellias in a black urn. Coffee was served at ten o'clock before the games began. Centering the dining table were narcissus, quince, and camellias . . . In the family room were long stemmed red camellias in a wooden bucket. Five tables for bridge were set up in this room . . . At noon, the hostesses served a plate with chicken with mushroom gravy, "Valentines" of cranberry jelly, asparagus, hot rolls, and heart-shaped congealed avocado salads nesting on grapefruit. Desserts were pink meringues, heart-shaped, of course, filled with ice cream and strawberries . . . Play continued until mid - afternoon, with CHARLOTTE BRIGHT winning high score. MARILYN CLAY won the slam prize, and MAVIS POWELL, the card bingo.

A skating party honored CAROL SALLEY on her seventh birthday last week end, and here, too, the Valentines were the thing. Cupcakes were iced in red, and favors were bags of Valentne candy with a greeting from Carol attached. Forty children attended, with LYNN M'KENZIE and LESLIE ANN FAUCETT winning the Stop - the - Music game.

SANDRA CALLOWAY celebrated her eleventh birthday on Valentine's day with a supper party at home. The dining table was covered with white, overlaid with a Valentine cloth, and centered with a white and red heart-shaped cake. Nosegays of red camellias were used at each end of the table. Surprise balls were the favors at each place. Hamburgers potato chips, and soft drinks were served to twelve boys and girls invited to share the occasion.

JANET VANDERPOOL was hostess at a Valentine dance at home last Saturday night. Twenty sixth - graders attended, and enjoyed an evening of dancing to the hi-fi . . . An arrangement of red camellias and white hearts in a white bowl centered the dining table. Refreshments were punch and heart-shaped Valentine cakes.

Guests of the FRED FUDICKARS, JR., last weekend were MR. and MRS. LEO M'QUEENY and their daughter, MARY JANE, of Kansas City, Missouri. Rosalie and Mrs. M'Queeny were friends at Webster college. The visitors arrived on Friday night, and on Saturday evening the Fudickars hosted a dinner party in their honor at Bayou DeSiard Country club . . . The BOBBY OLIVERS entertained with a family party Sunday night. Barbecued steak and all the trimmings were served to the Fudickars, the McQueenys, the HARRY OLIVERS, and all the children.

In town this weekend with exciting news are the JIM PHILLIPS of Dallas, Texas. They are flying to San Francisco early next week from whence they will sail on the S. S. Lurline for ten days in the Hawaiian Islands . . . They are here to pick up Mildred's mother, LEONORA KELLER, who will be in Dallas with her grandchildren, MIDGE, JIMBO and MICHAEL, while their parents are away.

The JOHN THIBAUTS of Napoleonville were weekend guests of the JACK TERZIAS. Ann and Tiny were roommates at Newcomb. On Sunday morning the Terzias were hosts at a brunch in honor of the visitors. Ann used pink and white flowering quince with peppermint striped camellias in a most interesting arrangement on the buffet. Real breakfast fare of fresh fruit, eggs Benedict, and hot biscuits were served. Guests included other Monroyans who had known the Thibauts at school.

CLAY OAKLEY'S fourth birthday was the occasion for a "George Washington" party Tuesday. A large T - shaped table covered with red, white, and blue was set up in the teen age lounge of the Bayou DeSiard country club. Real "cherry trees" of tiny potted plants loaded with maraschino cherries were alternated with miniature hatchets along the length of the table. The cake was iced to represent the American flag . . . A screen was set up at one end of the room, and movies of children's stories shown to the sixty children who attended.

The BILL RILEYS have returned from a trip to Houston. They were gone from last Saturday until Wednesday of this week.

Cousins got together here this week with the visit of MRS. KIRK LINDSAY and MRS. GEORGE RYAN of Baton Rouge, who visited SARA DUCOTE and HAZEL M'GINN. Another cousin is SHIRLEY LUTZ. All five were guests of their aunt, MRS. J. E. HOLMES, SR., and her daughter-in-law, JUNE HOLMES, for lunch on Wednesday. The visitors returned home Thursday.

It's always a pleasure to report new babies. SCOTT LUSK is the second son of the KENT ANDERSONS. He was born on the ninth of February, and young master MARK ANDERSON seems well pleased with his new little brother.

On Tuesday JIM HOLMES celebrated his seventh birthday with a skating party. Prizes were won by MARY MINTZ and LYNN McKENZIE. Candy and blowouts were given as favors. Cupcakes and soft drinks were the refreshments served to about forty - five little guests.

The BOB CARTERS are parents of a third child, VIRGINIA ANN, born February 12. The new arrival is the granddaughter of the E. E. EAVES of West Monroe. She has an older brother, ROB, and sister, JAN.

And while we are talking about the joys of the season, let us not forget this one, here described by Ogden Nash:

In January everything freezes.
We have two children. Both are she'ses.
This is our January rule;
In February the blizzard whirls.
We own a pair of little girls.
Blessings upon of each the head —
The one in school and the one in bed.
March is the month of cringe and bluster
Each of our children has a sister.
They cling together like Hansel and Gretel,
With their noses glued to the benzoin kettle.
April is made of impetuous waters
And doctors looking down throats of daughters.
If we had a son too, and a Samoyed,
We'd have a dog, and a boy, and two girls in bed.

The only ornament she wore was a string of pearls, a gift of the groom. She carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley showered with ribbon and tulle.

Kappa Deltas To Celebrate 50th Anniversary

One of the biggest and most important events in the history of Epsilon Chapter of Kappa Delta is soon to take place — the celebration of the fifthieth anniversary of Epsilon's founding at LSU! Epsilon received its charter on February 4, 1909, but in order to make it convenient for its alumnae to attend, the 50th birthday celebration will be held in Baton Rouge on Saturday, February 28.

You probably already know that Kappa Delta has had many "firsts." It was the first and only sorority to be admitted to National Panhellenic Conference at the same time it petitioned for entrance. It was the first sorority to have its own Christmas seals. The Angelos was the first magazine to use a pictorial section and the only one to use the all -over pictorial cover. Epsilon has had many "firsts" at LSU also. Now, this year Kappa Delta will be the first sorority to celebrate its 50th anniversary on the campus. We want this event to be Number One of its kind just as LSU had the Number One football team of the nation.

The following program is being planned:

10:00 a.m. until noon — Mother-Patroness Club will be hostesses at a coffee in the newly - decorated chapter room in the Panhellion. Chapter members will conduct tours around the campus (transportation provided)

12:15 p.m. — Formal presentation to LSU of a suitable gift commemorating the 50th Anniversary.

2:00-4:00 p.m. — Baton Rouge Alumnae Association to be hostesses at a reception at the new Alumni House.

6:30 p.m. — The highlight of the celebration will be a banquet in the Grand Ball Room of the newly remodeled Capitol House. Price of banquet to be announced later. Kappa Deltas may make reservations for themselves, their families, and friends.

For a teen - age party, serve hot, spiced apricot whole fruit nectar as the beverage. Use it straight from the can or combine with equal parts orange juice or lemonade; simmer gently with whole cloves, allspice and cinnamon bark about 15 minutes to give a full, fragrant flavor. The 46 ounce size cans are handy for punches, the family's breakfast drink, or for between - meat snacks. Keep several cans on hand.

Kappa Deltas To Celebrate 50th Anniversary

One of the biggest and most important events in the history of Epsilon Chapter of Kappa Delta is soon to take place — the celebration of the fifthieth anniversary of Epsilon's founding at LSU! Epsilon received its charter on February 4, 1909, but in order to make it convenient for its alumnae to attend, the 50th birthday celebration will be held in Baton Rouge on Saturday, February 28.

You probably already know that Kappa Delta has had many "firsts." It was the first and only sorority to be admitted to National Panhellenic Conference at the same time it petitioned for entrance. It was the first sorority to have its own Christmas seals. The Angelos was the first magazine to use a pictorial section and the only one to use the all -over pictorial cover. Epsilon has had many "firsts" at LSU also. Now, this year Kappa Delta will be the first sorority to celebrate its 50th anniversary on the campus. We want this event to be Number One of its kind just as LSU had the Number One football team of the nation.

The following program is being planned:

10:00 a.m. until noon — Mother-Patroness Club will be hostesses at a coffee in the newly - decorated chapter room in the Panhellion. Chapter members will conduct tours around the campus (transportation provided)

12:15 p.m. — Formal presentation to LSU of a suitable gift commemorating the 50th Anniversary.

2:00-4:00 p.m. — Baton Rouge Alumnae Association to be hostesses at a reception at the new Alumni House.

6:30 p.m. — The highlight of the celebration will be a banquet in the Grand Ball Room of the newly remodeled Capitol House. Price of banquet to be announced later. Kappa Deltas may make reservations for themselves, their families, and friends.

For a teen - age party, serve hot, spiced apricot whole fruit nectar as the beverage. Use it straight from the can or combine with equal parts orange juice or lemonade; simmer gently with whole cloves, allspice and cinnamon bark about 15 minutes to give a full, fragrant flavor. The 46 ounce size cans are handy for punches, the family's breakfast drink, or for between - meat snacks. Keep several cans on hand.

Opening lead: Four of ♥.

In today's hand South in due course became the declarer at the obvious contract of three no trump. Inasmuch as his hand counted only 21 points, or a jack short of regulation figures, he declined to open with two no trump and chose instead to approach with a bid of one club.

The four of hearts was opened and won by declarer who immediately attacked his longest suit by trying the diamond finesse.. This lost and the heart suit was cleared. Declarer now had only eight running tricks and concluded that his only chance was the spade finesse. When this failed he was defeated.

South had overlooked a fundamental principle of no trump play; when an adversary is atttmpting to establish a long suit, declarer should make every effort to render that long suit impotent by extracting the opening leader's entry card. If he has no card left with which to get in, his established suit will be just so much paperweight. On this deal, it was quite evident that the only card with which West could gain quick entry was the king of spades, if he had it. If that card is taken away from him early in the play, the heart suit will no longer be a menace.

The proper play at trick two is the nine of spades. If West does not go up, the diamond finesse may then be tried and nine tricks are in the bag even if it loses. If West takes the king of spades and continues hearts, declarer holds up till the third round and the diamond finesse can be taken safely into East who has no more hearts to return to partner. If it should turn out that East has the king of spades, then only an extra trick has been sacrificed, because East will win and return a heart. Declarer will hold up to exhaust East of the suit and the diamond finesse is taken with perfect safety.

If he has no card left with which to get in, his established suit will be just so much paperweight. On this deal, it was quite evident that the only card with which West could gain quick entry was the king of spades, if he had it. If that card is taken away from him early in the play, the heart suit will no longer be a menace.

The proper play at trick two is the nine of spades. If West does not go up, the diamond finesse may then be tried and nine tricks are in the bag even if it loses. If West takes the king of spades and continues hearts, declarer holds up till the third round and the diamond finesse can be taken safely into East who has no more hearts to return to partner. If it should turn out that East has the king of spades, then only an extra trick has been sacrificed, because East will win and return a heart. Declarer will hold up to exhaust East of the suit and the diamond finesse is taken with perfect safety.

DAYS IN SOUTH AFRICA RECALLED

Gracious Living

By LYNN GARRETT
Staff Writer

With a way of life not unlike the Old South, residents of South Africa live graciously in fine homes, admire their exquisite gardens, and keep their doors shut to bar inquisitive but harmless monkeys.

A former resident of Durban, South Africa and born in New Zealand, Mrs. W. H. McKelvey Jr. of 1701 Glenmar in Monroe has managed in the past few years to get used to "strange" American ways.

She has spent a total of four years in the States, but not consecutively.

She explains that her parents moved from New Zealand to Durban when she was five years old. Her parents were themselves natives of England and Mrs. McKelvey talks in a lively fashion with a marked British accent.

After spending her girlhood and teens in Durban, she came to the United States to visit relatives in Pennsylvania and in Bastrop.

She already held a degree in speech from the University of Capetown and had thought perhaps she would start her master's at Louisiana State University.

She was side-tracked by a drawling youth from Mer Rouge and soon they were married.

BACK TO DURBAN

As her husband was in service and moved a great deal from post to post, Mrs. McKelvey was back in Durban for a while and later both of them and their oldest daughter spent sometime there.

In fact, after coming to Monroe to school after going through the first grade there, Sharon, age 8, came home one day and told her mother that "these people can't spell." "They spell 'centre' as 'center' and they drop the U out of 'colour'."

Mr. and Mrs. McKelvey have another daughter, Yvonne, age 6.

"Getting used to doing without servants has been one of the hardest things," Mrs. McKelvey smiled. "In Durban just about everyone has servants and all my life I had had people to wait on me." She does all her own work now including cooking, although she had never cooked when she married.

Another thing Mrs. McKelvey thought odd but that she "loved from the start" is the American housewife custom, expecially in the suburbs, of dropping in to chat and drink coffee without an invitation.

"Life in Durban is very formal," she related. "People dress formally even to go visiting or to the movies."

As for the movies themselves, she said American films are shown just about a month later than you would see them here. British and Continental films are shown also. "Censorship of the movies is strictly enforced," she continued, and "the age limit for any show with romantic scenes is set at 18."

LANGUAGE

English is the main spoken language, although of course there are the French and Dutch influences along with the tongues of the natives, she noted. A "duke's mixture" of all the languages, called "Afrikaan" is being pushed by the Dutch, she added.

Mrs. McKelvey described Durban as a city of about 250,000 population, with 8-lanes trafifc downtown and 4-lanes even in the suburbs.

"The city is always immaculate and of course this is largely because of the cheap labor available."

Located on the coast, Durban has a maximum temperature of 85 to 90 and a minimum average of 75, giving it a year-round summer climate. With its miles of beaches, it is a mecca for those with time to play.

Shopping centers have "just about anything you could find here," plus imported British items. Clothing is "much cheaper" there and food is also available at more economical prices.

Mrs. McKelvey listed typical prices as bacon, 48 cents a pound; eggs, 24 cents a dozen; bananas, a penny each; milk, a nickel a quart, and sugar, four cents a pound.

"You don't find nearly so many frozen items for sale, or the typical convenience foods," she mentioned, attributing this also to the fact that servant labor means less demand for "quickie" foods.

Rent and house payments are just about the only things that cost as much in Durban as here, she added. "Of course, wages are lower there but all in all most people live better for less money than they can here."

Daily newspapers differ but little from American ones, and telephones and radio are common. "However, commercial radio has not been in Durban but about four or five years," she added, "and there is no television at all."

MANY KINDS

As for automobiles, Mrs. McKelvey says you find cars of American, British and Continental make are all prevalent.

Touching on three vastly different social customs, Mrs. McKelvey mentioned the fact that nobody dates unchaperoned in South Africa until after they are 18 years old. Schools are not co-educational and the girls wear uniforms and go without makeup. "We have no problem of early marriages, since the dating rules are so strict."

Another custom common to her homeland is the "Key To The Door" party given when each youngster reaches the age of 21.

She described this as a night of gaiety and entertainment climaxed by the midnight presentation of a key to the honored guest.

"This symbolizes coming of age and from that time on they can date without asking their parents' permission and without chaperones. Although chaperones are generally dispensed with at the age of 18, as mentioned, some parents insist on the third party until the 'Key To The Door' ceremony."

Mrs. McKelvy laughed at herself and said she thought this coming of age banquet was a worldwide event until she came to the States and learned that the 21st birthday here means but little more than any other.

DIFFERENT

The third different custom, and one she heartily approves of, is the giving of corsages for important dates. "Sometimes a boy may send flowers to a girl after a date, but this idea of giving corsages for a dance or other event is not practiced."

Do the British really love their tea as much as everyone thinks?

"Ah yes," she smiled wistfully," I just can't get used to the kind of tea drunk here." Unless she gets some genuine English tea out of New Orleans, Mrs. McKelvey compromises and a wise compromise it is in the eyes of Louisianans. She drinks coffee.

Although soft drinks of all varieties are common in South Africa, .ey are called "minerals." "Not too long ago I went to the store and asked for minerals," she related. "Now and then you just forget."

But what about the Africa most people think of? The jungles, wild animals, and natives beating on drums?

"Well, there are four major tribes of natives," Mrs. McKelvy explains. 'The Zulu, Xhosa, Basuto and Susuto. Then, too, there are the Indians. Each has a totally different language."

Those living in tribes out in the countryside still dress scantily, wear their beads and bangles and practice witchcraft, she continued. Some of these natives from time to time leave the tribe and move into the towns where they form the cheap domestic labor element.

Some of them, with more education, are able to get better jobs than others She notes that education among the natives varies from virtually none to a fairly good one. Women in the tribes have no status at all. A man may pay for his wives, and there are usually several at the same time, with heads of cattle.

"The first wife enjoys a sort of 'queen bee' status, Mrs. McKelvey said," and the wives who are brought after her act as her servants to some extent."

WITCH DOCTOR

As to the witchcraft, even the more educated and Christianized tribes continue to put their trust in it. "Modern medicine is highly developed in South Africa, but some of the natives will go for miles and miles, hunting a Witch Doctor."

Virtually every animal to be found in South Africa can be viewed closely, and safely, at the Kruger National Park game reserve, she continued. Containing 8,000 square miles, here sight-seers can find elephants, lions, giraffes, buffalo, baboons, crocodiles, leopards and many other animals wandering in complete oblivion of the automobiles.

Monkeys, as mentioned earlier, are to be found nearly everywhere. "If you put a bowl of fruit on your living room table and leave the door open, you will soon find a monkey or two making off with the food," she said. She added they are quite tame and have never been known to attack anyone.

As for sports, residents of South Africa just about have their pick. Besides all types of water sports, naturally popular along the beaches, there is much interest in rugby, the English version of football, and cricket, basketball, hockey, golf, polo and riding.

Basketball, though, is not played in a modern gymnasium as we know it, but outside on grassy fields.

"Speaking of water sports," Mrs. McKelvy said, "there is much interest in deep-sea fishing and the world's record for the largest shark was established off the coast of Durban."

Swimming is so much a part of everyday life that most schools have their own swimming pools and students are required to take part unless physically unable. "In fact, all kinds of sports are highly emphasized in the school system there and are mandatory, not optional."

Three different religions are dominant in South Africa—church of England, Dutch Reformed, and Catholic. "Religion is a stronger force in American life than it is there," she commented. Also, here you find a lot of emphasis on family worship. You don't see too much of that in South Africa."

The government of this remarkably wealthy country has two main parties. The South African United Party is pro-British and the Nationalist Party is the one pushing for a republic and trying to break away from Great Britain.

"South Africa, although a British colony, is nonetheless an independent state," Mrs. McKelvy explained. It operates with a prime minister and a cabinet and elections are held every five years."

Johannesburg, the largest city, is renowned as "Little New York." Noting the fact that it is often said to have streets paved with gold, Mrs. McKelvey explained the reason for this.

"Gold mines are nearby and the gold dust accumulates and blows over the city. When the sun shines just right, you can see a fine coating of gold dust on the streets."

Nobody can really predict what the future holds for this land fabled for its big game hunts, now virtually non-existent except in a few places.

Perhaps its storybook way of life, with the big homes and "nannies" for the children will continue for years to come.

By BOB LUCKETT
Staff Writer

The rhythmical clicking of train wheels pounded out a monotonous melody. Inside the boxcar it was cold. And lonesome.

He sucked the last luxurious draught of smoke from the handmade cigarette and flicked the butt into a sparkling arc out the sliding doors. The freight train was slowing.

Monroe would be the next stop.

They had told him of Monroe in San Francisco. Or was it Seattle? Anyway they had told him that in Monroe just across from the Missouri Pacific railway station there was a place where a man could get a meal and a bed for the night.

And the only charge, they said, was attendance at a gospel meeting.

Not much of a fee for one who hadn't eaten in a couple of days or who had known no bed except a bouncing, filthy boxcar floor for a longer time.

So the broke, the down-and-out, the unfortunate, the forgotten men stop off here because there's a temporary resting place for them.

It isn't much. Only an old two-story brick building standing alone on the north side of Ouachita avenue. Its somber outward appearance belies what is inside.

DESCRIPTION

"A place where the wayfaring man can find God, food, clothing and shelter" is perhaps the best description of the Calvary Christian College Gospel Mission.

President of the mission is the Reverend C. F. Henry, formerly of Bastrop. He and his wife founded the mission several months ago.

To really trace the origin of the mission one would have to go back a few decades to the Reverend's youth.

He hit the road at 15 and became adept at "riding the rods." The steel rods suspended under train cars were then considered a popular form of transportation for those who couldn't afford a ticket.

Soon he learned to carry a gallon syrup pail in which he built fires from boxcar wheel packing. It also made a good cooking utensil.

Often times he thought how nice it would be if there was a place for people on the road where they could get a hot meal, a real bed, if just for a short while. Maybe there they could find an anchor to stop the ceaseless wandering.

Finally he found himself owner and operator of a gambling house in a little Illinois town.

Then his life was transformed. He was converted and dedicated himself to the ministry, making a vow to do something for those men on the road.

During the depression years he ran a mission in Arkansas and served hundreds of wayfarers who had no place to go. But who had to go.

When times improved the mission was abandoned and Reverend Henry served as pastor of several churches in this part of the country.

Five years ago, when living in Bastrop, he spotted the ancient structure at 515 Ouachita and knew this was the ideal place.

But he couldn't obtain the building until November, 1958. After a month of scrubbing and soliciting for funds, food and equipment the lodge was opened on December 18.

Three transients came that first night to attend the service and to sup at the long dining table. They spread the word.

From that night on there has never been any lack of guests. In the past three months the mission ha slept 1064 persons and served 2128 hot meals.

How does he make ends meet?

Police Chief James C. Kelly Jr. granted the minister permission to ask for donations in Monroe. Six local sponsors have pledged $25 a month for three months.

Mrs. Henry operates a candy store in Bastrop. All profits go toward the building's maintainance and purchase of food.

Many gifts of clothing, bedding and cash are received from residents of the Twin Cities and Bastrop. Area supermarkets provide free soup bones and vegetables.

Cost of food is approximately $8 per day, rent is $150 each month. There is a constant need of cash.

At the time this reporter interviewed Reverend Henry, a $37 gas bill was five days past due. "I know I'll get the money somewhere," the missionary said confidently.

NOT AFFILIATED

The mission is not affiliated with any charity organization.

Each afternoon at about 3:30 the men begin to come in. Most come in on the trains, a few hitchhike into town

Usually they stay three days. Reverend Henry believes that in this length of time he has a chance of salvaging some souls.

Occasionally a man and his wife are boarded. One room is reserved for couples, although there are no facilities for single women.

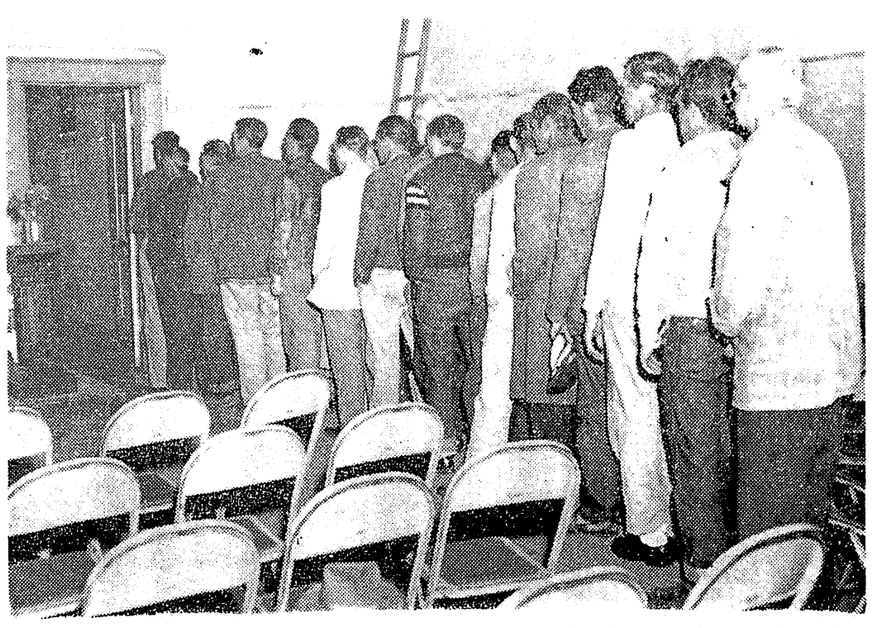
Two meals are served daily; one at 7:30 a.m. and another at 4 p.m. The fare is simple but hot and plentiful. No one leaves the table hungry.

Services are held each evening at 7 p.m. and on Sundays at 2:30 p.m. Reverend Henry's only rules are that his lodgers be sober and that they attend the gospel sessions.

Others on the mission staff are cooks, dishwashers, vegetable peelers and general cleaning men. They are paid with Bull Durham tobacco and may resume their travels at any time

Averaging nearly 40 transients nightly at present, the pastor expects the number to drop off with the coming of warm weather.

"They're kinda like birds," he said, "they travel north in the summer and south in the winter."



WAITING — Lined up in the chapel o. the Gospel Mission on Ouachita Avenue and waiting for a vacant seat at the dining table are these men of all ages and all places. After eating they will occupy the folding chairs for the afternoon services at which the public is always welcome.

HAVEN — This old brick building on the south side of Monroe near the Missouri Pacific depot is the Calvary Christian College Gospel Mission, refuge for the wayfaring man. It is maintained by the Rev. and Mrs. C. F. Henry. (Staff photos by John Fogleman)

THANKFULNESS — It's only soup, turnip greens, bread and coffee, but for a man who knows what real hunger is, this simple fare is a feast. Leading the group of transients in prayer of thanksgiving is the Rev. C. F. Henry, standing beside his wife at the extreme right.

Finally he found himself owner and operator of a gambling house in a little Illinois town.

Then his life was transformed. He was converted and dedicated himself to the ministry, making a vow to do something for those men on the road.

During the depression years he ran a mission in Arkansas and served hundreds of wayfarers who had no place to go. But who had to go.

When times improved the mission was abandoned and Reverend Henry served as pastor of several churches in this part of the country.

Five years ago, when living in Bastrop, he spotted the ancient structure at 515 Ouachita and knew this was the ideal place.

But he couldn't obtain the building until November, 1958. After a month of scrubbing and soliciting for funds, food and equipment the lodge was opened on December 18.

Three transients came that first night to attend the service and to sup at the long dining table. They spread the word.

From that night on there has never been any lack of guests. In the past three months the mission ha slept 1064 persons and served 2128 hot meals.

How does he make ends meet?

Police Chief James C. Kelly Jr. granted the minister permission to ask for donations in Monroe. Six local sponsors have pledged $25 a month for three months.

Mrs. Henry operates a candy store in Bastrop. All profits go toward the building's maintainance and purchase of food.

Many gifts of clothing, bedding and cash are received from residents of the Twin Cities and Bastrop. Area supermarkets provide free soup bones and vegetables.

Cost of food is approximately $8 per day, rent is $150 each month. There is a constant need of cash.

At the time this reporter interviewed Reverend Henry, a $37 gas bill was five days past due. "I know I'll get the money somewhere," the missionary said confidently.

NOT AFFILIATED

The mission is not affiliated with any charity organization.

Each afternoon at about 3:30 the men begin to come in. Most come in on the trains, a few hitchhike into town.

Usually they stay three days. Reverend Henry believes that in this length of time he has a chance of salvaging some souls.

Occasionally a man and his wife are boarded. One room is reserved for couples, although there are no facilities for single women.

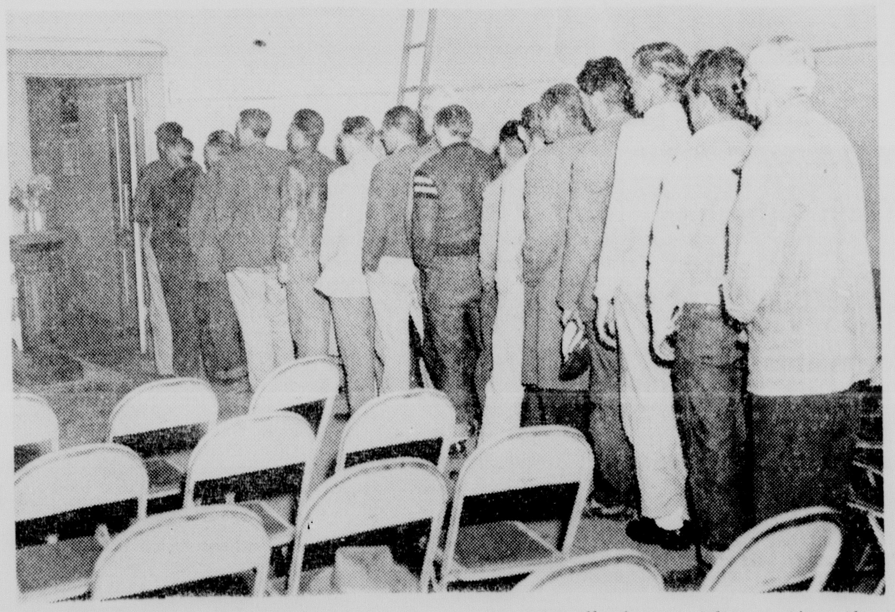
Two meals are served daily; one at 7:30 a.m. and another at 4 p.m. The fare is simple but hot and plentiful. No one leaves the table hungry.

Services are held each evening at 7 p.m. and on Sundays at 2:30 p.m. Reverend Henry's only rules are that his lodgers be sober and that they attend the gospel sessions.

Others on the mission staff are cooks, dishwashers, vegetable peelers and general cleaning men. They are paid with Bull Durham tobacco and may resume their travels at any time.

Averaging nearly 40 transients nightly at present, the pastor expects the number to drop off with the coming of warm weather.

"They're kinda like birds," he said, "they travel north in the summer and south in the winter."



WAITING — Lined up in the chapel of the Gospel Mission on Ouachita Avenue and waiting for a vacant seat at the dining table are these men of all ages and all places. After eating they will occupy the folding chairs for the afternoon services at which the public is always welcome.

HAVEN — This old brick building on the south side of Monroe near the Missouri Pacific depot is the Calvary Christian College Gospel Mission, refuge for the wayfaring man. It is maintained by the Rev. and Mrs. C. F. Henry. (Staff photos by John Fogleman)

THANKFULNESS — It's only soup, turnip greens, bread and coffee, but for a man who knows what real hunger is, this simple fare is a feast. Leading the group of transients in prayer of thanksgiving is the Rev. C. F. Henry, standing beside his wife at the extreme right.

PAUL MARTIN LOOKS 'EM OVER

Lion Grid Fare

The traveling expenses for the Ouachita Parish football Lions should be at a minimum this year. Coach Bob Ellen's eleven-game schedule calls for five home games and six as the invader, but the Jungle Kings actually are "visitors" in two home scraps with Neville and West Monroe. Thus, they'll be in action on Twin Cities' grids seven times while actually hitting the road for only four.

Opponents are changed for two dates, but otherwise Ouachita's slate, as announced this week by Coach Ellen, will be the same as last season.

The long-time season opener with the Homer Pelicans has been stricken from the schedule, and Raney High of Little Rock, Ark., will give the Lions their curtain-raiser here September 10. Hope, Ark., also replaces Pineville for October 2, the Lions making the trip to Hope for the game.

The Ouachita schedule: Raney, here, Sept. 10; Jonesboro-Hodge at Jonesboro, Sept. 18; Ruston, here, Sept. 25; Hope, there, Oct. 2; Bastrop (homecoming), here, Oct. 9; Haynesville, there, Oct. 16; Fair Park, here, Oct. 22; West Monroe, there, Oct. 30; Byrd at Shreveport, Nov 6; Bossier, here, Nov. 13; Neville, a "there" game here, Nov. 20. All are dates for Fridays except for Raney and Fair Park which are due on Thursday dates. Bastrop, Fair Park, West Monroe, Byrd, and Bossier furnish triple-A championship contention games.

Gym Goodwill

Friend Jimmy Bullock of the Shreveport Journal writes in his Accent on Sports that area coaches who saw touring gymnastics teams on Finland perform at Northwestern Louisiana State "are sold on the idea of installing the sport into their scholastic programs." Few area schools go in for gymnastics, content to use their floors for basketball.

The Finns were in Natchitoches Monday night, performed at Baton Rouge Tuesday night, and went on for a sweep through Mississippi, Florida, Georgia, and South Carolina to end a U. S. tour that has been in progress since a January start in New Jersey.

Said Bullock: "The Finnish teams thrilled their audience by performing feats that appeared to be almost impossible." Northwestern State and West Monroe High School have had good gymnastics programs, but few other schools of the south go in for the acrobatics. The Finns' performance may start some new thinking, if Bullock is right.

CAGE EVENT

Independent basketball players of north Louisiana will have another tournament to look forward to. Coach Crawford Vines of Eros High School informs that the second annual Eros Independent Tournament is scheduled for March 5-6-7 with all games to be played at night and on Saturday for the convenience of entering teams.

Deadline for entries is next Saturday when the entrance fee of $10 should be sent to Coach Vines. Brackets will go out March 3. Team awards for first, second, and third places will be presented, in addition to trophies for all members of the winning team. One of the game officials will be Jerry Lovett, the ex-Louisiana Tech athlete who is coach at Calhoun High.

Also remember that the deadline for the Dodson Independent tourney entries is 8 a.m. tomorrow. Get them to Coach Buddy Bates before that time. The Dodson meet opens Thursday, runs through next Saturday.

JINX IS JINKS

Sheriff Elliot D. Coleman of Tensas parish is advising sports writers that the young lady playing basketball for Ferriday is Jinks Coleman, and not "Jinx" as it has appeared in some game reports. Sheriff Coleman's concern is natural. She's his granddaughter. While her true name is Jinks, some of the teams she plays feel jinx is more prophetic of what the outcome of the game will be for them.

NO SOAP, AL

Al Boudreaux, who saw his Louisiana welterweight title pass into the hands of Bastrop's Johnny McKoin, writes from Westwego wanting to know what's the matter with his promised rematch with Johnny.

Boudreaux, vowing he was "way off" his form for the last McKoin bout, says matchmaker Ray Kruger had earlier convinced him the match was all set, but he has since been unable to make contact with Kruger and doesn't know how his rematch stands.

Those in the "know" figure it's simple. There'll be no match as far as Kruger is concerned. The Bastrop matchmaker lost money on about every card he put on here and in Bastrop, and we doubt if he ever broke even. The licking he took trying to cultivate boxing interests probably had a lot to do with the news Kruger has been making lately about his disappearance from Bastrop ahead of a trail of alleged check miscues.

Boudreaux is going to have to get another promoter to work on the match and go directly to Johnny's manager, Larche Campbell.

NO DUMMIES

Hugh "Bones" Taylor former Northeast Louisiana football star who had a fine professional career, is proud of the classroom work of his gridders at Arkansas State College where he now coaches. The classroom work average of his entire football team is higher than the overall men's average for the Jonesboro, Ark., school.

"Our boys did a good job in the classroom," Taylor reports. "Their grades point out that they not only are good football players, but also good students. And if people don't think that football interferes with studying, they're wrong. It takes a lot out of a boy to practice two or three hours a day, then try to study for two more hours."

The squad's 2.32 average, equal to a C-plus, shows no "dumb bunnies" at ASC. Top man of the team is Marvin Hagaman, Stuttgart, at 3.66, equivalent to an A-minus. Only six players on the 55-man squad failed to make C average, and only three of those were actually classed as "low grade" students, it was pointed out by Charley Thornton, the ASC athletic publicity director.

PERSONAL NOTES

Charles Miller, newly elected captain of the Sicily Island High football Tigers for next season, is nursing a broken arm. Miller fractured his arm in spring training Tuesday.

Glenda Sue Goyne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bennie Goyne, an all-state guard at West Monroe High, will captain the WMHS girls' basketball team next season.

Frank Roland, ex-U. of Alabama athlete who pitched for Ruston in the Big Eight League, is on the Southern Association roster of the Shreveport Sports.

Sid Bradley Leads Indians To 108-96 Victory Over SLI

UP YOU GO — Southwestern's Don Church (43) looks like he is giving Northeast's Mickey Kitchens (10) a boost toward the basket in the last half of Saturday night's game here. He wasn't. Kitchens missed the basket and Church was charged with a foul. Watching are SLI's Bill McHorris (33) and Northeast's Huey Cottrell (44). (Staff photo by Jim St. Julien)

Scores 36 As Redmen Win Easily

By BOB ANDERSON

Bradley was back and he scored 36 points to lead Northeast in is greatest effort of the season, a 108-96 thrashing of Southwestern in a Gulf States Conference contest here Saturday night.

Bradley is Sid Bradley, a young fellow out of Bismark, Missouri, seeing his first action in two weeks, having taken a punch on the eye in the Louisiana College game. If the punch improved his aim this much, he should get socked again.

Lenny Fant's men took over the lead for keeps in the closing minutes of a see-saw first half on a scoring spur by Billy May and ran it out of reach in the first 10 minutes of the second half to record their 12th victory of the campaign against 11 losses and third in GSC play against five defeats.

May, scoring Northeast's last eight points in a row, gave Northeast a 50-48 halftime lead with two free throws with a second to go in the stanza. Southwestern's Tim Thompson scored the first point of the second half to narrow the gap to 50-49 before Northeast scored six points in a row to begin their second-half spurt — a push that gave the Indians an 84-62 lead with 10 minutes left to play.

The Indians raced the count to 96-73 with 6:55 to go before cooling off a bit. With 4:30 to go and leading, 98-80, the Redskins started to slow down the action but pushed into three figures when Mickey Kitchens sank a pair of free throws with 3:32 left to make it 100-82.

Northeast hit on 51 per cent of its tries from the field during the evening while SLI hardley cold either, hit on 50.9 per cent.

The fast, free-fouling contest saw six players go to the sidelines early by fouling out. Northeast's Ronald Doyle was the first to go, committing his fifth foul with 15 minutes left in the game. Billy May followed Doyle with 8:02 left after SLI's Randy Price and Larry Simon went out. Jack Savoie and Don Church fouled out late in the game for Southwestern.

Tempers grew short in the late stages with two minor scuffles occuring. Bradley was involved in one, a battle for the ball when everybody forgot about the ball for awhile, and Northeast's Dave Harkins and Thompson exchanged a few words and shoves later.

Bradley has his greatest night of the season. The 5-11 guard sank 10 shots from the floor and 16 free throws to dominate the scoring and got a tremendous hand from the crowd late in the game when he was taken out momentarily.

May also turned in one of his better nights and scored 20 points before fouling out and was a demon on the boards. Kitchens boosted his average with 19 markers. John Freeman got 12 and Doyle scored 10 in his brief action.

Jack McHorris led Southwestern's efforts with 29 points and Thompson, tough in the last half, got 25. Savoie scored 13 and Simon 10.

Southwestern, the only GSC team to defeat league-leading Louisiana Tech, took its fourth loss in the conference against a like number of wins. Overall, the Bulldogs are now 13-9.

Tech Clinches GSC Title By 89-65 Victory

Tech was tied four times during the first half but rallied in the final moments to hold a 37-27 lead at intermission.

Tech now has a 19-4 overall record and is 8-1 in the GSC.

HOWELL HELD TO 17

Maroons Tumble Tigers, 75 To 67

By W. B. RAGSDALE JR.

BATON ROUGE (AP) — Louisiana State tossed a halter on highscoring Bailey Howell Saturday night but his Mississippi State teammates raced to a 75-67 victory that all but clinched a tie for the Southeastern Conference basketball title.

Mississippi State, with a 12-1 SEC record, matches Auburn which lost its first game to Kentucky 75-56 Saturday night. Both teams have two games left.

Three LSU players, Jim Crisco, Lynn Moon and Joe Combs, fouled out while guarding Howell but they held him to 17 points, only three of them in the second half.

Howell, who had a 28.8 point per game average before the game, fouled out with 17 seconds remaining. He sat out more than six minutes of the second half with four personal fouls.

The 17 points boosted Howell's three-year scoring total to 1,992 points, ten short of Bob Pettit's three-year record while playing for LSU.

Moon was high scorer for the game with 20 points but all five Mississippi State regulars scored in double figures.

The Maroons led all the way after the first few minutes, boosting their margin as much as 20 points early in the second half. Mississippi State led 52-35 at intermission.

LSU staged a closing drive that cut the margin to the final eight points in a wild, rough contest that saw fights narrowly averted several times. A total of 50 personal fouls was called, 28 against LSU and 22 against Mississippi State.

Mississippi State scored on 27 of 67 shots from the floor while LSU hit on 26 of 67.

It was LSU's 11th straight loss in SEC play for a 1-11 record.

TO PLAY OR NOT TO PLAY?

Unwritten Sports Law Haunts State

By JOHN HERBERS

JACKSON, Miss., Feb. 21 — (UPI) — How does an unwritten law come into being and where do you go to find it?

That question was being asked frequently this week in the debate over whether to let Mississippi State play in the sure-to-be integrated national collegiate basketball tournament.

To become effective a written law must be passed by the legislature and signed by the governor. In this case the unwritten law can be found in no public record, but it is branded on the minds of college officials. Here's how it came about:

In 1955 when the race issue was perhaps at its peak in Mississippi, Jones junior college was asked to play football in the junior Rose Bowl against Compton, Calif., junior college which had eight Negro players.

There was a debate over whether the team should go. Gov. Hugh White and Gov.-elect J. P. Coleman said the decision was up to the school's board of trustees. The team wanted to go despite objections by the then-budding Citizens' Councils who said it would be interpreted by the NAACP and other 'Mixiecrats' as furthering the cause of integration."

The board of the Ellisville school voted to go ahead and play. Jones got beat in a thriller, 22-13. A worse licking was in store for the school officials in the state capitol.

Legislative leaders were demanding that Jones be censurd or punished in some way. In a closed meeting the presidents of more than a dozen junior colleges promised the legislators their teams would play no racially-mixed teams thereafter.

They made the agreement under threat of having their appropriations slashed and passage of bills specifically banning interracial competition by Mississippi teams.

The number and identity of the legislators involved was not disclosed but Rep. Russell Fox of Claiborne county and other members of the house appropriations committee were reported to be the leaders.

The issue was never mentioned on the floor of either house and what happened at the meeting did not leak out for a long time. But the agreement made in the meeting was accepted as applying to all Mississippi institutions.

A year later Pearl River junior college turned down the little Rose Bowl because of the agreement. Both Mississippi and Mississippi State withdrew basketball teams from national tournaments when it became known back home some of the teams participating had Negroes. The year before the State had played against an integrated team in North Carolina without a ripple of protest.

After the state basketball team came home from the Evansville, Ind., invitational, state President Ben Hilbun said the team had been led to believe there were no Negroes in the tournament and he ordered the Maroons home as soon as he found out.

"We will never do it (play against Negroes, as long as I control it," Hilbun was quoted.

Later Jackson State College for Negroes was kept from participating in a national tournament for the same reason despite student protests.

While the debate was underway this week as to whether State should play with the rest of the nation, House Speaker Walter Sillers was asked casually what he thought about it.

"There's no doubt in my mind," Sillers said, explaining that the team simply should not go.

However, other officials were passing the buck like a hot potato and Gov. Coleman said the legislature should be polled.

Assuming State wins its games Saturday and Monday, next week may decide whether the "unwritten law" is repealed or becomes permanent.

Church Meet Crown Won By Edgewood

Edgewood, West Monroe Baptists and College Place won division crowns in the District 2 State Basketball Tournament sponsored by the First Baptist Church of West Monroe here yesterday.

Led by L. V. Norris' 27 points, Edgewood defeated West Monroe Baptists, 60-40, for first place in the adult bracket. Tommy Wren dropped in 9 points to pace the losers.

In the 17-year-old division, West Monroe Baptists squeezed past College Place, 47-43, for the title. David Wiggins led the winning attack with 15 points, while Paynex's 11 counters was high for College Place.

The 14-year-old crown went to College Place on a 19-17 decision over Pineville Park of Alexandria. Hale had 6 points for the champs and Dyson, with 9, topped Pineville.

Trophies were awarded to first place winners in each of the three divisions.

Preliminary contests in the adult division saw Edgewood stop College Place, 73-59, Liberty nip Victory, 42-40, Edgewood beat Pineville Park, 73-71, and West Monroe Baptists down Liberty, 59-39.

In the middle class, College Place tripped Pineville Park, 47-19, and West Monroe Baptists dropped Monroe Baptists, 35-32.

BEAT OAK GROVE, 52-37

St. Matthew's Cagers Cop District Class A Throne

The Fighting Irish brought athletic glory to St. Matthew's High School last night as the charges of Coach Jim Mahoney stormed the Tigers of Oak Grove High, 52 to 37, in the championship finals of the district 2-A basketball tournament in St. Matthew's gym here.

It was the first championship of any kind ever won by a varsity St. Matthew's team which for years had campaigned in Class B until Coach Mahoney moved in last year and had his Irish advanced to the higher classification.

Both St. Matthew's and the Oak Grove machine of Coach Cecil Johnson will continue in the state championship playoffs are representatives of district 2-A. The district defeat last night didn't eliminate the West Carroll parish Tigers as the first and second place clubs of all districts advance. But from now on a defeat is an elimination for any team from state title convention.

The LaSalle High Tigers, the No. 2 club in 7-A, is scheduled to show here against the Irish next Friday night. At the same time Coach Johnson is due to play the 1-A champion Coushatta club in Coushatta.

Sammy King of Oak Grove hooped the game-opening basket last night, and Irish Charles Biggar came right back to even it. Buddy Embanato's foul shot sent St. Matthew's ahead. Then the Tigers were out front again on King's second shot from the floor, and a Jimmy Tonore gift shot for St. Mathew's deadlocked the score at 4-4. King hit a foul shot for Oak Grove, Biggar came right back with a field goal for the Irish, and Sam Marsala's free throw made it 9-7 for St. Matt.

Roger Head scored from the floor for O.G. and the count was tied again at 9-9, but when Tonore fired a field basket just before the quarter ended, the Irish went ahead to stay, and the visitors gradually fell behind.

St. Matthew's led 11-9 at the quarter, commanded a 27-20 edge at the half, and was in front 42-29 going into the final period.

The gap never appeared too wide for the Tigers to overtake until near the middle of the third quarter when Tonore hit with three successive field baskets behind a foul shot apiece for Biggar, Embanato and Marsala that shot the Irish into a 37-23 lead.

The third quarter was controlled by Embanato as far as the Irish scoring went for two gift shots by John Varino. Embanato collected four free throws and two field baskets in the wrap-up period, and his eight points in the period carried him to high scoring honors for the night with 15 points, just a shade ahead of Oak Grove's King who led his club with 14. Tonore and Marsala also hit double figures for the Irish with 12 and 10 respectively. G. W. Martin dumped in 11 points for Oak Grove.

TRAINING BRIEFS

McDougald Ends Holdout, Signs

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (UPI) —Infielder Gil McDougald conferred with New York Yankee officials for more than two hours Saturday and then ended his holdout siege by signing his 1959 contract for the same $32,000 salary he received last year.

LAKELAND, Fla. (UPI)—Frank Lary ended a two-day holdout shortly after noon Saturday, bringing to full strength the Detroit Tigers' pitching staff in spring training here.

Lary, who beat the New York Yankees seven times last year and holds a lifetime edge of 16-5 over the world champions, came to terms after his second long bargaining session with General Manager Rick Ferrell.

He was believed to have signed for about $23,000.

VERO BEACH, Fla. (UPI)—It was "back-to-school" day for the Los Angeles Dodgers Saturday.

Manager Walt Alston turned over his catchers to Bobby Bragan, the pitchers to Joe Becker and Clay Bryant, the infielders to Pee Wee Reese and the outfielders to Pete Reiser for fundamental instructions. Bragan, Bryant and Reiser manage Dodger minor league clubs, while Becker and Reese are members of the varsity coaching staff.

For the afternoon batting session, Alston divided his squad, five pitchers throwing to eight batters on two fields. Roger Craig and Sandy Koufax took 15-minute mound turns for the second time in three days.

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI)—Veteran catcher Clint Courtney Saturday agreed to terms reportedly calling for an $18,000 salary for 1959 as the Washington Senators cut their holdout list to eight.

Courtney was said to have received a token raise of $500.

Calvin Griffith president of the Senators, admittedly is worried about five key ballplayers who stubbornly refuse to come to terms. The five include last year's regular outfield of Roy Sievers, Albie Pearson and Jim Lemon, and the two most effective pitchers on the club—Pedro Ramos and Camilo Pascual.

Tinkalero Wins Burch Handicap

BOWIE, Md. (AP) — Tinkalero gained her second stakes victory of the 13-day Bowie meeting Saturday with an impressive four-length decision over Sandboy in the $13,675 Burch Memorial Handicap.

The winner, owned by the Triple M. Farms and ridden by Arthur Sherman, finished the six furlongs in 1:10 4-5, fastest of the meeting and only three-fifths of a second off the track record.

The 4-year-old daughter of Bolero, carrying 114 pounds as the lone filly in the field of 10, paid $4.40 as the favorite. She led all the way.

Sandboy returned $15, finishing a length and a half ahead of third place Alstar, who paid $4.60.

WINGS RECALL BARTON

DETROIT (UPI)—Cummy Barton, 22-year-old right wing from Seattle, has been recalled by the parent Detroit Red Wings, and Bill McNeill, 23-year-old right wing, has been sent to Edmonton to make room for him. McNeill has been with the Wings for three seasons.

Three Players Lead SLC In 74-57 Verdict

HAMMOND, La. (AP) — Three Southeastern Louisiana players hit 17 points each Saturday night as SLC won a 74-57 Gulf States Conference victory over McNeese.

Stan Kernan had 15 points in leading McNeese. He fouled out with 11 minutes remaining.

SLC jumped to a two-point lead at the start and was never headed. By halftime the lead was 41-24.

McNeese outscored SLC from the floor, hitting 21 goals to SLC's 20, but SLC capitalized on 29 McNeese fouls with 34 charity points.

Klosterman had 14 rebounds and Shanks 10 if SLC's 43 rebounds. McNeese had 26 rebounds.

SUSPEND JOCKY

MIAMI, Fla. (UPI)—Bobby Ussery, Hialeah Park's leading jockey with 31 victories, begins a 10-day suspension Wednesday for rough riding in the fourth race here last Saturday. The suspension will deprive him of his mount on A Dragon Killer this Saturday in the $100,000 added Widener Handicap.

Lion Grid Fare

The traveling expenses for the Ouachita Parish football Lions should be at a minimum this year. Coach Bob Ellen's eleven-game schedule calls for five home games and six as the invader, but the Jungle Kings actually are "visitors" in two home scraps with Neville and West Monroe. Thus, they'll be in action on Twin Cities' grids seven times while actually hitting the road for only four.

Opponents are changed for two dates, but otherwise Ouachita's slate, as announced this week by Coach Ellen, will be the same as last season.

The long-time season opener with the Homer Pelicans has been stricken from the schedule, and Raney High of Little Rock, Ark., will give the Lions their curtain-raiser here September 10. Hope, Ark., also replaces Pineville for October 2, the Lions making the trip to Hope for the game.

The Ouachita schedule: Raney, here, Sept. 10; Jonesboro-Hodge at Jonesboro, Sept. 18; Ruston, here, Sept. 25; Hope, there, Oct. 2; Bastrop (homecoming), here, Oct. 9; Haynesville, there, Oct. 16; Fair Park, here, Oct. 22; West Monroe, there, Oct. 30; Byrd at Shreveport, Nov 6; Bossier, here, Nov. 13; Neville, a "there" game here, Nov. 20. All are dates for Fridays except for Raney and Fair Park which are due on Thursday dates. Bastrop, Fair Park, West Monroe, Byrd, and Bossier furnish triple-A championship contention games.

Gym Goodwill

Friend Jimmy Bullock of the Shreveport Journal writes in his Accent on Sports that area coaches who saw touring gymnastics teams on Finland perform at Northwestern Louisiana State "are sold on the idea of installing the sport into their scholastic programs." Few area schools go in for gymnastics, content to use their floors for basketball.

The Finns were in Natchitoches Monday night, performed at Baton Rouge Tuesday night, and went on for a sweep through Mississippi, Florida, Georgia, and South Carolina to end a U. S. tour that has been in progress since a January start in New Jersey.

Said Bullock: "The Finnish teams thrilled their audience by performing feats that appeared to be almost impossible." Northwestern State and West Monroe High School have had good gymnastics programs, but few other schools of the south go in for the acrobatics. The Finns' performance may start some new thinking, if Bullock is right.

CAGE EVENT

Independent basketball players of north Louisiana will have another tournament to look forward to. Coach Crawford Vines of Eros High School informs that the second annual Eros Independent Tournament is scheduled for March 5-6-7 with all games to be played at night and on Saturday for the convenience of entering teams.

Deadline for entries is next Saturday when the entrance fee of $10 should be sent to Coach Vines. Brackets will go out March 3. Team awards for first, second, and third places will be presented, in addition to trophies for all members of the winning team. One of the game officials will be Jerry Lovell, the ex-Louisiana Tech athlete who is coach at Calhoun High.

Also remember that the deadline for the Dodson Independent tourney entries is 8 a.m. tomorrow. Get them to Coach Buddy Bates before that time. The Dodson meet opens Thursday, runs through next Saturday.

JINX IS JINKS

Sheriff Elliot D. Coleman of Tensas parish is advising sports writers that the young lady playing basketball for Ferriday is Jinks Coleman, and not "Jinx" as it has appeared in some game reports. Sheriff Coleman's concern is natural. She's his granddaughter. While her true name is Jinks, some of the teams she plays feel jinx is more prophetic of what the outcome of the game will be for them.

NO SOAP, AL

Al Boudreaux, who saw his Louisiana welterweight title pass into the hands of Bastrop's Johnny McKoin, writes from Westwego wanting to know what's the matter with his promised rematch with Johnny.

Boudreaux, vowing he was "way off" his form for the last McKoin bout, says matchmaker Ray Kruger had earlier convinced him the match was all set, but he has since been unable to make contact with Kruger and doesn't know how his rematch stands.

Those in the "know" figure it's simple. There'll be no match as far as Kruger is concerned. The Bastrop matchmaker lost money on about every card he put on here and in Bastrop, and we doubt if he ever broke even. The licking he took trying to cultivate boxing interests probably had a lot to do with the news Kruger has been making lately about his disappearance from Bastrop ahead of a trail of alleged check miscues.

Boudreaux is going to have to get another promoter to work on the match and go directly to Johnny's manager, Larche Campbell.

NO DUMMIES

Hugh "Bones" Taylor former Northeast Louisiana football star who had a fine professional career, is proud of the classroom work of his gridders at Arkansas State College where he now coaches. The classroom work average of his entire football team is higher than the overall men's average for the Jonesboro, Ark., school.

"Our boys did a good job in the classroom," Taylor reports. "Their grades point out that they not only are good football players, but also good students. And if people don't think that football interferes with studying, they're wrong. It takes a lot out of a boy to practice two or three hours a day, then try to study for two more hours."

The squad's 2.32 average, equal to a C-plus, shows no "dumb bunnies" at ASC. Top man of the team is Marvin Hagaman, Stuttgart, at 3.66, equivalent to an A-minus. Only six players on the 55-man squad failed to make C average, and only three of those were actually classed as "low grade" students, it was pointed out by Charley Thornton, the ASC athletic publicity director.

PERSONAL NOTES

Charles Miller, newly elected captain of the Sicily Island High football Tigers for next season, is nursing a broken arm. Miller fractured his arm in spring training Tuesday.

Glenda Sue Goyne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bennie Goyne, an all - state guard at West Monroe High, will captain the WMHS girls' basketball team next season.

Frank Roland, ex-U. of Alabama athlete who pitched for Ruston in the Big Eight League, is on the Southern Association roster of the Shreveport Sports.

Sid Bradley Leads Indians To 108-96 Victory Over SLI

Scores 36 As Redmen Win Easily

By BOB ANDERSON

Bradley was back and he scored 36 points to lead Northeast in is greatest effort of the season, a 108-96 thrashing of Southwestern in a Gulf States Conference contest here Saturday night.

Bradley is Sid Bradley, a young fellow out of Bismark, Missouri, seeing his first action in two weeks, having taken a punch on the eye in the Louisiana College game. If the punch improved his aim this much, he should get socked again.

Lenny Fant's men took over the lead for keeps in the closing minutes of a see-saw first half on a scoring spurt by Billy May and ran it out of reach in the first 10 minutes of the second half to record their 12th victory of the campaign against 11 losses and third in GSC play against five defeats.

May, scoring Northeast's last eight points in a row, gave Northeast a 50-48 halftime lead with two free throws with a second to go in the stanza. Southwestern's Tim Thompson scored the first point of the second half to narrow the gap to 50-49 before Northeast scored six points in a row to begin their second-half spurt — a push that gave the Indians an 84-62 lead with 10 minutes left to play.

The Indians raced the count to 96-73 with 6:55 to go before cooling off a bit. With 4:30 to go and leading, 98-80, the Redskins started to slow down the action but pushed into three figures when Mickey Kitchens sank a pair of free throws with 3.32 left to make it 100-82.

Northeast hit on 51 per cent of its tries from the field during the evening while SLI hardley cold either, hit on 50.9 per cent.

The fast, free-fouling contest saw six players go to the sidelines early by fouling out. Northeast's Ronald Doyle was the first to go, committing his fifth foul with 15 minutes left in the game. Billy May followed Doyle with 8:02 left after SLI's Randy Price and Larry Simon went out. Jack Savoie and Don Church fouled out late in the game for Southwestern.

Tempers grew short in the late stages with two minor scuffles occuring. Bradley was involved in one, a battle for the ball when everybody forgot about the ball for awhile, and Northeast's Dave Harkins and Thompson exchanged a few words and shoves later.

Bradley has his greatest night of the season. The 5-11 guard sank 10 shots from the floor and 16 free throws to dominate the scoring and got a tremendous hand from the crowd late in the game when he was taken out momentarily.

May also turned in one of his better nights and scored 20 points before fouling out and was a demon on the boards. Kitchens boosted his average with 19 markers, John Freeman got 12 and Doyle scored 10 in his brief action.

Jack McHorris led Southwestern's efforts with 29 points and Thompson, tough in the last half, got 25. Savoie scored 13 and Simon 10.

Southwestern, the only GSC team to defeat league - leading Louisiana Tech, took its fourth loss in the conference against a like number of wins. Overall, the Bulldogs are now 13-9.

BEAT OAK GROVE, 52-37

St. Matthew's Cagers Cop District Class A Throne

The Fighting Irish brought athletic glory to St. Matthew's High School last night as the charges of Coach Jim Mahoney stormed the Tigers of Oak Grove High, 52 to 37, in the championship finals of the district 2-A basketball tournament in St. Matthew's gym here.

It was the first championship of any kind ever won by a varsity St. Matthew's team which for years had campaigned in Class B until Coach Mahoney moved in last year and had his Irish advanced to the higher classification.

Both St. Matthew's and the Oak Grove machine of Coach Cecil Johnson will continue in the state championship playoffs are representatives of district 2-A. The district defeat last night didn't eliminate the West Carroll parish Tigers as the first and second place clubs of all districts advance. But from now on a defeat is an elimination for any team from state title convention.

The LaSalle High Tigers, the No. 2 club in 7-A, is scheduled to show here against the Irish next Friday night. At the same time Coach Johnson is due to play the 1-A champion Coushatta club in Coushatta.

Sammy King of Oak Grove hooped the game-opening basket last night, and Irish Charles Biggar came right back to even it. Buddy Embanato's foul shot sent St. Matthew's ahead. Then the Tigers were out front again on King's second shot from the floor, and a Jimmy Tonore gift shot for St. Mathew's deadlocked the score at 4-4. King hit a foul shot for Oak Grove, Biggar came right back with a field goal for the Irish, and Sam Marsala's free throw made it 9-7 for St. Matt.

Roger Head scored from the floor for O.G. and the count was tied again at 9-9, but when Tonore fired a field basket just before the quarter ended, the Irish went ahead to stay, and the visitors gradually fell behind.

St. Matthew's led 11-9 at the quarter, commanded a 27-20 edge at the half, and was in front 42-29 going into the final period.

The gap never appeared too wide for the Tigers to overtake until near the middle of the third quarter when Tonore hit with three successive field baskets behind a foul shot apiece for Biggar, Embanato and Marsala that shot the Irish into a 37-23 lead.

The third quarter was controlled by Embanato as far as the Irish scoring went for two gift shots by John Varino. Embanato collected four free throws and two field baskets in the wrap-up period, and his eight points in the period carried him to high scoring honors for the night with 15 points, just a shade ahead of Oak Grove's King who led his club with 14. Tonore and Marsala also hit double figures for the Irish with 12 and 10 respectively. G. W. Martin dumped in 11 points for Oak Grove.

McDougald Ends Holdout, Signs

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (UPI)—Infielder Gil McDougald conferred with New York Yankee officials for more than two hours Saturday and then ended his holdout siege by signing his 1959 contract for the same $32,000 salary he received last year.

LAKELAND, Fla. (UPI)—Frank Lary ended a two-day holdout shortly after noon Saturday, bringing to full strength the Detroit Tigers' pitching staff in spring training here.

Lary, who beat the New York Yankees seven times last year and holds a lifetime edge of 16-5 over the world champions, came to terms after his second long bargaining session with General Manager Rick Ferrell.

He was believed to have signed for about $23,000.

VERO BEACH, Fla. (UPI)—It was "back-to-school" day for the Los Angeles Dodgers Saturday.

Manager Walt Alston turned over his catchers to Bobby Bragan, the pitchers to Joe Becker and Clay Bryant, the infielders to Pee Wee Reese and the outfielders to Pete Reiser for fundamental instructions. Bragan, Bryant and Reiser manage Dodger minor league clubs, while Becker and Reese are members of the varsity coaching staff.

For the afternoon batting session, Alston divided his squad, five pitchers throwing to eight batters on two fields. Roger Craig and Sandy Koufax took 15-minute mound turns for the second time in three days.

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI)—Veteran catcher Clint Courtney Saturday agreed to terms reportedly calling for an $18,000 salary for 1959 as the Washington Senators cut their holdout list to eight.

Courtney was said to have received a token raise of $500.

Calvin Griffith president of the Senators, admittedly is worried about five key ballplayers who stubbornly refuse to come to terms. The five include last year's regular outfield of Roy Sievers, Albie Pearson and Jim Lemon, and the two most effective pitchers on the club—Pedro Ramos and Camilo Pascual.

Maroons Tumble Tigers, 75 To 67

By W. B. RAGSDALE JR.

BATON ROUGE (AP) — Louisiana State tossed a halter on highscoring Bailey Howell Saturday night but his Mississippi State teammates raced to a 75-67 victory that all but clinched a tie for the Southeastern Conference basketball title.

Mississippi State, with a 12-1 SEC record, matches Auburn which lost its first game to Kentucky 75-56 Saturday night. Both teams have two games left.

Three LSU players, Jim Crisco, Lynn Moon and Joe Combs, fouled out while guarding Howell but they held him to 17 points, only three of them in the second half.

Howell, who had a 28.8 point per game average before the game, fouled out with 17 seconds remaining. He sat out more than six minutes of the second half with four personal fouls.

The 17 points boosted Howell's three-year scoring total to 1,992 points, ten short of Bob Pettit's three-year record while playing for LSU.

Moon was high scorer for the game with 20 points but all five Mississippi State regulars scored in double figures.

The Maroons led all the way after the first few minutes, boosting their margin as much as 20 points early in the second half. Mississippi State led 52-35 at intermission.

LSU staged a closing drive that cut the margin to the final eight points in a wild, rough contest that saw fights narrowly averted several times. A total of 50 personal fouls was called, 28 against LSU and 22 against Mississippi State.

Mississippi State scored on 27 of 67 shots from the floor while LSU hit on 26 of 67.

It was LSU's 11th straight loss in SEC play for a 1-11 record.

TO PLAY OR NOT TO PLAY?

Unwritten Sports Law Haunts State

By JOHN HERBERS

JACKSON, Miss., Feb. 21 — (UPI) — How does an unwritten law come into being and where do you go to find it?

That question was being asked frequently this week in the debate over whether to let Mississippi State play in the sure-to-be integrated national collegiate basketball tournament.

To become effective a written law must be passed by the legislature and signed by the governor. In this case the unwritten law can be found in no public record, but it is branded on the minds of college officials. Here's how it came about:

In 1955 when the race issue was perhaps at its peak in Mississippi, Jones junior college was asked to play football in the junior Rose Bowl against Compton, Calif., junior college which had eight Negro players.

There was a debate over whether the team should go. Gov. Hugh White and Gov.-elect J. P. Coleman said the decision was up to the school's board of trustees. The team wanted to go despite objections by the then-budding Citizens' Councils who said it would "be interpreted by the NAACP and other 'Mixiecrats' as furthering the cause of integration."

The board of the Ellisville school voted to go ahead and play. Jones got beat in a thriller, 22-13. A worse licking was in store for the school officials in the state capitol.

Legislative leaders were demanding that Jones be censurd or punished in some way. In a closed meeting the presidents of more than a dozen junior colleges promised the legislators their teams would play no racially-mixed teams thereafter.

They made the agreement under threat of having their appropriations slashed and passage of bills specifically banning interracial competition by Mississippi teams.

The number and identity of the legislators involved was not disclosed but Rep. Russell Fox of Claiborne county and other members of the house appropriations committee were reported to be the leaders.

The issue was never mentioned on the floor of either house and what happened at the meeting did not leak out for a long time. But the agreement made in the meeting was accepted as applying to all Mississippi institutions.

A year later Pearl River junior college turned down the little Rose Bowl because of the agreement. Both Mississippi and Mississippi State withdrew basketball teams from national tournaments when it became known back home some of the teams participating had Negroes. The year before the State had played against an integrated team in North Carolina without a ripple of protest.

After the state basketball team came home from the Evansville, Ind., invitational, state President Ben Hilbun said the team had been led to believe there were no Negroes in the tournament and he ordered the Maroons home as soon as he found out.

"We will never do it (play against Negroes, as long as I control it," Hilbun was quoted.

Later Jackson State College for Negroes was kept from participating in a national tournament for the same reason despite student protests.

While the debate was underway this week as to whether State should play with the rest of the nation, House Speaker Walter Sillers was asked casually what he thought about it.

"There's no doubt in my mind," Sillers said, explaining that the team simply should not go.

However, other officials were passing the buck like a hot potato and Gov. Coleman said the legislature should be polled.

Assuming State wins its games Saturday and Monday, next week may decide whether the "unwritten law" is repealed or becomes permanent.

Church Meet Crown Won By Edgewood

Edgewood, West Monroe Baptists and College Place won division crowns in the District 2 State Basketball Tournament sponsored by the First Baptist Church of West Monroe here yesterday.

Led by L. V. Norris' 27 points, Edgewood defeated West Monroe Baptists, 60-40, for first place in the adult bracket. Tommy Wren dropped in 9 points to pace the losers.

In the 17-year-old division, West Monroe Baptists squeezed past College Place, 47-43, for the title. David Wiggins led the winning attack with 15 points, while Paynex's 11 counters was high for College Place.

The 14-year-old crown went to College Place on a 19-17 decision over Pineville Park of Alexandria. Hale had 6 points for the champs and Dyson, with 9, topped Pineville.

Trophies were awarded to first place winners in each of the three divisions.

Preliminary contests in the adult division saw Edgewood stop College Place, 73-59, Liberty nip Victory, 42-40, Edgewood beat Pineville Park, 73-71, and West Monroe Baptists down Liberty, 59-39.

In the middle class, College Place tripped Pineville Park, 47-19, and West Monroe Baptists dropped Monroe Baptists, 35-32.

Three Players Lead SLC In 74-57 Verdict

HAMMOND, La. (AP) — Three Southeastern Louisiana players hit 17 points each Saturday night as SLC won a 74-57 Gulf States Conference victory over McNeese.

Stan Kernan had 15 points in leading McNeese. He fouled out with 11 minutes remaining.

SLC jumped to a two-point lead at the start and was never headed. By halftime the lead was 41-24.

McNeese outscored SLC from the floor, hitting 21 goals to SLC's 20, but SLC capitalized on 29 McNeese fouls with 34 charity points.

Klosterman had 14 rebounds and Shanks 10 if SLC's 43 rebounds. McNeese had 26 rebounds.

Jacobs Takes One-Stroke Lead After Third Round

By HAROLD V. RATLIFF

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Tommy Jacobs, a sophomore on the golf tour, shot a 5-under-par 65 Saturday to take the lead at 54 holes in the $20,000 Texas Open.

The blond 24-year-old from Whittier, Calif., was six strokes behind with 142 starting the third round. But his 65, fashioned with some fine putting, gave him the low round of the day and a one-stroke lead with a score of 207.

Much of Saturday's round was played in a driving rain and with the temperature around 40 degrees. Even so 19 players bettered par over the 6,490-yard Brackenridge Park Course.

Wes Ellis Jr. of Aldecress, N. J., the first day leader, did a 72 today for 209 and a tie for third place.

Deadlocked with Ellis were Mike Souchak of Grossinger, N. Y., who shot a 71; Tom Nieporte of Bronxville, N. Y., and Al Balding of Markham, Canada.

Johnston played a scrambling round during which he missed four greens. He made up with it with some fine recovery shots and long putts. He eagled the ninth hole with a 20-foot putt and he had a 20-footer on 13 for a birdie.

Jimenez said, "I really goofed today. I had trouble on the par 3 holes where I shouldn't have had trouble." Jimenez fell down to a tie for tenth place.

KENTUCKY WINS, 75-56

Auburn Winning Streak Shattered

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP)—Kentucky shattered Auburn's 30-game winning streak, using a balanced attack and defensive pressure for a 75-56 victory Saturday night in a prestige - packed Southeastern Conference basketball game.

A hot - shooting first half wrapped up the decision for the third - ranked Wildcats and snapped the nation's longest winning streak for the second-ranked Auburn club.

Kentucky raced to a 46-26 lead at halftime and was content to play it cautious in the second session, staying in front by 16 to 19 points all period.

Johnny Cox and Billy Ray Lickert each tallied 18 points, Bennie Coffman added 16 and Dickie Parsons added 14 in the well-balanced Wildcat attack.

For Auburn, Jimmy Lee and Henry Hart had 12 apiece

Auburn, the SEC leader, had its only advantage in the opening minutes, going ahead once by three points and holding its last lead at 11-9 with 14:12 remaining in the half.

Coffman hit a free throw and Cox added a fielder to put Kentucky on top by one, and the Wildcats went onto extend their edge twice to 21 points before intermission.

One spurt in which Kentucky outscored Auburn 12-2 applied the clincher.

Rex Frederick, Auburn's leading scorer, was held to five points under the sharp defensive play of Lickert and finally was banished with 2:28 to go when he tangled with Kentucky reserve Bobby Slusher.

The officials ruled it a double foul and Slusher was removed by the Kentucky coaches as tempers flared in the rugged contest.

For Auburn, this was the first setback since losing to Alabama in January of 1958. The 30 wins were only two short of the SEC mark set by Kentucky several seasons back.

Kentucky Coach Adolph Rupp said the game was a question of superb defense beating the nation's best offense. He alluded to Auburn's 49 per cent seasonal shooting average, second best in the nation.

Rupp said "our boys were superb" and he added "you can't give Lickert too much praise."

DETROIT — (UPI) —Alex Delvecchio of the Detroit Red Wings, an eight-year veteran in the National Hockey League, scored the first three-goal "hat trick" of his career this season in a game against the Chicago Black Hawks.

WELL-BALANCED SQUAD

Versatility Key To Auburn Success

NEW YORK (UPI) — All you have to do is look at the statistics to see why Auburn's hot-shooting Tigers are among the nation's best major college basketball teams.

Versatility in most phases of the game has carried Auburn to a 19-0 record through games played Thursday night, but the Tigers almost perfect balance between offense and defense has been one of the most important factors in their rise to national prominence.

No other team this season can match the Tigers' feat of ranking among the top 20 in both scoring and defense. What's more, Auburn leads in average margin of victory (20.2) and in field goal accuracy (.490). Only once before, George Washington (.500) in 1956, has any major team bettered the rate of floor shooting excellence exhibited by the Tigers this season.

Miami (Fla.) is the nation's offense leader with an 86.2 per-game average, while California is the defense leader with a 51.0 mark. Auburn (80.0) is 16th in scoring and 20th in defense (59.8).

None of the Auburn players rank among the individual scoring leaders, currently paced by Cincinnati's Oscar Robertson, who has a 33.1 scoring average. However, five Auburn players are scoring in double figures with averages ranging from 13.4 to 10.5, and they have accounted for 75 per cent of the team's overall offense.

Robertson, idle for 10 days, came back to action with a 34-point performance in his only outing of the week to improve his average. Ralph Crosthwaite of Western Kentucky connected on 30 of his 44 floor shots to boost his floor shooting percentage average to .632, while free throw leader Granville Williams of Morehead State increased his average to .891, making good on his only two chances from the free throw line during the week.

NOT JUST YET

Milwaukee Can't Suspend Conley

By CHUCK CAPALDO

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Milwaukee Braves threatened Saturday to suspend Gene Conley, their basketball-minded right - hander, but then found out that they can't —just yet anyway.

The defending National League champions labeled the 6-foot-8 pitcher a holdout instead, and said if he doesn't sign his contract by opening day (April 9), he'll be suspended.

There's a chance that Conley, who has been playing with the Boston Celtics this winter, will be tied up in the National Basketball Assn. playoffs as late as April 12.

With Conley contributing four points, the Celts clinched their third straight Eastern Division championship Friday night with a 111-106 overtime victory over Detroit.

He said if Conley didn't check in Saturday with the batterymen he would be suspended.

Conley then countered from his home here:

"I'm going to remain with the Celts until the last ball is thrown through the hoop. Besides, I could not work out if I was there. I haven't signed my contract."

Birdie Tebbetts, the Braves' executivevice president, was asked whether the club would go through with its threat.

At first Tebbetts backed Haney's hand, but then said that baseball law forbids suspensions until opening day.

"He is a holdout as of today because he didn't report as ordered," Birdie said. "If he hasn't reported by opening day, He'll be suspended."

"I suppose he (Conley) is a little bit confused, what with basketball and baseball overlapping," Tebbetts added.

"But, he'd better make his choice soon between the two. He was cut twice by the Celtics during the seasdn. The only thing that saved him were all those injuries they had."

"I feel an obligation to the Celtics," said Conley, "and I'm not going to quit them."

The Braves, with an eye on Conley's 0-6 won-lost record last year, have asked him to take a maximum 25 per cent cut in salary.

State Downs Villanova By 66-56 Margin

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI)— North Carolina State took advantage of its free-throw opportunities Saturday night to come from behind in the second half for a 66-56 win over Villanova.

The nationally six-ranked Wolfpack trailed by five points, 37-32, at the end of the first half but went ahead to stay 48-46 on a jump shot by Capt. Lou Pucillo with 7:20 left in the second half.

Villanova, paced by Capt. Joe Ryan and George Raveling, kept it close until the closing two minutes when the Pack pulled ahead.

State collected 19 of its 34 second-half points at the free throw-line and it was only the Wolfpack foul shooting that kept them in the game.

State had jumped into an 11-1 lead at the start of the game but Villanova pulled ahead 26-25 on a shot by John Driscoll with 7:05 left in the half. The Wildcats led for the rest of the half and were ahead 37-32 at halftime.

The score was tied five times at the start of the second half before the Wolfpack pulled ahead to stay.

Ryan led the scoring for both teams with 21 points while Raveling and Driscoll had 13 points each for the losers. Pucillo paced State with 18, followed by Bob MacGillivray with 15 and John Richter with 14.

Oak Grove Captures 2-A Girls' Crown

WINNSBORO, La. (Special) — Oak Grove's girls won the District 2-A crown here last night with a 46-45 victory over Winnsboro, despite a 35-point scoring spree by the Wildcats' Claudine Watson.

Winnsboro reeled off six points in the opening period before the Oak Grove sextet could manage a score. In the last period Winnsboro led, 45-44, with three minutes left, but the invaders forged ahead on two foul shots to win the game. The losers missed three field goal attempts in the final seconds.

Nelda Manley was high for Oak Grove, netting 22 points.

Winnsboro travels to Farmerville, first in 1-A, for a battle next Friday night. Oak Grove will host Winnfield next week.

Aaron Agrees To Terms For 1959 Season

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Hank Aaron, who had the third best slugging percentage in the National League last season, came to terms with the Milwaukee Braves Saturday.

The 24-year-old power hitter is believed to have agreed to a pact calling for approximately $40,000.

He was given permission to report for spring training one day late in order to assist in the opening of a Braves' baseball clinic and tryout school in St Thomas and St. Croix, Virgin Islands, Feb. 26 - March 1.

Aaron smashed 30 homers, batted in 95 runs and hit .326 last season as the Braves captured their second straight National League pennant.

Cooper, Barr Spark Tigers To 116-104 Win

GRAMBLING, La. (Special) — High-scoring James Cooper and Jerry Barr hit for a total of 70 points as Grambling potent scoring machine ground out a 116-104 cage victory over Texas Southern to clinch the Southwest Conference championship here last night.

Three other Tigers also hit in double figures for the winners. Charles Hardnett hooped 16, Howard Willis 12, and Rex Tippitt, 12.

DELANY ALSO

Thomas, O'Brien Shatter Records

NEW YORK (AP)—John Thomas, the 17-year-old Boston University freshman, got off a 7 foot, 1¾ inch high jump—better than any human being in history—and Ron Delany shattered the world indoor mile record in a wholesale assault on world standards Saturday night in the National AAU Track and Field Championships.

Parry O'Brien earlier set a new world indoor shotput record with a heave of 62 feet, 1¾ inches.

O'Brien's mark was the second world record set in the star-studded meet. During the afternoon, Bob Backus of the New York, A.C. tossed the 35-pound weight throw 66 feet, 2¾ inches, smashing his own world standard of 64-4¼.

The 27-year-old, 230 - pound O'Brien thus bettered his own listed world indoor mark of 61-5½. However, he had a throw of 61-8½ in Frankfort, Germany, last year, which has not been recognized.

"And," he said, "I found out that my shot was about a half pound overweight because I have been using saddle soap on it.

"But I don't want to cause any disturbance, so I decided to try my luck with it instead of switching."

Backus, a 270-pound Mansfield, Mass., salesman, who once was washed out of the Air Force because he was underweight, captured the weight throw for the sixth year in a row. It also marked the second straight year he has broken his own world standard.

Last year, he set the record that now is on the books—65-4¼.

Madison Square Garden was not big enough for the weight throwers, so the test was held in the seclusion of an armory a couple of miles away.

It was just 10 years ago that Backus, a scrawny 6-5, 170 pounder first entered the meet. He was a sophomore at Tufts College and tossed the irons just under 50 feet.

But he began building himself up by weight lifting and he's still at it.

He hasn't been going good this season, and, in fact, had been beaten by Stew Thomson, his New York A.C. teammate, in four of their five meetings.

"But today I was in good shape," Backus gloated. "In previous years I think I have started too soon and was on the downgrade when I got to the national championships. I didn't take that chance this time."

Thomson, a former Yale star, was second with a 63-10 heave, while Al Hall, also of the NYAC, finished third with 61-11¾.

Steve Dillon, New York A.C., was fourth with a throw of 60-7¼, and John Lawlor of Boston University by way of Ireland was fifth with 60-1½.

Not too many years ago, a 60-foot weight throw was akin to a four-minute mile. Today, a 60 - footer wouldn't even have placed.

Terps Upset Top-Ranked Tars, 69-51

The 6-2 junior from Elizabeth, N.J., took over his team's scoring midway through the second half and reeled off Maryland's next 18 points.

He finished with a total of 28

With 50 of his home town fans, including his parents, among the crowd of 11,800 in Cole Field House, Bechtle started his hot streak with Maryland ahead 41-30

Hitting on driving lay ups and one hand push shots over North Carolina's zone defense, Bechtle outscored the Tar Heels by two points during his 18-point scoring spree.

The loss was the first in 12 Atlantic Coast Conference games for the Tar Heels, who had their 11-game winning streak—against all competition—broken.

North Carolina is 17-2 for the season compared to Maryland's 8-12 record.

Bosox Negro Denied Hotel Reservations

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Pumpsey Greene, first Negro ever to play for the Boston Red Sox, has been denied hotel accomodations in Scottsdale, club officials said Saturday.

The Red Sox, here for spring training, are headquartered at the fashionable Safari Hotel. However some of the players are staying at other Scottsdale resort hotels.

The Safari, along with many other Scottsdale hotels, is restricted. But Bosox publicity man Jack Malaney insisted that only the normal seasonal tourist jam was responsible.

Tom Dowd, the club's traveling secretary, said, "Arrangements have been made for Greene to stay in a plush hotel in Phoenix." But he declined to name it.

Greene also will be furnished an auto to commute between Phoenix and Boston's nearby training camp, Dowd said.

Greene, an infielder who played for Minneapolis last year, is expected to arrive next week.

La. College Defeats Corpus Christi, 93-57

The scoring leader for Corpus Christi was Milburn Gant. Walter Sharp had 13 for Corpus Christi.

The Louisiana College season-end tally was seven victories and 13 losses. Corpus Christi came out of the two game series with an 11-14 record, losing both games here.

Fuell Running With Southern Second Squad

Fuell was banned from the Southeastern Conference for his part in the Auburn recruiting scandal. He was charged with accepting expensive gifts to enroll at Auburn, where he played as a freshman.

Coach Pie Vann said junior Billy Larson of Pascagoula was the leading contender for the quarterback position.

Kentucky raced to a 46-26 lead at halftime and was content to play it cautious in the second session, staying in front by 16 to 19 points all period.

Johnny Cox and Billy Ray Lickert each tallied 18 points, Bennie Coffman added 16 and Dickie Parsons added 14 in the well-balanced Wildcat attack.

For Auburn, Jimmy Lee and Henry Hart had 12 apiece.

Auburn, the SEC leader, had its only advantage in the opening minutes, going ahead once by three points and holding its last lead at 11-9 with 14:12 remaining in the half.

Coffman hit a free throw and Cox added a fielder to put Kentucky on top by one, and the Wildcats went onto extend their edge twice to 21 points before intermission.

One spurt in which Kentucky outscored Auburn 12-2 applied the clincher.

Rex Frederick, Auburn's leading scorer, was held to five points under the sharp defensive play of Lickert and finally was banished with 2:28 to go when he tangled with Kentucky reserve Bobby Slusher.

The officials ruled it a double foul and Slusher was removed by the Kentucky coaches as tempers flared in the rugged contest.

For Auburn, this was the first setback since losing to Alabama in January of 1958. The 30 wins were only two short of the SEC mark set by Kentucky several seasons back.

Kentucky Coach Adolph Rupp said the game was a question of superb defense beating the nation's best offense. He alluded to Auburn's 49 per cent seasonal shooting average, second best in the nation.

Rupp said "our boys were superb" and he added "you can't give Lickert too much praise."

VET'S FIRST 'HAT TRICK'

DETROIT — (UPI) —Alex Delvecchio of the Detroit Red Wings, an eight-year veteran in the National Hockey League, scored the first three-goal "hat trick" of his career this season in a game against the Chicago Black Hawks.

WELL-BALANCED SQUAD

Versatility Key To Auburn Success

NEW YORK (UPI) — All you have to do is look at the statistics to see why Auburn's hot-shooting Tigers are among the nation's best major college basketball teams.

Versatility in most phases of the game has carried Auburn to a 19-0 record through games played Thursday night, but the Tigers almost perfect balance between offense and defense has been one of the most important factors in their rise to national prominence.

No other team this season can match the Tigers' feat of ranking among the top 20 in both scoring and defense. What's more, Auburn leads in average margin of victory (20.2) and in field goal accuracy (.490). Only once before, George Washington (.500) in 1956, has any major team bettered the rate of floor shooting excellence exhibited by the Tigers this season.

Miami (Fla.) is the nation's offense leader with an 86.2 per-game average, while California is the defense leader with a 51.0 mark. Auburn (80.0) is 16th in scoring and 20th in defense (59.8).

None of the Auburn players rank among the individual scoring leaders, currently paced by Cincinnati's Oscar Robertson, who has a 33.1 scoring average. However, five Auburn players are scoring in double figures with averages ranging from 13.4 to 10.5, and they have accounted for 75 per cent of the team's overall offense.

Robertson, idle for 10 days, came back to action with a 34-point performance in his only outing of the week to improve his average. Ralph Crosthwaite of Western Kentucky connected on 30 of his 44 floor shots to boost his floor shooting percentage average to .632, while free throw leader Granville Williams of Morehead State increased his average to .891, making good on his only two chances from the free throw line during the week.

NOT JUST YET

Milwaukee Can't Suspend Conley

By CHUCK CAPALDO

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Milwaukee Braves threatened Saturday to suspend Gene Conley, their basketball-minded right - hander, but then found out that they can't —just yet anyway.

The defending National League champions labeled the 6-foot-8 pitcher a holdout instead, and said if he doesn't sign his contract by opening day (April 9), he'll be suspended.

There's a chance that Conley, who has been playing with the Boston Celtics this winter, will be tied up in the National Basketball Assn. playoffs as late as April 12.

With Conley contributing four points, the Celts clinched their third straight Eastern Division championship Friday night with a 111-106 overtime victory over Detroit.

He said if Conley didn't check in Saturday with the batterymen he would be suspended.

Conley then countered from his home here:

"I'm going to remain with the Celts until the last ball is thrown through the hoop. Besides, I could not work out if I was there. I haven't signed my contract."

Birdie Tebbetts, the Braves' executivevice president, was asked whether the club would go through with its threat.

At first Tebbetts backed Haney's hand, but then said that baseball law forbids suspensions until opening day.

"He is a holdout as of today because he didn't report as ordered," Birdie said. "If he hasn't reported by opening day, He'll be suspended."

"I suppose he (Conley) is a little bit confused, what with basketball and baseball overlapping," Tebbetts added.

"But, he'd better make his choice soon between the two. He was cut twice by the Celtics during the season. The only thing that saved him were all those injuries they had."

"I feel an obligation to the Celtics," said Conley, "and I'm not going to quit them."

The Braves, with an eye on Conley's 0-6 won-lost record last year, have asked him to take a maximum 25 per cent cut in salary.

State Downs Villanova By 66-56 Margin

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI)— North Carolina State took advantage of its free-throw opportunities Saturday night to come from behind in the second half for a 66-56 win over Villanova.

The nationally six-ranked Wolfpack trailed by five points, 37-32, at the end of the first half but went ahead to stay 48-46 on a jump shot by Capt. Lou Pucillo with 7:20 left in the second half.

Villanova, paced by Capt. Joe Ryan and George Raveling, kept it close until the closing two minutes when the Pack pulled ahead.

State collected 19 of its 34 second-half points at the free throw line and it was only the Wolfpack foul shooting that kept them in the game.

State had jumped into an 11-1 lead at the start of the game but Villanova pulled ahead 26-25 on a shot by John Driscoll with 7:05 left in the half. The Wildcats led for the rest of the half and were ahead 37-32 at halftime.

The score was tied five times at the start of the second half before the Wolfpack pulled ahead to stay.

Ryan led the scoring for both teams with 21 points while Raveling and Driscoll had 13 points each for the losers. Pucillo paced State with 18, followed by Bob MacGillivray with 15 and John Richter with 14.

Oak Grove Captures 2-A Girls' Crown

WINNSBORO, La. (Special) — Oak Grove's girls won the District 2-A crown here last night with a 46-45 victory over Winnsboro, despite a 35-point scoring spree by the Wildcats' Claudine Watson.

Winnsboro reeled off six points in the opening period before the Oak Grove sextet could manage a score. In the last period Winnsboro led, 45-44, with three minutes left, but the invaders forged ahead on two foul shots to win the game. The losers missed three field goal attempts in the final seconds.

Nelda Manley was high for Oak Grove, netting 22 points.

Winnsboro travels to Farmerville, first in 1-A, for a battle next Friday night. Oak Grove will host Winnfield next week.

Aaron Agrees To Terms For 1959 Season

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Hank Aaron, who had the third best slugging percentage in the National League last season, came to terms with the Milwaukee Braves Saturday.

The 24-year-old power hitter is believed to have agreed to a pact calling for approximately $40,000.

He was given permission to report for spring training one day late in order to assist in the opening of a Braves' baseball clinic and tryout school in St. Thomas and St. Croix, Virgin Islands, Feb. 26 - March 1.

Aaron smashed 30 homers, batted in 95 runs and hit .326 last season as the Braves captured their second straight National League pennant.

Cooper, Barr Spark Tigers To 116-104 Win

GRAMBLING, La. (Special) — High-scoring James Cooper and Jerry Barr hit for a total of 70 points as Grambling potent scoring machine ground out a 116-104 cage victory over Texas Southern to clinch the Southwest Conference championship here last night.

Three other Tigers also hit in double figures for the winners. Charles Hardnett hooped 16, Howard Willis 12, and Rex Tippitt, 12.

Thomas, O'Brien Shatter Records

NEW YORK (AP)—John Thomas, the 17-year-old Boston University freshman, got off a 7 foot, 1¼ inch high jump—better than any human being in history—and Ron Delany shattered the world indoor mile record in a wholesale assault on world standards Saturday night in the National AAU Track and Field Championships.

Parry O'Brien earlier set a new world indoor shotput record with a heave of 62 feet, 1¾ inches.

O'Brien's mark was the second world record set in the star-studded meet. During the afternoon, Bob Backus of the New York, A.C. tossed the 35-pound weight throw 66 feet, 2¾ inches, smashing his own world standard of 64-4¼.

The 27-year-old, 230 - pound O'Brien thus bettered his own listed world indoor mark of 61-5½. However, he had a throw of 61-8½ in Frankfort, Germany, last year, which has not been recognized.

O'Brien also holds the world out door record of 62-2.

"And," he said, "I found out that my shot was about a half pound overweight because I have been using saddle soap on it.

"But I don't want to cause any disturbance, so I decided to try my luck with it instead of switching."

Backus, a 270-pound Mansfield, Mass., salesman, who once was washed out of the Air Force because he was underweight, captured the weight throw for the sixth year in a row. It also marked the second straight year he has broken his own world standard.

Last year, he set the record that now is on the books—65-4¼.

Madison Square Garden was not big enough for the weight throwers, so the test was held in the seclusion of an armory a couple of miles away.

It was just 10 years ago that Backus, a scrawny 6-5, 170 pounder first entered the meet. He was a sophomore at Tufts College and tossed the irons just under 50 feet.

But he began building himself up by weight lifting and he's still at it.

He hasn't been going good this season, and, in fact, had been beaten by Stew Thomson, his New York A.C. teammate, in four of their five meetings.

"But today I was in good shape," Backus gloated. "In previous years I think I have started too soon and was on the downgrade when I got to the national championships. I didn't take that chance this time."

Thomson, a former Yale star, was second with a 63-10 heave, while Al Hall, also of the NYAC, finished third with 61-11¾.

Steve Dillon, New York A.C., was fourth with a throw of 60-7¼, and John Lawlor of Boston University by way of Ireland was fifth with 60-1½.

Not too many years ago, a 60-foot weight throw was akin to a four-minute mile. Today, a 60 - footer wouldn't even have placed.

Backus made his record throw on his third try and he turned three times. In other years, he hasn't always used the three-turn method.

La. College Defeats Corpus Christi, 93-57

The Louisiana team led all the way and at halftime had a 42-32 margin.

The scoring leader for Corpus Christi was Milburn Gant. Walter Sharp had 13 for Corpus Christi.

The Louisiana College season-end tally was seven victories and 13 losses. Corpus Christi came out of the two game series with an 11-14 record, losing both games here.

Fuell Running With Southern Second Squad

Fuell was banned from the Southeastern Conference for his part in the Auburn recruiting scandal. He was charged with accepting expensive gifts to enroll at Auburn, where he played as a freshman.

Coach Pie Vann said junior Billy Larson of Pascagoula was the leading contender for the quarterback position.

UCLANS DROP WALLACE

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Ron Wallace, a center on the UCLA basketball team, has been dropped from the squad because of academic difficulties. A junior, Wallace had scored 76 points in 14 games this season.

Terps Upset Top-Ranked Tars, 69-51

The 6-2 junior from Elizabeth, N.J., took over his team's scoring midway through the second half and reeled off Maryland's next 18 points.

He finished with a total of 28.

With 50 of his home town fans, including his parents, among the crowd of 11,800 in Cole Field House, Bechtle started his hot streak with Maryland ahead 41-30.

Hitting on driving lay ups and one hand push shots over North Carolina's zone defense, Bechtle outscored the Tar Heels by two points during his 18-point scoring spree.

The loss was the first in 12 Atlantic Coast Conference games for the Tar Heels, who had their 11-game winning streak—against all competition—broken.

North Carolina is 17-2 for the season compared to Maryland's 8-12 record.

Browns Slate Nov. 1 Contest With Baltimore

BALTIMORE (AP)—The Cleveland Browns will make their first Baltimore appearance since 1950 this year when they meet the Colts Nov. 1 in a National Football League game.

The 1959 home schedule announced Saturday by the world champion Colts has the Chicago Bears scheduled for Oct. 3 in the only night game. The home schedule:

Oct. 3, Chicago Bears; 25, Green Bay Packers.

Nov. 1, Cleveland Browns; 22, San Francisco 49ers; 29, Los Angles Rams.

Bosox Negro Denied Hotel Reservations

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Pumpsey Greene, first Negro ever to play for the Boston Red Sox, has been denied hotel accomodations in Scottsdale, club officials said Saturday.

The Red Sox, here for spring training, are headquartered at the fashionable Safari Hotel. However some of the players are staying at other Scottsdale resort hotels.

The Safari, along with many other Scottsdale hotels, is restricted. But Bosox publicity man Jack Malaney insisted that only the normal seasonal tourist jam was responsible.

Tom Dowd, the club's traveling secretary, said, "Arrangements have been made for Greene to stay in a plush hotel in Phoenix." But he declined to name it.

Greene also will be furnished an auto to commute between Phoenix and Boston's nearby training camp, Dowd said.

Greene, an infielder who played for Minneapolis last year, is expected to arrive next week.

WILDLIFE MEETING

Glasgow Selected Year's Leading Conservationist

By SAM HANNA
Staff Writer

BATON ROUGE, La —An outstanding conservationist was named, resolutions were drafted and the Louisiana Outdoor Writers' Association elected officers here yesterday as the state-wide sportsmans' meeting neared an end.

The Louisiana Wildlife Federation will close its annual convention today with the election of officers.

The Outdoor Writers then elected Paul Kalman, New Orleans, as their new president; Sam Hanna, Monroe, vice president, and Col Bill Hornsey, Baton Rouge, secretary. Mrs. Gwen Perkins, Oakdale, was re-elected editor of the "Outsider," the association's publication.

Glasgow, who trained most of Louisiana's biologists, was the first recipient of the newly-established conservation award.

A native of Indiana, he has spent the past 11 years in Louisiana. More than 40 student have received their master's degrees in game management under Glasgow.

Sportsmen attending the session Saturday heard addresses from E. R. McDonald Sr., chairman of the Louisiana Wild Life and Fisheries Commission of Newellton; Ralph H. Allen Jr., Alabama department of conservation; J. H. Kitchens, Louisiana Forestry Association; Col. J. M. Cookson, U. S. Corps of Engineers, and Ion S. W. Walker, International Paper Company.

BOTH HOLD RECORDS

Gutowski, Bragg In Heated Duel

QUANTICO, Va (AP) — The foremost thought in the mind of one Marine Corps officer must be how to beat a particular Army private.

The officer is 2nd Lt. Robert Allen Gutowski, a student at the Marine Corps Officers' Basic School at Quantico. The private is Pfc Don Bragg of Ft. Dix, N.J.

The two have many things in common. Both graduated from college—Gutowski from Occidental and Bragg from Villanova. Both are now in the service and both are athletes—specializing in track.

And possibly the most striking similarity is that both hold world pole vaulting records—Gutowski outdoors and Bragg indoors.

Gutowski has been meeting Bragg regularly in this winter's indoor track meets with the same result—a second place finish. And often the figue 15 feet, 4½ inches has been a factor.

In the recent Washington Star Games, Gutowski tied Bragg with a vault of 15 feet 4½ inches. But Bragg won by virtue of requiring fewer vaults to clear the mark.

Just last Friday in Philadelphia, Gutowski vaulted 15 feet, 4½ inches again. But Bragg that night set a world indoor record of 15 feet, 9½ inches. The following day Bragg cleared 15 feet, 4½ inches in Madison Square Garden in New York, but Gutowski made only 15 feet, 3 inches.

Gutowski, however, still has hopes of beating Bragg in one of the remaining indoor meets. The 22-year-old marine has the qualifications.

A son of Mr. and Mrs. Julius P. Gutowski of La Jolla, Calif., Gutowski lettered in basketball at La Jolla High School and went to college on a basketball scholarship.

At Occidental he majored in chemistry and participated in his favorite sport—track. He compiled marks of 24 feet, 5½ inches in the broad jump and 9.7 seconds in the 100-yard dash to go along with his pole vaulting feats.

In a meet against Stanford Gutowski set a world outdoor pole vaulting record of 15 feet 8½ inches. He broke his own record with a vault of 15 feet, 9¾ inches in the NCAA championships at Austin, Tex., June 15, 1957.

Gutowski won a silver medal in the 1956 Olympics by placing second with a vault of 14 feet, 10½ inches. He was the national collegiate pole vaulting champion in 1957 and 1958.

Baton Rouge Open To Start Thursday

BATON ROUGE (AP) — Ken Venturi, a runaway winner in 1958, heads a rugged field Thursday in the eighth annual $15,000 Baton Rouge Open golf tournament, first section of a $35,000 Louisiana bag of prizes.

The following week the PGA tour moves on for the $20,000 New Orleans Open, resumed last year after a lapse of several years.

A number of professionals on the winter tour will pick up some extra money in Baton Rouge Tuesday in a $3,000 pro-amateur event sponsored by the Sherwood Forest Country Club.

The field for the pro-amateur event will be trimmed somewhat because qualifying for the PGA event is scheduled the same day.

Venturi shot four consecutive three-under-par 69 rounds last year in winning the Baton Rouge Open by four strokes, widest margin in the history of the event.

His 276 for 72 holes was only one stroke over the tournament mark racked up by Sam Snead in 1953. The 26-year-old San Franciscan was over par only four times in 72 holes.

Venturi's precise, almost errorless golf style is made to order for the 6,450-yard Baton Rouge Country Club course.

The tourney annually draws a standout field, despite its relatively low-prize money, because pros enjoy playing the gently rolling, bayou-slashed course, with fairways lined by stately moss-draped oaks.

Not exceptionally long, the neatly manicured course, however, provides a stiff test, even for the best in professional ranks. The fairways are narrow, and there are traps carefully placed to snare a shot even slightly out of line.

No champion ever has repeated in the event. The 1957 winner, Jimmy Demaret, finished in a tie for 13th last year.

Twice the event has ended in a three-way tie. Jackie Burke won the first tournament in 1952, defeating Tommy Bolt and Bill Nary. No Wininger won in 1955 by whipping Jimmy Clark and Billy Maxwell in the playoff.

Spider Webb Favored To Whip Boyd

NEW YORK (UPI)—Two middleweight (160-pound) fights will be televised nationally next week.

Contenders Spider Webb and Bobby Boyd, both of Chicago, meet in a return 10-rounder on Wednesday night at the Chicago Stadium, over ABC-TV.

For the Wednesday bout, third-ranked Webb is favored at 11-5 to beat sixth-rated Boyd. The Spider knocked out Boyd in the sixth round of their previous fight on March 17, 1954, when both were comparative novices.

Webb is favored to win again because of his combined boxer-puncher prowess. The Spider lost only four of his 35 bouts, 13 of which were won by knockouts. Boyd lost 10 of his 55 starts and had three draws. He scored 22 kayoes.

For Friday's fight, Armstrong of Elizabeth, N.J., ranked ninth, is favored at 2-1 over veteran Scortichini, who is returning to the American ring wars after a two-year absence in Europe. Unrated Scortichini has a 41-22-7 record that includes 15 kayoes. Light-punching but speedy Armstrong registered but one knockout while winning all of his 16 starts.

SPEARSVILLE, La. (Special) — Neville's boys and Lisbon's girls grabbed first honors in the annual Undergraduates Basketball Tournament completed here last night.

Neville romped past Linville, 61-51, in the boys' final, despite 30 points by Linville's Norman Pace. Dooley Haddad collected 19 points for the Tigers, while Hershel Walker chipped in 11 and Gordon Gibson added 10.

Semi-final boys' games were won by Neville, 43-42 over Spearsville, and Linville, 77-67, over Chatham. L. M. Welch led Neville with 11 points, and Joey Barron tossed in 14 for Spearsville. Pace had a sensational game for Linville as he poured in 49 points. Allen Barr put in 35 for Chatham.

In the girls' semi-finals, Spearsville stopped Linville, 41-28, and Lisbon nipped Bernice, 29 - 23. Floye Harris and Frances Mitcham had 17 and 16 respectively for Spearsville, and Miss Hill scored 8 for the losers. Sue Westbrook, with 17 topped Lisbon, and Fran Fitzgerald sank 12 for Bernice.

Tulane Rolls To 81-65 Win Over Rebels

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Dickie O'Brien scored 22 points Saturday night to pace Tulane to an impressive 81-65 Southeastern Conference victory over Mississippi.

O'Brien—at 5-10 the smallest man on the floor—found his jump shots working to perfection. He fired 17 times and connected on 11. Behind his basket barrage, teammates Vick Klinker scored 15 points and Ronnie Mitchell and Gary Stoll each had 13.

Led by Jack Waters and Ivan Richmann, Mississippi took the lead in the opening minutes and held it most of the first half but Tulane rallied to hold a 38-31 lead at intermission.

Mississippi matched baskets for only a few minutes in the second half. With Tulane in front 44-37, O'Brien then popped in four one handers to put the Green Wave far ahead.

Tulane's overall shooting percentage was 38.5 compared to the visitors' 30.6.

Richmann was the high scorer for Mississippi with 18 points while Waters had 17.

WILDLIFE MEETING

Glasgow Selected Year's Leading Conservationist

By SAM HANNA
Staff Writer

BATON ROUGE, La —An outstanding conservationist was named, resolutions were drafted and the Louisiana Outdoor Writers' Association elected officers here yesterday as the state-wide sportsmans' meeting neared an end.

The Louisiana Wildlife Federation will close its annual convention today with the election of officers.

The Outdoor Writers then elected Paul Kalman, New Orleans, as their new president; Sam Hanna, Monroe, vice president, and Col. Bill Hornsey, Baton Rouge, secretary. Mrs. Gwen Perkins, Oakdale, was re-elected editor of the "Outsider," the association's publication.

Glasgow, who trained most of Louisiana's biologists, was the first recipient of the newly-established conservation award.

A native of Indiana, he has spent the past 11 years in Louisiana. More than 40 student have received their master's degrees in game management under Glasgow.

Sportsmen attending the session Saturday heard addresses from E. R. McDonald Sr., chairman of the Louisiana Wild Life and Fisheries Commission of Newellton; Ralph H. Allen Jr., Alabama department of conservation; J. H. Kitchens, Louisiana Forestry Association; Col. J. M. Cookson, U. S. Corps of Engineers, and Ion S. W. Walker, International Paper Company.

BOTH HOLD RECORDS

Gutowski, Bragg In Heated Duel

QUANTICO, Va. (AP) — The foremost thought in the mind of one Marine Corps officer must be how to beat a particular Army private.

The officer is 2nd Lt. Robert Allen Gutowski, a student at the Marine Corps Officers' Basic School at Quantico. The private is Pfc Don Bragg of Ft. Dix, N.J.

The two have many things in common. Both graduated from college—Gutowski from Occidental and Bragg from Villanova. Both are now in the service and both are athletes—specializing in track.

And possibly the most striking similarity is that both hold world pole vaulting records—Gutowski outdoors and Bragg indoors.

Gutowski has been meeting Bragg regularly in this winter's indoor track meets with the same result—a second place finish. And often the figue 15 feet, 4½ inches has been a factor.

In the recent Washington Star Games, Gutowski tied Bragg with a vault of 15 feet 4½ inches. But Bragg won by virtue of requiring fewer vaults to clear the mark.

Just last Friday in Philadelphia, Gutowski vaulted 15 feet, 4½ inches again. But Bragg that night set a world indoor record of 15 feet, 9½ inches. The following day Bragg cleared 15 feet, 4½ inches in Madison Square Garden in New York, but Gutowski made only 15 feet, 3 inches.

Gutowski, however, still has hopes of beating Bragg in one of the remaining indoor meets. The 22-year-old marine has the qualifications.

A son of Mr. and Mrs. Julius P. Gutowski of La Jolla, Calif., Gutowski lettered in basketball at La Jolla High School and went to college on a basketball scholarship.

At Occidental he majored in chemistry and participated in his favorite sport—track. He compiled marks of 24 feet, 5½ inches in the broad jump and 9.7 seconds in the 100-yard dash to go along with his pole vaulting feats.

In a meet against Stanford Gutowski set a world outdoor pole vaulting record of 15 feet 8½ inches. He broke his own record with a vault of 15 feet, 9¾ inches in the NCAA championships at Austin, Tex., June 15, 1957.

Gutowski won a silver medal in the 1956 Olympics by placing second with a vault of 14 feet, 10¾ inches. He was the national collegiate pole vaulting champion in 1957 and 1958.

Baton Rouge Open To Start Thursday

BATON ROUGE (AP) — Ken Venturi, a runaway winner in 1958, heads a rugged field Thursday in the eighth annual $15,000 Baton Rouge Open golf tournament, first section of a $35,000 Louisiana bag of prizes.

The following week the PGA tour moves on for the $20,000 New Orleans Open, resumed last year after a lapse of several years.

A number of professionals on the winter tour will pick up some extra money in Baton Rouge Tuesday in a $3,000 pro-amateur event sponsored by the Sherwood Forest Country Club.

The field for the pro-amateur event will be trimmed somewhat because qualifying for the PGA event is scheduled the same day.

Venturi shot four consecutive three-under-par 69 rounds last year in winning the Baton Rouge Open by four strokes, widest margin in the history of the event.

His 276 for 72 holes was only one stroke over the tournament mark racked up by Sam Snead in 1953. The 26-year-old San Franciscan was over par only four times in 72 holes.

Venturi's precise, almost errorless golf style is made to order for the 6,450-yard Baton Rouge Country Club course.

The tourney annually draws a standout field, despite its relatively low-prize money, because pros enjoy playing the gently rolling, bayou-slashed course, with fairways lined by stately moss-draped oaks.

Not exceptionally long, the neatly manicured course, however, provides a stiff test, even for the best in professional ranks. The fairways are narrow, and there are traps carefully placed to snare a shot even slightly out of line.

No champion ever has repeated in the event. The 1957 winner, Jimmy Demaret, finished in a tie for 13th last year.

Twice the event has ended in a three-way tie. Jackie Burke won the first tournament in 1952, defeating Tommy Bolt and Bill Nary. No Wininger won in 1955 by whipping Jimmy Clark and Billy Maxwell in the playoff.

Spider Webb Favored To Whip Boyd

NEW YORK (UPI)—Two middleweight (160-pound) fights will be televised nationally next week.

Contenders Spider Webb and Bobby Boyd, both of Chicago, meet in a return 10-rounder on Wednesday night at the Chicago Stadium, over ABC-TV.

For the Wednesday bout, third-ranked Webb is favored at 11-5 to beat sixth-rated Boyd. The Spider knocked out Boyd in the sixth round of their previous fight on March 17, 1954, when both were comparative novices.

Webb is favored to win again because of his combined boxer-puncher prowess. The Spider lost only four of his 35 bouts, 13 of which were won by knockouts. Boyd lost 10 of his 55 starts and had three draws. He scored 22 kayoes.

For Friday's fight, Armstrong of Elizabeth, N.J., ranked ninth, is favored at 2-1 over veteran Scortichini, who is returning to the American ring wars after a two-year absence in Europe. Unrated Scortichini has a 41-22-7 record that includes 15 kayoes. Light-punching but speedy Armstrong registered but one knockout while winning all of his 16 starts.

Kansas State Gains NCAA Playoff Spot

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Kansas State gained an NCAA playoff berth and at least a tie for the Big Eight Conference championship Saturday by beating Oklahoma State 62-50 in a regionally televised basketball game.

Bob Boozer, Kansas State's All-America candidate, again was the big gun for the Wildcats.

It was the 11th straight conference victory for Kansas State, the No. 4 team in The Associated Press poll.

The Cowboys pulled ahead in the early minutes to provide momentary excitement for a crowd of 5,500. Oklahoma State got a 9-5 lead and stayed in front until Ced Prince hit a field goal to send the Wildcats ahead 14-13 midway in the first half.

Oklahoma State spurted to a 22-20 lead but then Kansas State regained its poise and forged a half-time edge of 30-26.

The Wildcats were never behind after that as Boozer kept pitching in field goals, mostly from outside.

Boozer's final goal came at the buzzer ending the game and it was first announced the basket did not count. However, officials were consulted and ruled the shot was in the air when the buzzer sounded.

Oklahoma State was spearheaded by Arlen Clar who connected for 16 points.

Detroit Beats Black Hawks In TV Game

DETROIT (AP) — The Detroit Red Wings scored three goals while the Chicago Black Hawks were shorthanded and defeated the second-place Hawks 5-2 Saturday in a nationally televised National Hockey League matinee.

Squaring the season series with the Hawks with their third-straight home triumph, the Red Wings turned on more offensive punch than they have shown in their last 16 games.

It was a good comeback for Detroit, whose 7-0 whitewash by Montreal Thursday hurt the team's chances of making fourth place in the NHL standings and the Stanley Cup playoffs.

NFL Cardinals Add Lenn To Coaching Staff

CHICAGO (AP) — Wally Lenn, athletic director at Lake Forest College, Saturday was signed as an assistant coach by the Chicago Cardinals of the National Football League.

Lenn held a similar post with the Cardinals during the 1956 season when the club had an outstanding pass defense record.

BARNEY, MENACE MEET

Curtis, Petroff To Tangle Again

BLACK MENACE

Wild Bill Barney accepts the challenge of the Black Menace and Jack Curtis again meets that rough Russian, Serg Petroff, on tomorrow night's program at the local wrestling emporium, B & B arena.

The Petroff-Curtis engagement is billed as the main event with Barney and the Menace to tangle in the semi-final. The main go will have a 90-minute limit and the semi an hour limit. Both are slated for two falls to win.

Freddy Foster and Buddy Sharp, local amateurs, will meet in a 10-minute prelim to open the card.

Curtis blames the referee for his loss last week but Petroff contends the ref had nothing to do with his victory.

"It's no use him blaming anybody for losing", the Russian says, "I can beat most any wrestler, Curtis included, and I will give him another match to prove I'm smarter and tougher than he is."

Promoter Gus Baumgartner has this to say — "I'm having referee trouble. Referees are hard to get but we'll have a new one Monday night."

Louisiana heavyweight champion Bill Barney, silent in the face of the Menace's challenge last week, is boiling mad and ready to go Monday.

"This Black Menace has been jumping in and out of the ring, challenging me and calling me a coward. I asked him to put up $100 for a match but he don't want to put up any cash so I'll shut him up by fighting him in a nontitle match."

Bill, a gentlemanly soul most of the time, can get pretty rough when he's mad and he's pretty angry. The Menace doesn't have to be mad to be rough.

Favorites In Semifinals Of Indoor Tennis

NEW YORK (AP) — Defending champion Dick Savitt and three members of Uncle Sam's successful Davis Cup team—Alex Olmedo Barry MacKay and Earl Buchholz Jr.—made it an all-favorites semifinal Saturday in the National Indoor Tennis Championships.

Sunday in the dank confines of the Seventh Regiment Armory drill shed the top-seeded Savitt will play fourth-seeded Buchholz, the world's best junior, while Olmedo and MacKay renew an old rivalry. The finals are Monday.

Savitt, the towering ex-Wimbledon champion from New York, continued to display the most impressive tennis on the lightning fast boards as he breezed past Jack Frost of Monterey, Calif., 6-0, 6-3.

Olmedo, the pride of Peru, outclass Hugh Stewart of Pasadena Calif., 7-5, 6-3, to uphold his No. 2 seeding. MacKay, from Dayton, Ohio, played spottily for a comeback 4-6, 6-4, 6-1 triumph over 37-year - old Jaroslav Drobny of Egypt. Buchholz, St. Louis high school boy, topped Donald Dell, Yale University junior, 10-8, 6-3.

The feature match Sunday will be that between Olmedo and MacKay. The latter beat Olmedo in a five-set thriller at Merion last summer but the national Peruvian, who almost single-handedly captured the Davis Cup, has been ahead in their last three meetings.

State Board Member Okays Tourney Play

JACKSON, Miss. (UPI) — Only one member of the State College Board said he favors Mississippi State University competing in the NCAA basketball tournament in a poll conducted by the Jackson Daily News.

Dudley S. Bridgforth of Nesbitt said he was in favor of the team entering the tournament despite the fact that other teams in the tourney will be racially-integrated. "It looks like if we're ever going to compete in these national bowls and tournaments, we'll have to face it," he said.

Five members said they opposed the team going into the tourney and the eight others had no comment.

State, which has lost but one game, is expected to win the right to represent the Southeastern Conference in the tournament. Gov. J. P. Coleman has said the decision as to whether the team will enter is up to the College Board and the university.

Widener 'Cap To Bardstown For 2nd Time

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Seven-year-old Bardstown showed younger horses how to run Saturday, then survived a foul claim to win the $137,600 Widener Handicap for the second time in his career.

The Calumet Farm gelding, carrying high weight of 124 pounds, ran a brilliant race under jockey Steve Brooks. He went the mile and a quarter in 2:01 1-5, only one fifth of a second slower than the record set by El Mono in 1948.

Claiborne Farm's Nadir finished a length and a quarter behind Bardstown and jockey Willie Hartack claimed foul. But the stewards did not allow it.

Price Brothers' Hoop Band, under Charlie Burr, finished third but jockey Jack Leonard on Ada L. Rice's Air Pilot claimed Hoop Band interfered with his mount. The stewards allowed this foul claim, droped Hoop Band out of the money and moved Bill's Sky Boy to third and Air Pilot fourth.

The foul claim held up official results for 15 minutes but the nationally televised program stayed on to carry the outcome.

Bardstown, who won this feature in 1957, paid $4.80, $3.40 and $3.20. Nadir, second choice in the betting, returned $3.60 and $3.30 while Bill's Sky Boy was $9.30.

Local Officials On Panel For Wildlife Meet

A panel of sheriff Bailey Grant, district attorney Albin Lassiter and judges Jesse Heard and David Garrett will discuss game law enforcement and the game situation in Ouachita parish at the regular monthly meeting of the Ouachita Wildlife Unit at 7:30 Tuesday night at the Virginia Hotel.

Unit president Jack Rushing extends an invitation to all sheriffs, other officials and sportsmen in adjoining parishes to attend the Tuesday meeting, scheduled for the hotel's Cameo Room.

A discussion of state Wildlife Federation convention being held in Baton Rouge this weekend is also planned with convention resolutions on seasons and bag limits expected to take most of the attention.

A sports film will be shown and the usual door prizes will be awarded.

Avila's Threat To Retire OK With Richards

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Manager Paul Richards of the Baltimore Orioles said Saturday he'd just as soon Bobby Avila would retire unless he is "willing to come in'o camp and show a real interest in baseball."

Avila, a veteran infielder, has hinted he may quit the game.

Commenting on Gene Woodling, another unsigned Oriole who is threatening to quit unless his $30,000 salary demand is met, Richards said the holdout "had played a lot of years for considerably less money than he is being offered.

"If he can quit at those prices, more power to him."

Richards said, however, that contract disputes are up to General Manager Lee MacPhail.

Hare Raising Finishes First In Letellier

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—W. Hal Bishop's Hare Raising, hustled into an early lead by jockey Bobby Baird, had more than enough left in the stretch Saturday to post a four-length victory in the $18,950 Letellier Handicap at the Fair Grounds.

The 6-year-old son of Apache was never headed in the mile and one-eighth event. Tenacious, the 3-5 favorite of the 13,587 fans, took the place spot with a nose edge over Pete's Folly, an entry with the winner.

The Bishop entry returned $13.40, $4.20 and $4.60. Tenacious, who set a track record for the mile and one - sixteenth in last week's LeComte, paid $3 and $2.60.

Hare Raising had a three-length lead over his eight rivals at the half-mile pole with Circle "K" Farm's On The Job closest.

Around the final turn, Hare Raising held his margin as Reverie Knoll Farm's Jet Colonel slipped into third. Tenacious' late charge fell far short.

The winner was timed in 1:51.

BIGGEST ADVANCE OF YEAR

Stock Values Rise To Historic Peak

By ED MORSE
AP Business News Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market this week broke out of the tight trading range which has confined it since the end of January and surged to a historic record.

Wall Street has been pondering for about four weeks now on whether the market would make its next sharp move to the upside or the downside. This week brought the answer to that question.

The market made its biggest weekly advance since the year-end rally week ending Jan. 3.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks rose $5.10 to $229.90, a record, topping the previous high of $220.20 reached Jan. 21.

The Dow Jones industrial average at long last pierced the 600 level — a psychological barrier during these past weeks of consolidation. The Dow industrials crashed through the line vigorously to set a record of 602.21.

The penetration to new highs was accomplished in two brisk rallies—virtually equal in strength—on Thursday and Friday. The Thursday rally easily pierced a "supply area" where stocks for sale had bogged down advances in the past. The Friday rise carried through on waxing optimism. Heavy trading at the close removed all doubt as to the outcome.

The forward movement was all the more convincing since it came on the eve of a three-day week-end with all its uncertainties. The market closes Monday in observance of Washington's birthday.

In some recent weeks the market has ignored bullish news and backed away. There were plenty of encouraging items this week and also a portion of discouragement.

The biggest news feature of the week was word from Detroit that the Big Three are definitely planning a small car for the 1960 model year.

The economic news included such heartening items as steel output soaring to its highest level in nearly two years; an increase both in living costs and industrial production for January and a record for personal income; higher copper prices; paperboard production up; and expanding freight car orders.

U.S. government bonds were mixed to slightly lower this week, but corporates advanced on heavier turnover.

Corporate trading mounted to $32,280,000 par value on the Big Board from $30,530,000 the previous week and $22,974,500 for the corresponding week in 1958.

Business Briefs

J. W. Walter, President of Jim Walter Corporation, Tampa, Florida, announced today that all of the outstanding capitol stock of M. A. C. Credit Co., Inc., has been acquired by the Corporation.

M.A.C., with headquarters in Miami, owns and operates seventeen small loan offices throughout Florida and Georgia and has approximately four and one-half million dollars outstanding in loans receivable.

Robert Kahn, manager of Zale's Jewelry has just returned from the firm's annual conference in Dallas. He said it was revealed during the meeting the company had increased more than one-fourth in size during 1958 with the opening of 24 new stores, one of which was the Monroe store which opened December 1st.

Kahn said it was pointed out the Zale's has never closed a store because of lack of business in the firm's 35-year history.

Advantages of the Sears, Roebuck and Co. profit sharing fund were highlighted recently when a truck driver — with the company 44 years — withdrew $289,000 from the fund after having paid only $5,928 from his wages over the years.

Employes retiring last year with 20 to 25 years service drew $36,695 after depositing $3,593 with the fund. Began in 1916, the fund has more than 140,000 members and assets of more than one billion dollars.

Steel Output Shows Rise In Past Year

CHICAGO (UPI)—The nation's steelmakers increased capacity by 6,900,000 tons last year, with Chicago, Pittsburgh and the Western districts responsible for two-thirds of the gain, the national metal working magazine Iron Age reported Friday.

The expansion, plus other capital improvements, cost the industry $1,200,000,000, according to American Iron and Steel Institute, and raised the postwar investment in new equipment to more than 11 billion dollars. The AISI estimated another billion dollars likely would be spent similarly this year.

Iron Age noted that while the capacity increase was not a record gain, it was well above the average 4,600,000 ton annual expansion recorded since 1953.

Chicago showed the largest increase, 32 per cent of the national gain, raising the district's capacity to 29,288,460.

The Western District was second with a 23.8 per cent boost to a capacity of 11,894,950 tons. Pittsburgh recorded a 16.1 per cent gain, increasing its capacity to 25,533,530 tons, and Detroit added 766,000 tons, an 11.1 per cent gain.

KHRUSHY SEES LIGHT

LONDON (UPI)—Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev has called on the chemical industry to design a better chandelier, Radio Moscow reported Friday. Addressing a group of chemical workers at Stalinogorsk, the premier took exception to an ornate chandelier hanging in the room. "What a lot of fronze it has," he said. "Is that sensible? One could make an artistically elaborate chandelier from chemical materials. It would be both light in weight and pretty. And in any case it would be a great deal cheaper," he said.

Kansas State Gains NCAA Playoff Spot

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Kansas State gained an NCAA playoff berth and at least a tie for the Big Eight Conference championship Saturday by beating Oklahoma State 62-50 in a regionally televised basketball game.

Bob Boozer, Kansas State's All-America candidate, again was the big gun for the Wildcats.

Oklahoma State tried hard to upset the free-wheeling Kansans but the visitors' height and uncanny marksmanship proved decisive.

It was the 11th straight conference victory for Kansas State, the No. 4 team in The Associated Press poll.

The Cowboys pulled ahead in the early minutes to provide momentary excitement for a crowd of 5,500. Oklahoma State got a 9-5 lead and stayed in front until Ced Prince hit a field goal to send the Wildcats ahead 14-13 midway in the first half.

Oklahoma State spurted to a 22-20 lead but then Kansas State regained its poise and forged a half-time edge of 30-26.

The Wildcats were never behind after that as Boozer kept pitching in field goals, mostly from outside.

Boozer's final goal came at the buzzer ending the game and it was first announced the basket did not count. However, officials were consulted and ruled the shot was in the air when the buzzer sounded.

Oklahoma State was spearheaded by Arlen Clar who connected for 16 points.

Detroit Beats Black Hawks In TV Game

DETROIT (AP) — The Detroit Red Wings scored three goals while the Chicago Black Hawks were shorthanded and defeated the second-place Hawks 5-2 Saturday in a nationally televised National Hockey League matinee.

Squaring the season series with the Hawks with their third-straight home triumph, the Red Wings turned on more offensive punch than they have shown in their last 16 games.

It was a good comeback for Detroit, whose 7-0 whitewash by Montreal Thursday hurt the team's chances of making fourth place in the NHL standings and the Stanley Cup playoffs.

BARNEY, MENACE MEET

Curtis, Petroff To Tangle Again

BLACK MENACE

Wild Bill Barney accepts the challenge of the Black Menace and Jack Curtis again meets that rough Russian, Serg Petroff, on tomorrow night's program at the local wrestling emporium, B & B arena.

The Petroff-Curtis engagement is billed as the main event with Barney and the Menace to tangle in the semi-final. The main go will have a 90-minute limit and the semi an hour limit. Both are slated for two falls to win.

Freddy Foster and Buddy Sharp, local amateurs, will meet in a 10-minute prelim to open the card.

Curtis blames the referee for his loss last week but Petroff contends the ref had nothing to do with his victory.

"It's no use him blaming anybody for losing", the Russian says, "I can beat most any wrestler, Curtis included, and I will give him another match to prove I'm smarter and tougher than he is."

Promoter Gus Baumgartner has this to say — "I'm having referee trouble. Referees are hard to get but we'll have a new one Monday night."

Louisiana heavyweight champion Bill Barney, silent in the face of the Menace's challenge last week, is boiling mad and ready to go Monday.

"This Black Menace has been jumping in and out of the ring, challenging me and calling me a coward. I asked him to put up $100 for a match but he don't want to put up any cash so I'll shut him up by fighting him in a nontitle match."

Bill, a gentlemanly soul most of the time, can get pretty rough when he's mad and he's pretty angry. The Menace doesn't have to be mad to be rough.

Favorites In Semifinals Of Indoor Tennis

NEW YORK (AP) — Defending champion Dick Savitt and three members of Uncle Sam's successful Davis Cup team—Alex Olmedo Barry MacKay and Earl Buchholz Jr.—made it an all-favorites semifinal Saturday in the National Indoor Tennis Championships.

Sunday in the dank confines of the Seventh Regiment Armory drill shed the top-seeded Savitt will play fourth-seeded Buchholz, the world's best junior, while Olmedo and MacKay renew an old rivalry. The finals are Monday.

Savitt, the towering ex-Wimbledon champion from New York, continued to display the most impressive tennis on the lightning fast boards as he breezed past Jack Frost of Monterey, Calif., 6-0, 6-3.

Olmedo, the pride of Peru, outclass Hugh Stewart of Pasadena Calif., 7-5, 6-3, to uphold his No. 2 seeding. MacKay, from Dayton, Ohio, played spottily for a comeback 4-6, 6-4, 6-1 triumph over 37-year - old Jaroslav Drobny of Egypt. Buchholz, St. Louis high school boy, topped Donald Dell, Yale University junior, 10-8, 6-3.

The feature match Sunday will be that between Olmedo and MacKay. The latter beat Olmedo in a five-set thriller at Merion last summer but the national Peruvian, who almost single-handedly captured the Davis Cup, has been ahead in their last three meetings.

State Board Member Okays Tourney Play

JACKSON, Miss. (UPI) — Only one member of the State College Board said he favors Mississippi State University competing in the NCAA basketball tournament in a poll conducted by the Jackson Daily News.

Dudley S. Bridgforth of Nesbitt said he was in favor of the team entering the tournament despite the fact that other teams in the tourney will be racially-integrated. "It looks like if we're ever going to compete in these national bowls and tournaments, we'll have to face it," he said.

Five members said they opposed the team going into the tourney and the eight others had no comment.

State, which has lost but one game, is expected to win the right to represent the Southeastern Conference in the tournament. Gov. J. P. Coleman has said the decision as to whether the team will enter is up to the College Board and the university.

Widener 'Cap To Bardstown For 2nd Time

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Seven-year-old Bardstown showed younger horses how to run Saturday, then survived a foul claim to win the $137,600 Widener Handicap for the second time in his career.

The Calumet Farm gelding, carrying high weight of 124 pounds, ran a brilliant race under jockey Steve Brooks. He went the mile and a quarter in 2:01 1-5, only one fifth of a second slower than the record set by El Mono in 1948.

Claiborne Farm's Nadir finished a length and a quarter behind Bardstown and jockey Willie Hartack claimed foul. But the stewards did not allow it.

Price Brothers' Hoop Band, under Charlie Burr, finished third but jockey Jack Leonard on Ada L. Rice's Air Pilot claimed Hoop Band interfered with his mount. The stewards allowed this foul claim, droped Hoop Band out of the money and moved Bill's Sky Boy to third and Air Pilot fourth

The foul claim held up official results for 15 minutes but the nationally televised program stayed on to carry the outcome.

Bardstown, who won this feature in 1957, paid $4.80, $3.40 and $3.20. Nadir, second choice in the betting, returned $3.60 and $3.30 while Bill's Sky Boy was $9.30.

Local Officials On Panel For Wildlife Meet

A panel of sheriff Bailey Grant, district attorney Albin Lassiter and judges Jesse Heard and David Garrett will discuss game law enforcement and the game situation in Ouachita parish at the regular monthly meeting of the Ouachita Wildlife Unit at 7:30 Tuesday night at the Virginia Hotel.

Unit president Jack Rushing extends an invitation to all sheriffs, other officials and sportsmen in adjoining parishes to attend the Tuesday meeting, scheduled for the hotel's Cameo Room.

A discussion of state Wildlife Federation convention being held in Baton Rouge this weekend is also planned with convention resolutions on seasons and bag limits expected to take most of the attention.

A sports film will be shown and the usual door prizes will be awarded.

Avila's Threat To Retire OK With Richards

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Manager Paul Richards of the Baltimore Orioles said Saturday he'd just as soon Bobby Avila would retire unless he is "willing to come in'o camp and show a real interest in baseball."

Avila, a veteran infielder, has hinted he may quit the game.

Commenting on Gene Woodling, another unsigned Oriole who is threatening to quit unless his $30,000 salary demand is met, Richards said the holdout "had played a lot of years for considerably less money than he is being offered.

"If he can quit at those prices, more power to him."

Richards said, however, that contract disputes are up to General Manager Lee MacPhail.

Hare Raising Finishes First In Letellier

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—W. Hal Bishop's Hare Raising, hustled into an early lead by jockey Bobby Baird, had more than enough left in the stretch Saturday to post a four-length victory in the $18,950 Letellier Handicap at the Fair Grounds.

The 6-year-old son of Apache was never headed in the mile and one-eighth event. Tenacious, the 3-5 favorite of the 13,587 fans, took the place spot with a nose edge over Pete's Folly, an entry with the winner.

The Bishop entry returned $13.40, $4.20 and $4.60. Tenacious, who set a track record for the mile and one - sixteenth in last week's LeComte, paid $3 and $2.60.

Hare Raising had a three-length lead over his eight rivals at the half--mile pole with Circle "K" Farm's On The Job closest.

Around the final turn, Hare Raising held his margin as Reverie Knoll Farm's Jet Colonel slipped into third. Tenacious' late charge fell far short.

The winner was timed in 1:51.

Miss Rawls, from Spartanburg, S.C., dropped two 12-foot birdie putts and had only one three-putt green.

Others among the pros and amateurs who will finish the medal tournament Sunday were all seven strokes or more behind the leaders.

BIGGEST ADVANCE OF YEAR

Stock Values Rise To Historic Peak

By ED MORSE
AP Business News Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market this week broke out of the tight trading range which has confined it since the end of January and surged to a historic record.

Wall Street has been pondering for about four weeks now on whether the market would make its next sharp move to the upside or the downside. This week brought the answer to that question.

The market made its biggest weekly advance since the year-end rally week ending Jan. 3.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks rose $5.10 to $229.90, a record, topping the previous high of $220.20 reached Jan. 21.

The Dow Jones industrial average at long last pierced the 600 level — a psychological barrier during these past weeks of consolidation. The Dow industrials crashed through the line vigorously to set a record of 602.21.

The penetration to new highs was accomplished in two brisk rallies—virtually equal in strength —on Thursday and Friday. The Thursday rally easily pierced a "supply area" where stocks for sale had bogged down advances in the past. The Friday rise carried through on waxing optimism. Heavy trading at the close removed all doubt as to the outcome.

The forward movement was all the more convincing since it came on the eve of a three-day weekend with all its uncertainties. The market closes Monday in observance of Washington's birthday.

In some recent weeks the market has ignored bullish news and backed away. There were plenty of encouraging items this week and also a portion of discouragement.

The biggest news feature of the week was word from Detroit that the Big Three are definitely planning a small car for the 1960 model year.

The economic news included such heartening items as steel output soaring to its highest level in nearly two years; an increase both in living costs and industrial production for January and a record for personal income; higher copper prices; paperboard production up; and expanding freight car orders.

U.S. government bonds were mixed to slightly lower this week, but corporates advanced on heavier turnover.

Corporate trading mounted to $32,280,000 par value on the Big Board from $30,550,000 the previous week and $22,974,500 for the corresponding week in 1958.

Business Briefs

J. W. Walter, President of Jim Walter Corporation, Tampa, Florida, announced today that all of the outstanding capitol stock of M. A. C. Credit Co., Inc , has been acquired by the Corporation.

M.A.C., with headquarters in Miami, owns and operates seventeen small loan offices throughout Florida and Georgia and has approximately four and one-half million dollars outstanding in loans receivable.

Robert Kahn, manager of Zale's Jewelry has just returned from the firm's annual conference in Dallas. He said it was revealed during the meeting the company had increased more than one-fourth in size during 1958 with the opening of 24 new stores, one of which was the Monroe store which opened December 1st.

Kahn said it was pointed out the Zale's has never closed a store because of lack of business in the firm's 35-year history.

Advantages of the Sears, Roebuck and Co. profit sharing fund were highlighted recently when a truck driver — with the company 44 years — withdrew $289,000 from the fund after having paid only $5,928 from his wages over the years.

Employes retiring last year with 20 to 25 years service drew $36,695 after depositing $3,593 with the fund. Began in 1916, the fund has more than 140,000 members and assets of more than one billion dollars.

Steel Output Shows Rise In Past Year

CHICAGO (UPI)—The nation's steelmakers increased capacity by 6,900,000 tons last year, with Chicago, Pittsburgh and the Western districts responsible for two-thirds of the gain, the national metal working magazine Iron Age reported Friday.

The expansion, plus other capital improvements, cost the industry $1,200,000,000, according to American Iron and Steel Institute, and raised the postwar investment in new equipment to more than 11 billion dollars. The AISI estimated another billion dollars likely would be spent similarly this year.

Iron Age noted that while the capacity increase was not a record gain, it was well above the average 4,600,000 ton annual expansion recorded since 1953.

Chicago showed the largest increase, 32 per cent of the national gain, raising the district's capacity to 29,288,460.

The Western District was second with a 23.8 per cent boost to a capacity of 11,894,950 tons. Pittsburgh recorded a 16.1 per cent gain, increasing its capacity to 25,533,530 tons, and Detroit added 766,000 tons, an 11.1 per cent gain.

KHRUSHY SEES LIGHT

LONDON (UPI)—Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev has called on the chemical industry to design a better chandelier, Radio Moscow reported Friday. Addressing a group of chemical workers at Stalinogorsk, the premier took exception to an ornate chandelier hanging in the room. "What a lot of fronze it has," he said. "Is that sensible? One could make an artistically elaborate chandelier from chemical materials. It would be both light in weight and pretty. And in any case it would be a great deal cheaper," he said.

Witnesses To Hold Assembly In Pine Bluff

The attention of Jehovah's Witnesses and their friends in the Monroe area will be directed to the city of Pine Bluff on February 27, 28 and March 1. This is because their semi-annual circuit assembly will be held at the National Guard Armory there.

Henry C. Trull, the presiding minister of the local group, said, "We eagerly anticipate these 3-day conventions because they aid us in improving our personal ministry and we always return greatly stimulated in zeal." He said every individual in this organization felt compelled to share in their preaching work which has now expanded to 175 countries and islands.

Trull also added that the representative of Jehovah's Witnesses who appears at your door is one of over 700,000 Christians dedicated to show love for their neighbor by taking an interest in other people's spiritual welfare.

The outstanding feature of the meeting at Pine Bluff will be the discourse, "A Paradise Earth Through God's Kingdom" to be delivered at 3:00 p.m., Sunday, March 1. The Watchtower Society of Brooklyn, New York, headquarters for the group will provide special representatives for the gathering.

Holy Hour Held In Alexandria Diocese Group

A Holy Hour was held Sunday, February 15, in Catholic Churches throughout the Diocese of Alexandria to seek divine assistance against religious persecution of the Church in China.

The observance was the result of an appeal made by Pope John XXIII to all Bishops of the world to establish a day of prayer and reparation on behalf of those suffering religious calamity in China.

In a pastoral letter addressed to all clergy, members of Religious Communities, and lay people, Bishop Charles P. Greco requested "that a Holy Hour be held . . . which the faithful should attend in great numbers to offer fervent prayers that God in His Providence may avert the disaster which threatens the Church in China."

Churches Try To Recruit Pastors

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

A drive to recruit more young men for the ministry is underway in America's major religious denominations.

It is prompted by a shortage of trained clergymen which is already serious and getting steadily worse.

The average layman doesn't think much about the clergy shortage — until his own church needs a pastor. Then he learns with a shock that the demand far exceeds the supply.

During the last 10 years, the Catholic population of the United States has increased 31 per cent, but the number of priests has increased only 21 per cent. A recent survey showed there are nearly 10,000 U.S. towns, of more than 500 population, in which there is no Catholic priest.

MEMBERSHIP GROWS

Membership of the Methodist church has grown 28 per cent since 1940, but the number of fully-accredited ministers has increased only 1 per cent. Untrained supply pastors are filling the gap. Methodists need at least 2,800 new ministers each year to staff their growing church, but they are getting only 900 a year from seminaries.

Similar figures could be supplied by Baptists, Lutherans, Episcopalians and Presbyterians. According to the National Council of Churches, clergy shortages exist in virtually all denominations. The council estimates the total deficit, in Protestant bodies alone, at 25,000.

Churches face a severe handicap in their efforts to interest more young men in seeking holy orders. Sociologists have noted a growing tendency among U. S. youth to choose careers primarily on the basis of the material rewards they offer. The idea of attracting more people to the pulpit with a purely financial appeal is repugnant to most church leaders.

They believe it is God Who calls men to the ministry, and that it would be blasphemous to try to substitute monetary bait for His divine promptings.

So the churches are doing their recruiting the hard way. They are trying to get across to their youth the message that there is more to life than making money, and that no sincere Christian can ignore a call to full-time service just because it may entail some sacrifices.

At the same time, they are trying to clear away some of the misconceptions that young people have about a clergyman's life, and to make clear that a ministerial career brings many deep satisfactions as well as a few hardships.

HAVE PROGRAM

One of the most ambitious programs of this kind is being conducted jointly by four Lutheran denominations — the American Lutheran Church, Lutheran Free Church, Evangelical Lutheran Church and United Evangelical Lutheran Church.

Since last November, these Lutheran bodies have held "men for the ministry" conferences in 37 major cities. Four more will be held next month. More than 3,000 young Lutherans have attended the conferences to date. They asked blunt, hard questions about going into the ministry—and they got straight answers. The response was so enthusiastic that Lutheran leaders have decided to repeat the conferences regularly in the future.

The Methodists are using a somewhat similar approach. They have held convocations in several major cities recently to acquaint college students with the church's need for manpower, and to encourage more applicants not only for the ministry but for other religious vocations.

Catholic parishes throughout the nation will observe "vocation month" in March, with special prayers and sermons directed to the church's acute need for additional priests.

Guest Minister To Fill Pulpit At Church Here

Nationally known Evangelist Jimmy Swaggart from Baton Rouge, an outstanding musician and singer and first cousin to the world - famous Jerry Lewis, will conduct evangelistic meetings from February 22 to March 8, inclusive, at the Swartz Assembly of God Church, located on the Old Bastrop Road, where the Reverend Ralph M. Elmore is the pastor.

During each service the Reverend Swaggart will precede his sermon with special hymns and spirituals as well as selected musical renditions.

Pastor Elmore invites everyone who can possibly do so to attend these meetings. There will be service every night, except Saturday night, and the meetings begin at 7:00 p.m.

Monroe Layman To Fill Pulpit At Winnsboro

E. R. Dawson, a resident of Monroe for 33 years, will accept the post as pastor of the First Christian Church in Winnsboro March 1, it was learned today.

Dawson served as supply pastor at the church from 1949-51. Since that time he has served as state chaplain for the Gideons, Christian businessmen's organization.

He was ordained as an elder in the First Christian Church of Monroe when he first moved to Monroe. He retired as manager of Western Union in 1956 after 30 years of service with the company.

MY ANSWER
by Billy Graham

QUESTION: In our high school class are a bunch of really swell kids, and I'd like to run with them. But the only ones who ever ask me to go out are the crumbs. What can I do to get into the other group I like so much?

ANSWER: From your letter, it seems that because you didn't get started with the right group, you did accept the friendship of the others. When you did that you made the mistake you will find hard to correct. Now the really good kids think you have chosen the other crowd to run with them.

Life is full of those situations where you have to make a complete break with the past and start over again. You have one thing in your favor, you are young, and it's much easier than when you are grown. Even if the high school crowd won't let you change friends, you have your life before you. You are learning many things now, and it would be wise to learn this lesson also.

The greatest and most important change you could make would be to decide for Jesus Christ. By doing so you would close the door on your past and make a new beginning. Then you might not belong to either the socially top group or the left-overs. You would discover a new circle of friends, because you have found the best Friend anyone can have, the Lord Jesus Christ.

Witnesses To Hold Assembly In Pine Bluff

The attention of Jehovah's Witnesses and their friends in the Monroe area will be directed to the city of Pine Bluff on February 27, 28 and March 1. This is because their semi-annual circuit assembly will be held at the National Guard Armory there.

Henry C. Trull, the presiding minister of the local group, said, "We eagerly anticipate these 3-day conventions because they aid us in improving our personal ministry and we always return greatly stimulated in zeal." He said every individual in this organization felt compelled to share in their preaching work which has now expanded to 175 countries and islands.

Trull also added that the representative of Jehovah's Witnesses who appears at your door is one of over 700,000 Christians dedicated to show love for their neighbor by taking an interest in other people's spiritual welfare.

The outstanding feature of the meeting at Pine Bluff will be the discourse, "A Paradise Earth Through God's Kingdom" to be delivered at 3:00 p.m., Sunday, March 1. The Watchtower Society of Brooklyn, New York, headquarters for the group will provide special representatives for the gathering.

TECH SPEAKER — Dr. Ben R. Oliphint, pastor of St. Paul's Methodist Church in Monroe, will be one of the speakers during Religious Emphasis Week at Louisiana Tech March 15-18. He received the Ph.D. degree from the University of Edinburgh in Scotland and formerly held pastorates at St. Luke's Methodist Church in New Orleans and the First Methodist Church at Alexandria.

Holy Hour Held In Alexandria Diocese Group

A Holy Hour was held Sunday, February 15, in Catholic Churches throughout the Diocese of Alexandria to seek divine assistance against religious persecution of the Church in China.

The observance was the result of an appeal made by Pope John XXIII to all Bishops of the world to establish a day of prayer and reparation on behalf of those suffering religious calamity in China.

In a pastoral letter addressed to all clergy, members of Religious Communities, and lay people, Bishop Charles P. Greco requested "that a Holy Hour be held . . . which the faithful should attend in great numbers to offer fervent prayers that God in His Providence may avert the disaster which threatens the Church in China."

Churches Try To Recruit Pastors

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

A drive to recruit more young men for the ministry is underway in America's major religious denominations.

It is prompted by a shortage of trained clergymen which is already serious and getting steadily worse.

The average layman doesn't think much about the clergy shortage — until his own church needs a pastor. Then he learns with a shock that the demand far exceeds the supply.

During the last 10 years, the Catholic population of the United States has increased 31 per cent, but the number of priests has increased only 21 per cent. A recent survey showed there are nearly 10,000 U.S. towns, of more than 500 population, in which there is no Catholic priest.

MEMBERSHIP GROWS

Membership of the Methodist church has grown 28 per cent since 1940, but the number of fully-accredited ministers has increased only 1 per cent. Untrained supply pastors are filling the gap. Methodists need at least 2,800 new ministers each year to staff their growing church, but they are getting only 900 a year from seminaries.

Similar figures could be supplied by Baptists, Lutherans, Episcopalians and Presbyterians. According to the National Council of Churches, clergy shortages exist in virtually all denominations. The council estimates the total deficit, in Protestant bodies alone, at 25,000.

Churches face a severe handicap in their efforts to interest more young men in seeking holy orders. Sociologists have noted a growing tendency among U. S. youth to choose careers primarily on the basis of the material rewards they offer. The idea of attracting more people to the pulpit with a purely financial appeal is repugnant to most church leaders.

They believe it is God Who calls men to the ministry, and that it would be blaspheous to try to substitute monetary bait for His divine promptings.

So the churches are doing their recruiting the hard way. They are trying to get across to their youth the message that there is more to life than making money, and that no sincere Christian can ignore a call to full-time service just because it may entail some sacrifices.

At the same time, they are trying to clear away some of the misconceptions that young people have about a clergyman's life, and to make clear that a ministerial career brings many deep satisfactions as well as a few hardships.

HAVE PROGRAM

One of the most ambitious programs of this kind is being conducted jointly by four Lutheran denominations — the American Lutheran Church, Lutheran Free Church, Evangelical Lutheran Church and United Evangelical Lutheran Church.

Since last November, these Lutheran bodies have held "men for the ministry" conferences in 37 major cities. Four more will be held next month. More than 3,000 young Lutherans have attended the conferences to date. They asked blunt, hard questions about going into the ministry—and they got straight answers. The response was so enthusiastic that Lutheran leaders have decided to repeat the conferences regularly in the future.

The Methodists are using a somewhat similar approach. They have held convocations in several major cities recently to acquaint college students with the church's need for manpower, and to encourage more applicants,not only for the ministry but for other religious vocations.

Catholic parishes throughout the nation will observe "vocation month" in March, with special prayers and sermons directed to the church's acute need for additional priests.

Guest Minister To Fill Pulpit At Church Here

Nationally known Evangelist Jimmy Swaggart from Baton Rouge, an outstanding musician and singer and first cousin to the world - famous Jerry Lewis, will conduct evangelistic meetings from February 22 to March 8, inclusive, at the Swartz Assembly of God Church, located on the Old Bastrop Road, where the Reverend Ralph M. Elmore is the pastor.

During each service the Reverend Swaggart will precede his sermon with special humns and spirituals as well as selected musical renditions.

Pastor Elmore invites everyone who can possibly do so to attend these meetings. There will be service every night, except Saturday night, and the meetings begin at 7:00 p.m.

Monroe Layman To Fill Pulpit At Winnsboro

E. R. Dawson, a resident of Monroe for 33 years, will accept the post as pastor of the First Christian Church in Winnsboro March 1, it was learned today.

Dawson served as supply pastor at the church from 1949-51. Since that time he has served as state chaplain for the Gideons, Christian businessmen's organization.

He was ordained as an elder in the First Christian Church of Monroe when he first moved to Monroe. He retired as manager of Western Union in 1956 after 30 years of service with the company.

MY ANSWER by Billy Graham

QUESTION: In our high school class are a bunch of really swell kids, and I'd like to run with them. But the only ones who ever ask me to go out are the crumbs. What can I do to get into the other group I like so much?

ANSWER: From your letter, it seems that because you didn't get started with the right group, you did accept the friendship of the others. When you did that you made the mistake you will find hard to correct. Now the really good kids think you have chosen the other crowd to run with them.

Life is full of those situations where you have to make a complete break with the past and start over again. You have one thing in your favor, you are young, and it's much easier than when you are grown. Even if the high school crowd won't let you change friends, you have your life before you. You are learning many things now, and it would be wise to learn this lesson also.

The greatest and most important change you could make would be to decide for Jesus Christ. By doing so you would close the door on your past and make a new beginning. Then you might not belong to either the socially top group or the left-overs. You would discover a new circle of friends, because you have found the best Friend anyone can have, the Lord Jesus Christ.

Gardens And Homes

Iris Enlivens Winter Decor

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

The small winter flowers that the gardener watches for in December and January have had a rough time this winter. Nothing ever stops the winter iris, however. At your columnist's lecture in Shreveport on January 22nd, the decorations were enlivened with fresh irises just picked out of doors in spite of the wicked cold snap that had been coming on the day before. In fact, everywhere I went — New Orleans, Shreveport, University of Mississippi Garden Seminar, Houston and Greenville, Miss. — there were the winter irises.

MINIATURE NARCISSI

In Spain and Portugal and across the North African countries and all around the Mediterranean, there are several species of miniature narcissi. Most of them bloom for us in winter. While they used to be hard to find in bulb catalogues, they are now available from many bulb dealers. All of these little flowers are charming, and they all like our Southern conditions because our climate is like theirs around the Mediterranean. In summer, they like to cook in the hot, dry soil. Even those that grow in boggy places in Morocco and Algeria seem to do well for us in ordinary well drained beds in the garden.

The miniature narcissi are far too tiny to make much of a show in the garden. They are, rather, tiny treasures to look for in the winter months. Plant them in some spot where you can search for them in late November and all winter. Some few of these little bulbs are bog plants, but all of them seem to do well together in a soil that is one third good garden loam, one third coarse grit and one third leaf mold or peat. Do not make the mistake of using fine sand, and be sure, in low or wettish gardens, to raise the bed for your tiny treasures or plant them on a slight slope. Water must never stand over them. Some of the bog dwellers would put up with it for a time, but even they will eventually rot.

COMMON NAME

Since there are few common names for the small narcissi, we shall have to give them their Latin names. Two of the earliest to flower are tiny trumpets: Narcissus asturiensis and N. Lobularis. The first is all of one to two inches high; the second a little bigger. Sometimes asturiensis is called minimus in catalogues. Both of these may flower before Christmas in warm gardens. While there are many other small trumpets, they are larger than these. The Angel's Tears type of tiny drooping flowers — several to the stem has several species — all winter flowering. Then the tiny members of the sweet jonquil group are extremely delightful to have in winter when one or two scented flowers lifts the spirits on a dull day.

If you wish to know more about this group of bulbs Elizabeth Lawrence has told you about her experiences with them in her book The Little Bulbs, published by MacMillan and Alec Gray, an Englishman, has described them in his book, Miniature Daffodils published by Collingridge.

New Flowers Make Debut In Catalogs

Widely publicized as All-America selections winner this year is the new Alyssum Pink Heather. It's a new color in alyssum all right, but don't expect the kind of pink you get in petunias. This winner is true heather-pink, which is soft and dusky, and a little on the lavender side. Supplies of this variety are going to be short, so buy early.

Another short - supply item, but a stunning color, is the new F-1 hybrid grandiflora petunia Scarlet Lustre. This variety has brilliant scarlet, big, waved blooms with centers of bright yellow. The plants are low growing (only a foot tall), and they spread to a width of about two feet with plenty of blooms all summer long in the best F-1 hybrid manner. Freshly opened flowers are extremely intense in color and make excellent cut flower material. They'll last for days if you cut some branch with them and use one of the chemical flower - preservers.

Still in the petunia class is a less expensive but still heavier blooming new mixture called Confetti. This is an F2 multiflora type, which means that you get a host of two to two and a half inch blooms on each plant during the summer. In other words, multiflora type is smaller than grandiflora, but more abundant in flower production. Confetti has sharp clean colors in fine balance, including blue, rose, pink, salmon, red, and a red and white bicolor. Confetti plants make compact growth, and if you've had trouble with your bedding petunias sprawling all over the garden you'll like the way this new mixture stays in place.

In the zinnia category there's one very interesting development. It's a new color in the big California Giant type. The thing that makes this noteworthy is the fact that it's the first new color in many years and the introduction puts the spotlight of attention back where it belongs on a reliable, heat - resistant, easily grown class that makes even a duffer able to grow flowers 5 inches across.

The new variety is called Pink Lady, and the flowers are bicolored in effect. The center of each bloom is a soft but distinct shrimp - pink, and as the petals expand day by day they change to cream or buff in the outer parts of the flower. In cloudy or cool weather the pink persists almost to the edge of the bloom, while in steady sunshine the pink area retreats to the very center. At every stage and in any weather it presents a delightful color combination and one you ought to see for yourself this year.

We'll have more to say about novelties, including some of the rarer ones, on another occasion.

THE HOME SHIFT

Pruning Jobs For February

By MILDRED SWIFT

One week of warmth makes a difference. Violets are blooming in sheets. However, I do hesitate to make such remarks. This good old Louisiana weather can do such tricks. Will my face be red if today the weather is freezing!

Just remember, our columns are necessarily written at least five days ahead of release date. I've had my hand called several times on remarks made about plants, for that very reason. And —we can't predict what the weather is going to do. Even the weather man misses on that some time.

Also blooming are the old fashioned buttercups. Joe Evans could give us the botanical name, but anyhow they're the ones shaped like King Alfred Daffodils but they're smaller. They, too, are daffodils and such a joy! They come up every year, stay the same size, bloom early and seem to say, 'you see, spring will be here."

STAR MAGNOLIAS

The star magnolias are blooming. Haven't seen any outstanding plants — guess the rains have ruined the blossoms.

My white Japanese Magnolia (Denutata) is just opening. These usually bloom in January and some may have done that. I'm glad my blooms waited. Maybe the cold won't get them.

Dr. Henry Baur invites you to visit his garden and see his camellias in bloom. He says the bad weather has done no damage to his trees or blossoms. The tray of blooms he brought to our house was proof of that statement.

One week has made a big difference. The pink perfections are in full bloom and most of the blossoms I have seen are about as usual.

The location of the tree has made the difference in the damage done. Our Opelousas pink dropped at least half the buds after the second freeze. Of course that can be caused by the plant getting too dry the summer before. In this case, though, that couldn't have been the cause. That plant had perfect care during the dry spells.

At any rate, I believe we're going to have plenty of late blooms to show our friends from other towns who come to see us.

PRUNING

My! But February does bring the garden jobs: Feeding, spraying and pruning.

We've talked so much about pruning, but since this is acknowledged as the most neglected practice in the garden, let's review a bit.

We prune to stimulate growth, to control size, to shape the plant, to make the plant healthy and to encourage blooming.

Right now you can prune evergreens and summer and fall blooming plants. Please not spring blooming ones. Buds have already set on these. If you cut off brackes now, you're cutting off your blooms.

Such plants as crape myrtle will have large blooms and more of them if you'll strip the little twigs from every limb. You can even cut back some of the longer branches and thin out some. This is true of all shrubs or trees that bloom later on.

When pruning either deciduows or evergreen plants, cut limbs at different levels. Then the plant will grow as nature intended it should. If all limbs are cut at the same level, the new growth will come out where the cut is made. This gives an artificial look. Never try for a round effect. This too is not natural.

Some limbs need to be cut out of shrubs right at the base of the plant. Then some new limbs will put out from the bottom. You'll have blooms all over the plant, and not just a top knot effect.

If you have a plant that has been neglected, is too large and ill shaped, cut it back to a foot or two from the ground. It will put out new growth and you'll have a nicely shaped plant. It will take a few years to get a full grown plant but it will be well worth the wait. Then, take care that you don't neglect it again. (Yes Mildred! I'll remember that.)

MORE PRUNING

Crabapples need pruning. Seems I've never seen a tree that could cross up as many branches as this one can. Just neglect it a couple of years and the branches will cross and grow together. Heavy pruning is never necessary. Just crossed branches.

When you prune your roses, wait on the climbing ones. Cut those back after they quit blooming. Even if they're ever blooming they always take a little rest.

Get your beds ready for planting nasturtium seed when the soil is dry enough. They like cool weather and die when the June sun gets hot.

SWEET ALYSSUM

This little plant has been a garden favorite for years. We've had the white and lilac colors for a long time. Now comes the 1959 winner, "Pink Heather." The color is a heather pink, deep in tone in cool weather, light pink in hot dry weather, then again deeper pink in the fall. It is free flowering over a long season and one of our easiest flowers to grow.

Alyssum does well in most any soil. It may be sowed where it is to stay or it transplants satisfactorily.

Flower arrangers have no need for this plant as it is not a cut flower. It brings color to the garden, is an excellent ground cover, makes a nice edging and is used extensively in rock gardens and window boxes.

It is said that sweet alyssum may be planted any month of the year, but spring is the ideal time.

A friend of mine says he has a seed catalogue that is offering nine varieties of sweet alyssum. Some are grown as annuals and some perennials. There's a yellow perennial listed and some have grey foliage. Sounds interesting, if you're the gardener who likes to experiment. It's best to stick to the tried and true varieties, though.

GOOD NEWS!

Improved wash and wear cotton garments may result from research with a compound known as APO. This will solve a tendency toward yellowing when treated with chlorine bleaches.

The compounds also gives cotton crease retention and wrinkle resistance.

Sheets are in the news again. Yes! there are sheets and cases that actually dry to bed ready smoothness in your automatic dryer. You don't even have to give them a quick slick with the iron.

It's wonderful news when a textile mill saves us the tedious work of ironing sheets, without sacrificing any of the good bleaching we always give sheets and pillow slips.

Trees, Shrubs For Landscape

By AUDREY DAWSON

MORE GARDENING

The all American mum selections are: Emperor, Burning Bronze, Ruby King and Show Piece. These were selected from all the entries for three years and have been thoroughly tested in fifteen locations representing different soils and climatic conditions. These winners have beauty of color, excellent vigor and good plant and flower form. They are hardy and have good resistance to disease and frost.

Burning Bronze grows to about 2½ feet. The blossoms appear in clusters and as they open mahogany bronze appears over a scarlet then a medley of tangerine orange and bronze.

If you have a green thumb, you should have little trouble getting a start with mums from cuttings this spring - or, if you're dividing clumps of last year's mums to move to new location this year, time to do it is this spring just as soon as the shoots at three to four inches high. Dig up the clump discard the old center portion and separate the young off shoots. Then plant as single divisions ten to twelve inches apart. If you divide and reset them carefully in a good soil with plenty of moisture they'll give you lively masses of color this fall.

SEWING WORKSHOP

Another group of women took part in simple sewing workshop and learned the newest ideas in construction and short steps in sewing. They were: Mrs. Jack Colvert, Mrs. Ellis McGrew, Mrs George Meredith, Mrs. H. A. Johnson, Mrs. C. C. Street, Mrs. Tommy Street, Mrs. H. P. Carter, Mrs. J. O. Street, Mrs. E. G. Cagle, Mrs. C. K. Brooks, Mrs. Johnnie Mills, Mrs. Calvin Tolbird, Mrs. E. A. Croslow, Mrs. Paul Newcomer, Mrs. Frank Buce, Mrs. J. D. Logan, Mrs. H. T. Everett, Mrs. T. R. Wright, Mrs. Robert T. Farr and Mrs. G. R Moorehead.

WASH AND WEAR

Recently two types of "no iron" sheets and pillow cases have been introduced on the market. One type has a resin finish while the other has a non-resin finish. The following are claims for both the resin and the non-resin finishes: non-chlorine retentive; odor, mildew and soil resistant - can withstand same water temperatures as regular cottons and can be washed by hand, machine or commercial laundry. The drying methods for the two types of sheets differ. The resin finish sheet should be tumble dried or drip dried for best appearance. Spinning or wringing out, followed by line drying is recommended for the non-resin finish sheet.

Both types of sheets are priced moderately higher than regular sheets. However, whe laundry is done at home, homemaker will note a saving in time and energy, since sheets do not require ironing. They also remain neater for a longer period of time than regular sheets.

THE SOUTHERN GARDENER

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

The small winter flowers that the gardener watches for in December and January have had a rough time this winter. Nothing ever stops the winter iris, however. At your columnist's lecture in Shreveport on January 22nd, the decorations were enlivened with fresh irises just picked out of doors in spite of the wicked cold snap that had been coming on the day before. In fact, everywhere I went — New Orleans, Shreveport, University of Mississippi Garden Seminar, Houston and Greenville, Miss. — there were the winter irises.

MINIATURE NARCISSI

In Spain and Portugal and across the North African countries and all around the Mediterranean, there are several species of miniature narcissi. Most of tuem bloom for us in winter. While they used to be hard to find in bulb catalogues, they are now available from many bulb dealers. All of these little flowers are charming, and they all like our Southern conditions because our climate is like theirs around the Mediterranean. In summer, they like to cook in the hot, dry soil. Even those that grow in boggy places in Morocco and Algeria seem to do well for us in ordinary well drained beds in the garden.

The miniature narcissi are far too tiny to make much of a show in the garden. They are, rather, tiny treasures to look for in the winter months. Plant them in some spot where you can search for them in late November and all winter. Some few of these little bulbs are bog plants, but all of them seem to do well together in a soil that is one third good garden loam, one third coarse grit and one third leaf mold or peat. Do not make the mistake of using fine sand, and be sure, in low or wettish gardens, to raise the bed for your tiny treasures or plant them on a slight slope. Water must never stand over them. Some of the bog dwellers would put up with it for a time, but even they will eventually rot.

COMMON NAME

Since there are few common names for the small narcissi, we shall have to give them their Latin names. Two of the earliest to flower are tiny trumpets: Narcissus asturiensis and N. Lobularis. The first is all of one to two inches high; the second a little bigger. Sometimes asturiensis is called minimus in catalogues. B th of these may flower before Christmas in warm gardens. While there are many other small trumpets, they are larger than these. The Angel's Tears type of tiny drooping flowers — several to the stem has several species — all winter flowering. Then the tiny members of the sweet jonquil group are extremely delightful to have in winter when one or two scented flowers lifts the spirits on a dull day.

If you wish to know more about this group of bulbs Elizabeth Lawrence has told you about her experiences with them in her book The Little Bulbs, published by MacMillan and Alec Gray, an Englishman, has described them in his book, Miniature Daffodils published by Collingridge.

New Flowers Make Debut In Catalogs

Widely publicized as All-America selections winner this year is the new Alyssum Pink Heather. It's a new color in alyssum all right, but don't expect the kind of pink you get in petunias. This winner is true heather-pink, which is soft and dusky, and a little on the lavender side. Supplies of this variety are going to be short, so buy early.

Another short - supply item, but a stunning color, is the new F-1 hybrid grandiflora petunia Scarlet Lustre. This variety has brilliant scarlet, big, waved blooms with centers of bright yellow. The plants are low growing (only a foot tall), and they spread to a width of about two feet with plenty of blooms all summer long in the best F-1 hybrid manner. Freshly opened flowers are extremely intense in color and make excellent cut flower material. They'll last for days if you cut some branch with them and use one of the chemical flower - preservers.

Still in the petunia class is a less expensive but still heavier blooming new mixture called Confetti. This is an F2 multiflora type, which means that you get a host of two to two and a half inch blooms on each plant during the summer. In other words, multiflora type is smaller than grandiflora, but more abundant in flower production. Confetti has sharp clean colors in fine balance, including blue, rose, pink, salmon, red, and a red and white bicolor. Confetti plants make compact growth, and if you've had trouble with your bedding petunias sprawling all over the garden you'll like the way this new mixture stays in place.

In the zinnia category there's one very interesting development. It's a new color in the big California Giant type. The thing that makes this noteworthy is the fact that it's the first new color in many years and the introduction puts the spotlight of attention back where it belongs on a reliable, heat - resistant, easily grown class that makes even a duffer able to grow flowers 5 inches across.

The new variety is called Pink Lady, and the flowers are bicolored in effect. The center of each bloom is a soft but distinct shrimp - pink, and as the petals expand day by day they change to cream or buff in the outer parts of the flower. In cloudy or cool weather the pink persists almost to the edge of the bloom, while in steady sunshine the pink area retreats to the very center. At every stage and in any weather it presents a delightful color combination and one you ought to see for yourself this year.

We'll have more to say about novelties, including some of the rarer ones, on another occasion.

THE HOME SHIFT

Pruning Jobs For February

By MILDRED SWIFT

One week of warmth makes a difference. Violets are blooming in sheets. However, I do hesitate to make such remarks. This good old Louisiana weather can do such tricks. Will my face be red if today the weather is freezing!

Just remember, our columns are necessarily written at least five days ahead of release date. I've had my hand called several times on remarks made about plants, for that very reason. And —we can't predict what the weather is going to do. Even the weather man misses on that some time.

Also blooming are the old fashioned buttercups. Joe Evans could give us the botanical name, but anyhow they're the ones shaped like King Alfred Daffodils but they're smaller. They, too, are daffodils and such a joy! They come up every year, stay the same size, bloom early and seem to say, 'you see, spring will be here."

STAR MAGNOLIAS

The star magnolias are blooming. Haven't seen any outstanding plants — guess the rains have ruined the blossoms.

My white Japanese Magnolia (Denutata) is just opening. These usually bloom in January and some may have done that. I'm glad my blooms waited. Maybe the cold won't get them.

Dr. Henry Baur invites you to visit his garden and see his camellias in bloom. He says the bad weather has done no damage to his trees or blossoms. The tray of blooms he brought to our house was proof of that statement.

One week has made a big difference. The pink perfections are in full bloom and most of the blossoms I have seen are about as usual.

The location of the tree has made the difference in the damage done. Our Opelousas pink dropped at least half the buds after the second freeze. Trees, Shrubs For Landscape

By AUDREY DAWSON

MORE GARDENING

The all American mum selections are: Emperor, Burning Bronze, Ruby King and Show Piece. These were selected from all the entries for three years and have been thoroughly tested in fifteen locations representing different soils and climatic conditions. These winners have beauty of color, excellent vigor and good plant and flower form. They are hardy and have good resistance to disease and frost.

The Emperor in bud is a bright orange as it opens it goes from orange tints to rich clear yellow.

Burning Bronze grows to about 2½ feet. The blossoms appear in clusters and as they open mahogany bronze appears over a scarlet then a medley of tangerine orange and bronze.

Ruby King grows to about 15 inches. The pompon flower is a deep rich red on top and flame red and gold on the underside of the petals.

If you have a green thumb, you should have little trouble getting a start with mums from cuttings this spring - or, if you're dividing clumps of last year's mums to move to new location this year, time to do it is this spring just as soon as the shoots at three to four inches high. Dig up the clump discard the old center portion and separate the young off shoots. Then plant as single divisions ten to twelve inches apart. If you divide and reset them carefully in a good soil with plenty of moisture they'll give you lively masses of color this fall.

SEWING WORKSHOP

Another group of women took part in simple sewing workshop and learned the newest ideas in construction and short steps in sewing. They were: Mrs. Jack Colvert, Mrs. Ellis McGrew, Mrs George Meredith, Mrs. H. A. Johnson, Mrs. C. C. Street, Mrs. Tommy Street, Mrs. H. P. Carter, Mrs. J. O. Street, Mrs. E. G. Cagle, Mrs. C. K. Brooks, Mrs. Johnnie Mills, Mrs. Calvin Tolbird, Mrs. E. A. Croslow, Mrs. Paul Newcomer, Mrs. Frank Buce, Mrs. J. D. Logan, Mrs. H. T. Everett, Mrs. T. R. Wright, Mrs. Robert T. Farr and Mrs. G. R Moorehead.

WASH AND WEAR

Recently two types of "no iron" sheets and pillow cases have been introduced on the market. One type has a resin finish while the other has a non-resin finish. The following are claims for both the resin and the non-resin finishes: non-chlorine retentive; odor, mildew and soil resistant - can withstand same water temperatures as regular cottons and can be washed by hand, machine or commercial laundry. The drying methods for the two types of sheets differ. The resin finish sheet should be tumble dried or drip dried for best appearance. Spinning or wringing out, followed by line drying is recommended for the non-resin finish sheet.

Both types of sheets are priced moderately higher than regular sheets. However, whe laundry is done at home, homemaker will note a saving in time and energy, since sheets do not require ironing. They also remain neater for a longer period of time than regular sheets.

Scholarly Forgers Nearly Extinct

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Bank robbers, shoplifters and juvenile delinquents may be increasing, but one aristocrat of the criminal classes has become as scarce as the horse thief. He's the literary forger who once could turn a pretty dishonest penny from painstaking, scholarly frauds.

Like the horse thief, the literary forger is obsolete, this one a victim of the X-ray, the ultra - violet ray, chemical analysis of paper and ink, and of the current trend toward the centralization of important bank and autograph collections in public and university libraries.

While a hoax or plagiarism sometimes muddies the swift-flowing modern literary stream, detective - minded scholars aided by science's newest tools seem to have netted the last of the great forgers and discouraged a new school. Prime forgeries are becoming so scarce in the rare book and rare autograph trade that work by the notorious old-timers like Thomas J. Wise, Joseph Cosey and Spring now have a certain monetary value of their own and some collectors even specialize in them.

ARE FEW NOW

Long gone are the days when an entrepreneur like Vrain Lucas, an enterprising Parisian, could support himself by selling letters and autographs of history's great—Pontius Pilate, Alexander the Great, Mary Magdalene, Caesar, Cleopatra, Judas Iscariot, Martin Luther, Shakespeare, Dante, to mention a few — all written, interestingly enough, in modern French.

Lucas turned out some 27,000 specimens in the mid-1800s and was able to find buyers. So did a Britisher of about the same period who produced a barnacle-covered keg, washed up on a Wales beach. It contained a letter from Christopher Columbus telling of his discovery of America and had been tossed from the Santa Maria on the long voyage home. What made the letter particularly salable was the remarkable fact that it was written in English.

Both these forgers were crude practitioners who, even then, could have fooled only the most innocent. So too, were three 18th Century Britons who briefly took in the credulous public.

One was the "marvelous boy," Thomas Chatterton who claimed to have discovered poems written by a medieval monk named Rowlwy. Then there was James Macpherson who produced "translations" of poems by a legendary Irish warrior named Ossian. And there was William Ireland who "discovered" new manuscripts of plays by Shakespeare, one of the most forged - against authors. All were exposed in their lifetimes — despondent Chatterton took his life at 18, but Macpherson went on to become a member of Parliament and a historian of contemporary note.

HAD ITS SHARE

In the United States, the forger Spring practiced his art during the Civil War period. His specialties were George Washington and Benjamin Franklin. Spring was so skillful and prolific that samples of his handiwork still turn up with surprising regularity.

Miss Edith Driscoll, one of the best known dealers in rare autographs, says that in the current market, a good example of Spring's forgery is worth about 6 or 7 per cent of the price of a bona fide Washington.

Literary history abounds with scoundrels eager to turn a fast buck with the aid of quick - aged paper and ink — one forger duped the collectors with rare books duplicated in photo - offset and "foxed" the paper to look old with tea, coffee and tobacco stain. But the grand moguls of the literary forgery business are, and are likely to remain, Thomas J. Wise and Joseph Cosey, a Briton and an American.

Cosey was last heard of in the early 1950s and is believed to be dead. He was, however, an artful manufacturer of historical documents, specializing in Abraham Lincoln. It is said that Cosey, a Lincoln student, began his penmanship career after a dealer refused to buy a real Lincoln document he had stolen. Over the years he turned out 1,000 or more fakes and although he has been out of circulation for years, samples of his work still turn up regularly.

The great literary scandal of the 19th and 20th Centuries was revealed in 1934 when John Carter and Graham Pollard, both in the rare book business, published a thick volume disarmingly titled "An Enquiry Into the Nature of Certain 19th Century Pamphlets." It revealed that many rare first edition pamphlets by famed Victorian poets were shrewd forgeries.

The list of suspected documents included more than 50 titles representing the work of such mid - 19th Century lions as Tennyson, Kipling, Swinburne, George Eliot, Matthew Arnold and the Brownings. Robert and Elizabeth Barrett. Their suspicions were aroused because the literary rarities had started to turn up for sale — one at a time — after 1890, and all were from tiny special editions presumably made for the authors to distribute to friends in advance of their regular publication.

Most valuable of the lot were, "Sonnets by E. B. B." — actually Elizabeth Barrett Browning's famed "Sonnets from the Portuguese" — copies of which were sold to collectors for as high as $1,250 each.

DISCOVERED

Carter and Pollard went to work like a pair of bloodhounds. First they established that the paper used in the pamphlets, supposedly printed in 1847, was of a chemical formulation which had not been developed until some 30 years later. Then they found that the type in which the pamphlets had been printed had been introduced into printer's fonts no earlier than 1880.

GUIDE TO GOOD READING

New Books Still Are Coming In

By FRANCES FLANDERS
Ouachita Parish Librarian

The outstanding new book added to the collection of the Ouachita Parish Public Library in the past week is "Mine Enemy Grows Older" by Alexander King. We have had a number of requests for this book and are happy that it is here for our patrons to read. Alexander King is a well known figure in the world of books, art and the theater and is known widely for his stimulating conversation. "Mine Enemy Grows Older"is King in book form; his humor, his warmth, his capacity for coping with life. This a wise, witty and charming book and one that you will thoroughly enjoy.

Several interesting new fiction titles have been added during the past week. "To Appomattox" by Burke Davis gives a vivid picture of the last nine days of the Civil War. It is written with understanding and authenticity and is well worth reading. "The Watsons" by Jane Austen was uncompleted when she died and for years Austen scholars have tried to figure out the ending. Now John Coates has done an acceptable job and one that will be most interesting to all who read Austen. An American airbase and the adjoining Spanish town provide a new tension-packed setting for expert story-teller, John Masters in his new book "Fandango Rock." This is a story of Americans abroad and of the people with whom their lives come in contact. It is a well written, action packed story and will hold the interest of the reader from the first to last page.

An interesting story of Natchez at its roughest and most dangerous period is "Natchez Under-the-Hill" written by Edith Wyatt Moore. This presents a very vivid picture of life at that period. "Plantation Shadows" by Eleanor Fox Ponder also has its setting in Mississippi and is a very interesting picture of Plantation life. "The Darkest Bough" by Anne Chamberlain is a sensitive portrayal of a retarded child and his family and of the problems which arose and how they solved them. This is a book for everyone to read who is faced with the problem of long continued illness in the family.

In the field of non-fiction there is a variety of material. Two new science books are: "The Physics of Elementary Particles" by J. D. Jackson and "Modern Chemical Processes" published by the Industrial and engineering chemistry society. Both of these books should be very useful to specialists in their fields. Two interesting books about the South are "Historic Towns of the Southern States" by Lyman P. Powell and "The Desolate South, 1865-1866" by John T. Trowbridge. Another book of a historical nature is "The Commerce of Louisiana During the French Regime" by N. M. Miller.

Interesting biographies added during the past week are: "Judah P. Benjamin, Confederate Statesman" by Robert Douthat Meade: "My Story" by Mary Astor and "Ben-Gurion" by Robert St. John. Admiral Rickover, inventor of the atomic submarine has made an important contribution to the literature of education in his "Education and Freedom."

A new book added to the geneology collection is "Notes on Culpepper County, Virginia" by Raleigh Travers Green. Those people who have Virginia ancestry will find valuable information here. The date for the opening of the new main library has been set for April 12.

Unsavory Life

JIM FISK: The Career of an Improbable Rascal. By W. A. Swanberg. Scribners. $4.50.

Fat Jim Fisk, plump Josie Mansfield and Ned Stokes the Beau Brummel provided one of gay New York's juiciest scandals and murders. Introduced to each other by Fisk himself, the handsome and unbalanced Stokes and the brazen mistress Josie plotted to mulct Fisk of money which they intended to spend together. They were no match for the master conniver, and Stokes in desperation shot Fisk to death on the stairway of the Grand Central Hotel.

Fisk was only 37, but he had crowded a fantastic career into his short life. He came from Brattleboro Vt., where he had the acumen to develop his father's one-horse pack-peddler operation into a business that spread profitably across Vermont and New Hampshire. He married docile teen - age Lucy, whom he found in Springfield, Mass., and left in Boston while he went on ambitiously to New York to battle with the financial greats of his time before he was killed in 1872.

His appetite for big, fast, ruthless business was whetted by his association with Boston's Jordan Marsh, when he acquired a first fortune by Civil War cotton deals. In New York he set up as a broker under the name of Fisk & Belden, and got in with Daniel Drew. From then on he devoted his brains — phenomenally heavy, according to the autopsy — to milking the Erie Railroad of millions, more millions than can ever be reckoned. With its offices in Fisk's Grand Opera House, and its worn equipment that sent up the accident rate tragically, it gave Fisk a handle for stock manipulation: he tied in with Jay Gould, dished Drew, fought Vanderbilt, and entertained the unbelievably gullible President Grant when Gould was plotting his gold corner.

Fisk was loathed and despised by some of the best men of his time, from Nast to Greeley to Samuel Bowles, whom he tricked into a night in jail. He had some criminal associates, from the judges he bought to Boss Tweed and the unscrupulous Josie. He was a vain, boastful and absurd show-off with his diamonds and uniforms. But as Swanberg says, he liked people, and plain people seemed to like him, even regarding him as a foil against the unprincipled Vanderbilt.

Swanberg bothers no more than he must with dry stock-market figures. This is a book about a top - notch sharper, a savory book about an unsavory character.

Two From Germany

THE BETRAYED. By Michael Horbach. Translated from German by Robert Kee. Coward - McCann. $3.75. THE FORSAKEN ARMY. By Heinrich Gerlach. Translated from German by Richard Graves. Harper. $3.95.

Gen. Ravensburg, Capt. Hagen, Capt. Kannstadt, Lt. Stadelhofer, noncoms Richards and Arnd — this is the chain of command in Horbach's story of a German attempt near war's end to hold a bridge against the Russian tide. Harback's central theme is the fight for the bridge, but interspersed in his brisk series of bloody events are flashbacks to illumine the past and a few choice glimpses into the future.

Gerlach, whose account is based on his own terrible experiences, tells of the German attempt to hold at Stalingrad in face of the overwhelming forces thrown at them by the rallying Russians. There is an even longer list of bedeviled and despairing characters; Lt. Breuer of Intelligence, Lakosch his driver, Col. Unold their superior, Wiese the information officer, Harras who wins promotion, Padre Peters and many others including Romanians, Austrians and Ivan the enemy. It is a dreadfully grim tale of outnumbered, outfought and exhausted soldiers ordered to stand off tanks with bare hands to dig in without trenching tools, to fire without ammunition.

Both novels draw vivid and moving pictures of the thundering twilight of the German gods. These men are at the end of their rope, it is the last spasm of resistance.

But American readers will wonder to themselves where they've read all this before, and a great deal of it has appeared time and again in innumerable World War II books about suffering, cold, hunger, defeat and death. These two books, even, are close to twins; you read one, you've read the other, given the difference in setting. In each you find the same details: The impatience for leave, the downed Red parachutist, the kindly officer giving his driver a light, the insane orders to hold at all costs, the sobering philosophizing to the effect that the dead are better off than the living. What's more, these are alike in general mood: the "betrayed" are the "forsaken" are the "betrayed." Maybe that just proves how right the authors are; and anyway, they have turned out spanking good stories.

Fascists, Love And Two People In Montreal

THE WATCH THAT ENDS THE NIGHT. By Hugh MacLennan. Scribners. $3.95.

When George married Catherine, he knew two things—that she suffered an illness that might kill her any minute, and that her once tempestuous love for Jerome had calmed down a great deal by the time he went to join the Spanish Loyalists and to die.

As this novel opens, George has just got a phone call—from Jerome. The Fascists hadn't killed him after all. He has returned to Montreal to a questionable welcome from George, whose benefactor he had been; from Harry whose wife he had seduced, from people who don't want him talking about his and their policital vagaries during the depression.

MacLennan is telling a story of two contrasting people, healthy Jerome who evades death and sickly Catherine who also evades it but who between them teach the unsure, doubting George that life is more than he has ever guessed: Medical science may be irrelevant to its preservation, the will to life is essential, and anyway, it must be prized for its own irreplaceable self.

MacLennan teaches at McGill, and this is a Canadian, not a United States, novel, of an older, more sedate pattern. It's not only traditional but conservative in its form, its even and sure flow of sound writing, and its impassioned belief in the irreducibility of life.

Riding Out A Wedding Trip Is Top Book

THE BRIDE AND THE BUGATTI. By Nicole de Buron. Translated from French by Virginia Graham. Norton. $2.95.

Penelope, Parisienne, and Guillaume, Parisien, a knowing young couple (as what contemporary young couples are not?) get married and start off rapturously for an Italian honeymoon. They travel in their Bugatti, a slightly battered old racing car which he bought with his marriage settlement and on which he will spend her marriage settlement to keep it running.

What does a girl know about the bridegroom? That he likes her, has a motor bike, is wild or maybe serious, is fond of children and fried potatoes. Only on the honeymoon does she learn he whistles at other girls, forgets to fill the gas tank, tips too many lire when he drinks too much vino, is scared into fits by spiders, mice and even flies, takes a bath only when commanded to, and rises to the most vapid and meaningless compliment like a silly infant.

So they follow the Rhone southward, drive along the French and Italian Rivieras, get to Capri, Sicily and Venice, and come limping home. You may not have the habit of going on other people's wedding trips, but this is worth the ride. Did any bride ever have her eyes opened so wide and like it so much! Lucky youngsters full of disillusion and love, of vinegar and kisses!

-THE ARTS-

RUNNING THE SCALES

With JOHN CALE

The musical week will get underway early with Monday night's performance of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra at Neville High School Auditorium.

According to officers of the Community Concerts board, the concert will begin at 8:15 p.m. This is the second concert of the season for the Monroe association the first being the presentation of Bambi Linn and Rod Alexander with their troop of dancers last fall. Admission is by membership only.

BEETHOVEN

Feature work on the program is the Symphony No. 1 by Beethoven. There is also the overture, "Prometheus," for an opener and Gershwin's "American in Paris" for the concluding selection.

The Detroit Symphony was founded in 1914 and has emerged into a period of new artistic power under the direction of Paul Paray. Ossip Gabrilowitsch led the organization until his death in 1935. The second "golden era" of the motor city symphony began in 1943 under Karl Krueger.

In 1951, the year of Paray's appointment as musical director, the orchestra embarked on a revitalized program of greater contact with businesses in the Detroit area. As a result, the orchestra was able to attract renowned figures as Mischa Mischakoff, concert master, Gordon Staples, Violinist, and Paul Olefsky, cellist, in addition to the conductor, who has been signed on a permanent basis.

The organization tours annually and performs in approximately 110 cities throughout the United States and Canada.

AT LA. TECH

Tuesday, the Spanish soprano, Victoria de Los Angeles, will sing at Howard Auditorium on the La. Tech campus at 8 p.m. This is another program of the La. Tech Concert Association for the 1958-59 season.

Prima donna of the Metropolitan Oper of New York, the royal operas of London and Brussels, La Scala, Milan, and the Paris operas, the singer moves in an aura of international fame. Unlike many of her colleagues, however, she has retained a measure of simplicity and unspoiled charm which enhances everything she does.

Included on the soprano's program will be selections by Scarlatti, Handel, Schubert, Brahms, Rossini, Granados, Vives and De Falla. She will be assisted at the piano by Paul Berl.

PAJAMA GAME

Saturday — not Friday — is the opening gun in the two-week run of "Pajama Game" at the Little Theatre playhouse at Selman Field. The "arena conversion" will seat more than the usual number of persons in the audience and there will be plenty of room on the enlarged stage for the intricate dance numbers.

Slade Brown and Villmer Dean Boyd will alternate as male leads in the musical, and Betty Bandy will serve as mainstay for the leading female part.

SONG AND DANCE

Popular demand played a part in the staging of another musical by the local theatrical organization. The "Boy Friend" was a definite hit last seaso and the "Pajama Game" promises more of the same ingredients blended by director Ivan Uttal and choreographer Nat Santora.

COMPOSITION CONTEST

The Louisiana Federation of Music Clubs has announced the deadline for the state composition contest in the serious music bracket as March 1. Rules for the contest were listed in a previous column. Chairman for the contest is Mrs. Leslie Fain of Alexandria and Miss Violet Archer of the University of Oklahoma music faculty will serve as judge.

BOOKS

The Autobiography of Mark Twain, edited by Charles Neider (Harper): The musings, remembrances and intimate notations of this giant of American letters organized painstakingly into a basic work. Success and failure were apparently equally spectacular for Mark Twain. His renown as an author and lecturer was counterpointed by his ineptitude in handling assorted inventors and panhandlers who came to him for money. One of his spectacular dislikes was reserved for Bret Harte. Like all artists, Mark Twain relished the passing pageant of hunmankind, which he regarded with a blend of vitriol and affection.

The Waist-High Culture, by Thomas Griffith (Harper): A survey of present - day American life by a thoughtful writer who is not so concerned with supplying answers as with making sure his readers understand the questions.

"We are in danger of becoming a vibrating and mediocre people," says Griffith. "Who would say that quality is any phase of our culture outracing the spreading debasement? Have we sold our souls for a mess of pottage that goes snap, crackle and pop?"

Griffith, foreign news editor of Time magazine, devotes most of his book to deploring American concentration on the mass market to the detriment of quality in almost every field. He views as another serious situation the complexity of living which makes for "fragmented men" each knowing his specialty to the exclusion of almost anything else.

Between Day and Dark, by Charles Angoff (Thomas Yosdloff): In which the story of the Polonsky family of Boston is continued. This is the fourth volume concerning the life and times of the Polonskys in particular against the larger saga of Jewish life in the United States. In this novel David Polonsky starts his career as a reporter and writer which will enlarge his horizon beyond Boston but never beyond his family ties.

Main Street, U.S.S.R., by Irving Levine (Doubleday): For those who have read their share of analyses and histories of the Kremlin masters and their actions, this is a refreshing and engrossing venture into what life is like for the average Russian. Although traveling in Russia is opening up for Americans, it is still difficult and comparatively expensive. It will be a long time therefore before Russia is as well known to Americans as England and France. Books of this intimate type are of particular value in the absence of travel opportunity.

Scholarly Forgers Nearly Extinct

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Bank robbers, shoplifters and juvenile delinquents may be increasing, but one aristocrat of the criminal classes has become as scarce as the horse thief. He's the literary forger who once could turn a pretty dishonest penny from painstaking, scholarly frauds.

Like the horse thief, the literary forger is obsolete, this one a victim of the X-ray, the ultra - violet ray, chemical analysis of paper and ink, and of the current trend toward the centralization of important bank and autograph collections in public and university libraries.

While a hoax or plagiarism sometimes muddies the swift-flowing modern literary stream, detective - minded scholars aided by science's newest tools seem to have netted the last of the great forgers and discouraged a new school. Prime forgeries are becoming so scarce in the rare book and rare autograph trade that work by the notorious old-timers like Thomas J. Wise, Joseph Cosey and Spring now have a certain monetary value of their own and some collectors even specialize in them.

ARE FEW NOW

Long gone are the days when an entrepreneur like Vrain Lucas, an enterprising Parisian, could support himself by selling letters and autographs of history's great—Pontius Pilate, Alexander the Great, Mary Magdalene, Caesar, Cleopatra, Judas Iscariot, Martin Luther, Shakespeare, Dante, to mention a few — all written, interestingly enough, in modern French.

Lucas turned out some 27,000 specimens in the mid-1800s and was able to find buyers. So did a Britisher of about the same period who produced a barnacle-covered keg, washed up on a Wales beach. It contained a letter from Christopher Columbus telling of his discovery of America and had been tossed from the Santa Maria on the long voyage home. What made the letter particularly salable was the remarkable fact that it was written in English.

Both these forgers were crude practitioners who, even then, could have fooled only the most innocent. So too, were three 18th Century Britons who briefly took in the credulous public.

One was the "marvelous boy," Thomas Chatterton who claimed to have discovered poems written by a medieval monk named Rowlwy. Then there was James Macpherson who produced "translations" of poems by a legendary Irish warrior named Ossian. And there was William Ireland who "discovered" new manuscripts of plays by Shakespeare, one of the most forged - against authors. All were exposed in their lifetimes — despondent Chatterton took his life at 18, but Macpherson went on to become a member of Parliament and a historian of contemporary note.

HAD ITS SHARE

In the United States, the forger Spring practiced his art during the Civil War period. His specialties were George Washington and Benjamin Franklin. Spring was so skillful and prolific that samples of his handiwork still turn up with surprising regularity.

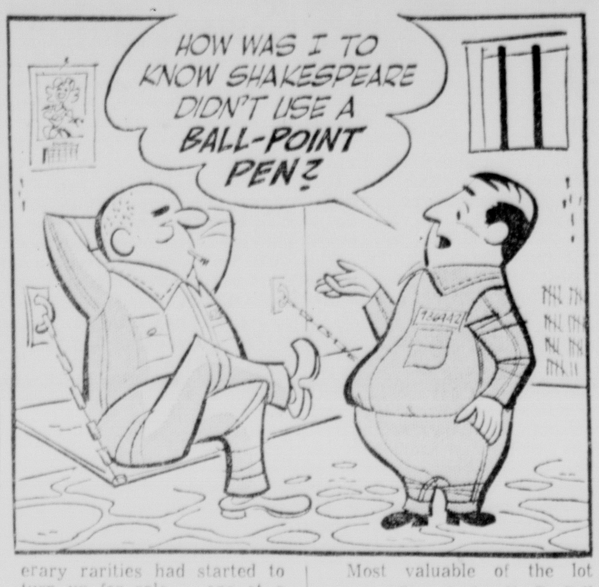
Miss Edith Driscoll, one of the best known dealers in rare autographs, says that in the current market, a good example of Spring's forgery is worth about 6 or 7 per cent of the price of a bona fide Washington.

Literary history abounds with scoundrels eager to turn a fast buck with the aid of quick - aged paper and ink — one forger duped the collectors with rare books duplicated in photo - offset and "foxed" the paper to look old with tea, coffee and tobacco stain. But the grand moguls of the literary forgery business are, and are likely to remain, Thomas J. Wise and Joseph Cosey, a Briton and an American.

Cosey was last heard of in the early 1950s and is believed to be dead. He was, however, an artful manufacturer of historical documents, specializing in Abraham Lincoln. It is said that Cosey, a Lincoln student, began his penmanship career after a dealer refused to buy a real Lincoln document he had stolen. Over the years he turned out 1,000 or more fakes and although he has been out of circulation for years, samples of his work still turn up regularly.

The great literary scandal of the 19th and 20th Centuries was revealed in 1934 when John Carter and Graham Pollard, both in the rare book business, published a thick volume disarmingly titled "An Enquiry Into the Nature of Certain 19th Century Pamphlets." It revealed that many rare, first edition pamphlets by famed Victorian poets were shrewd forgeries.

The list of suspected documents included more than 50 titles representing the work of such mid - 19th Century lions as Tennyson, Kipling, Swinburne, George Eliot, Matthew Arnold and the Brownings, Robert and Elizabeth Barrett. Their suspicions were aroused because the literary rarities had started to turn up for sale — one at a time — after 1890, and all were from tiny special editions presumably made for the authors to distribute to friends in advance of their regular publication.



Most valuable of the lot were, "Sonnets by E. B. B." — actually Elizabeth Barrett Browning's famed "Sonnets from the Portuguese" — copies of which were sold to collectors for as high as $1,250 each.

DISCOVERED

Carter and Pollard went to work like a pair of bloodhounds. First they established that the paper used in the pamphlets, supposedly printed in 1847, was of a chemical formulation which had not been developed until some 30 years later. Then they found that the type in which the pamphlets had been printed had been introduced into printer's fonts no earlier than 1880.

GUIDE TO GOOD READING

New Books Still Are Coming In

By FRANCES FLANDERS
Ouachita Parish Librarian

The outstanding new book added to the collection of the Ouachita Parish Public Library in the past week is "Mine Enemy Grows Older" by Alexander King. We have had a number of requests for this book and are happy that it is here for our patrons to read. Alexander King is a well known figure in the world of books, art and the theater and is known widely for his stimulating conversation. "Mine Enemy Grows Older"is King in book form; his humor, his warmth, his capacity for coping with life. This a wise, witty and charming book and one that you will thoroughly enjoy.

Several interesting new fiction titles have been added during the past week. "To Appomattox" by Burke Davis gives a vivid picture of the last nine days of the Civil War. It is written with understanding and authenticity and is well worth reading. "The Watsons" by Jane Austen was uncompleted when she died and for years Austen scholars have tried to figure out the ending. Now John Coates has done an acceptable job and one that will be most interesting to all who read Austen. An American airbase and the adjoining Spanish town provide a new tension-packed setting for expert story-teller, John Masters in his new book "Fandango Rock." This is a story of Americans abroad and of the people with whom their lives come in contact. It is a well written, action packed story and will hold the interest of the reader from the first to last page.

An interesting story of Natchez at its roughest and most dangerous period is "Natchez Under-the-Hill" written by Edith Wyatt Moore. This presents a very vivid picture of life at that period. "Plantation Shadows" by Eleanor Fox Ponder also has its setting in Mississippi and is a very interesting picture of Plantation life.

"The Darkest Bough" by Anne Chamberlain is a sensitive portrayal of a retarded child and his family and of the problems which arose and how they solved them. This is a book for everyone to read who is faced with the problem of long continued illness in the family.

In the field of non-fiction there is a variety of material. Two new science books are: "The Physics of Elementary Particles" by J. D. Jackson and "Modern Chemical Processes" published by the Industrial and engineering chemistry society. Both of these books should be very useful to specialists in their fields. Two interesting books about the South are "Historic Towns of the Southern States" by Lyman P. Powell and "The Desolate South, 1865-1866" by John T. Trowbridge. Another book of a historical nature is "The Commerce of Louisiana During the French Regime" by N. M. Miller.

Interesting biographies added during the past week are: "Judah P. Benjamin, Confederate Statesman" by Robert Douthat Meade: "My Story" by Mary Astor and "Ben-Gurion" by Robert St. John. Admiral Rickover, inventor of the atomic submarine has made an important contribution to the literature of education in his "Education and Freedom."

A new book added to the geneology collection is "Notes on Culpepper County, Virginia" by Raleigh Travers Green. Those people who have Virginia ancestry will find valuable information here. The date for the opening of the new main library has been set for April 12.

Unsavory Life

JIM FISK: The Career of an Improbable Rascal. By W. A. Swanberg. Scribners. $4.50.

Fat Jim Fisk, plump Josie Mansfield and Ned Stokes the Beau Brummel provided one of gay New York's juiciest scandals and murders. Introduced to each other by Fisk himself, the handsome and unbalanced Stokes and the brazen mistress Josie plotted to mulct Fisk of money which they intended to spend together. They were no match for the master conniver, and Stokes in desperation shot Fisk to death on the stairway of the Grand Central Hotel.

Fisk was only 37, but he had crowded a fantastic career into his short life. He came from Brattleboro Vt., where he had the acumen to develop his father's one-horse pack-peddler operation into a business that spread profitably across Vermont and New Hampshire. He married docile teen - age Lucy, whom he found in Springfield, Mass., and left in Boston while he went on ambitiously to New York to battle with the financial greats of his time before he was killed in 1872.

His appetite for big, fast, ruthless business was whetted by his association with Boston's Jordan Marsh, when he acquired a first fortune by Civil War cotton deals. In New York he set up as a broker under the name of Fisk & Belden, and got in with Daniel Drew. From then on he devoted his brains — phenomenally heavy, according to the autopsy — to milking the Erie Railroad of millions, more millions than can ever be reckoned. With its offices in Fisk's Grand Opera House, and its worn equipment that sent up the accident rate tragically, it gave Fisk a handle for stock manipulation: he tied in with Jay Gould, dished Drew, fought Vanderbilt, and entertained the unbelievably gullible President Grant when Gould was plotting his gold corner.

Fisk was loathed and despised by some of the best men of his time, from Nast to Greeley to Samuel Bowles, whom he tricked into a night in jail. He had some criminal associates, from the judges he bought to Boss Tweed and the unscrupulous Josie. He was a vain, boastful and absurd show-off with his diamonds and uniforms. But as Swanberg says, he liked people, and plain people seemed to like him, even regarding him as a foil against the unprincipled Vanderbilt.

Swanberg bothers no more than he must with dry stock-market figures. This is a book about a top - notch sharper, a savory book about an unsavory character.

Two From Germany

THE BETRAYED, By Michael Horbach. Translated from German by Robert Kee. Coward - McCann. $3.75. THE FORSAKEN ARMY. By Heinrich Gerlach. Translated from German by Richard Graves. Harper. $3.95.

Gen. Ravensburg, Capt. Hagen, Capt. Kannstadt, Lt. Stadelhofer, noncoms Richards and Arnd — this is the chain of command in Horbach's story of a German attempt near war's end to hold a bridge against the Russian tide. Harback's central theme is the fight for the bridge, but interspersed in his brisk series of bloody events are flashbacks to illumine the past and a few choice glimpses into the future.

Gerlach, whose account is based on his own terrible experiences, tells of the German attempt to hold at Stalingrad in face of the overwhelming forces thrown at them by the rallying Russians. There is an even longer list of bedeviled and despairing characters; Lt. Breuer of Intelligence, Lakosch his driver, Col. Unold their superior, Wiese the information officer, Harras who wins promotion, Padre Peters and many others including Romanians, Austrians and Ivan the enemy. It is a dreadfully grim tale of outnumbered, outfought and exhausted soldiers ordered to stand off tanks with bare hands to dig in without trenching tools, to fire without ammunition.

Both novels draw vivid and moving pictures of the thundering twilight of the German gods. These men are at the end of their rope, it is the last spasm of resistance.

But American readers will wonder to themselves where they've read all this before, and a great deal of it has appeared time and again in innumerable World War II books about suffering, cold, hunger, defeat and death. These two books, even, are close to twins; you read one, you've read the other, given the difference in setting. In each you find the same details: The impatience for leave, the downed Red parachutist, the kindly officer giving his driver a light, the insane orders to hold at all costs, the sobering philosophizing to the effect that the dead are better off than the living. What's more, these are alike in general mood: the "betrayed" are the "forsaken" are the "betrayed." Maybe that just proves how right the authors are; and anyway, they have turned out spanking good stories.

Fascists, Love And Two People In Montreal

THE WATCH THAT ENDS THE NIGHT. By Hugh MacLennan. Scribners. $3.95.

When George married Catherine, he knew two things—that she suffered an illness that might kill her any minute, and that her once tempestuous love for Jerome had calmed down a great deal by the time he went to join the Spanish Loyalists and to die.

As this novel opens, George has just got a phone call—from Jerome. The Fascists hadn't killed him after all. He has returned to Montreal to a questionable welcome from George, whose benefactor he had been; from Harry whose wife he had seduced, from people who don't want him talking about his and their policital vagaries during the depression.

MacLennan is telling a story of two contrasting people, healthy Jerome who evades death and sickly Catherine who also evades it but who between them teach the unsure, doubting George that life is more than he has ever guessed: Medical science may be irrelevant to its preservation, the will to life is essential, and anyway, it must be prized for its own irreplaceable self.

MacLennan teaches at McGill, and this is a Canadian, not a United States, novel, of an older, more sedate pattern. It's not only traditional but conservative in its form, its even and sure flow of sound writing, and its impassioned belief in the irreducibility of life.

Riding Out A Wedding Trip Is Top Book

THE BRIDE AND THE BUGATTI. By Nicole de Buron. Translated from French by Virginia Graham. Norton. $2.95.

Penelope, Parisienne, and Guillaume, Parisien, a knowing young couple (as what contemporary young couples are not?) get married and start off rapturously for an Italian honeymoon. They travel in their Bugatti, a slightly battered old racing car which he bought with his marriage settlement and on which he will spend her marriage settlement to keep it running.

What does a girl know about the bridegroom? That he likes her, has a motor bike, is wild or maybe serious, is fond of children and fried potatoes. Only on the honeymoon does she learn he whistles at other girls, forgets to fill the gas tank, tips too many lire when he drinks too much vino, is scared into fits by spiders, mice and even flies, takes a bath only when commanded to, and rises to the most vapid and meaningless compliment like a silly infant.

So they follow the Rhone southward, drive along the French and Italian Rivieras, get to Capri, Sicily and Venice, and come limping home. You may not have the habit of going on other people's wedding trips, but this is worth the ride. Did any bride ever have her eyes opened so wide and like it so much! Lucky youngsters full of disillusion and love, of vinegar and kisses!

-THE ARTS-

With JOHN CALE

The musical week will get underway early with Monday night's performance of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra at Neville High School Auditorium.

According to officers of the Community Concerts board, the concert will begin at 8:15 p.m. This is the second concert of the season for the Monroe association the first being the presentation of Bambi Linn and Rod Alexander with their troop of dancers last fall. Admission is by membership only.

BEETHOVEN

Feature work on the program is the Symphony No. 1 by Beethoven. There is also the overture, "Prometheus," for an opener and Gershwin's "American in Paris" for the concluding selection.

The Detroit Symphony was founded in 1914 and has emerged into a period of new artistic power under the direction of Paul Paray. Ossip Gabrilowitsch led the organization until his death in 1935. The second "golden era" of the motor city symphony began in 1943 under Karl Krueger.

In 1951, the year of Paray's appointment as musical director, the orchestra embarked on a revitalized program of greater contact with businesses in the Detroit area. As a result, the orchestra was able to attract renowned figures as Mischa Mischakoff, concert master, Gordon Staples, Violinist, and Paul Olefsky, cellist, in addition to the conductor, who has been signed on a permanent basis.

The organization tours annually and performs in approximately 110 cities throughout the United States and Canada.

AT LA. TECH

Tuesday, the Spanish soprano, Victoria de Los Angeles, will sing at Howard Auditorium on the La. Tech campus at 8 p.m. This is another program of the La. Tech Concert Association for the 1958-59 season.

Prima donna of the Metropolitan Oper of New York, the royal operas of London and Brussels, La Scala, Milan, and the Paris operas, the singer moves in an aura of international fame. Unlike many of her colleagues, however, she has retained a measure of simplicity and unspoiled charm which enhances everything she does.

Included on the soprano's program will be selections by Scarlatti, Handel, Schubert, Brahms, Rossini, Granados, Vives and De Falla. She will be assisted at the piano by Paul Berl.

PAJAMA GAME

Saturday — not Friday — is the opening gun in the two-week run of "Pajama Game" at the Little Theatre playhouse at Selman Field. The "arena conversion" will seat more than the usual number of persons in the audience and there will be plenty of room on the enlarged stage for the intricate dance numbers.

Slade Brown and Villmer Dean Boyd will alternate as male leads in the musical, and Betty Bandy will serve as mainstay for the leading female part.

SONG AND DANCE

Popular demand played a part in the staging of another musical by the local theatrical organization. The "Boy Friend" was a definite hit last seaso and the "Pajama Game" promises more of the same ingredients blended by director Ivan Uttal and choreographer Nat Santora.

COMPOSITION CONTEST

The Louisiana Federation of Music Clubs has announced the deadline for the state composition contest in the serious music bracket as March 1. Rules for the contest were listed in a previous column. Chairman for the contest is Mrs. Leslie Fain of Alexandria and Miss Violet Archer of the University of Oklahoma music faculty will serve as judge.

BOOKS

The Autobiography of Mark Twain, edited by Charles Neider (Harper): The musings, remembrances and intimate notations of this giant of American letters organized painstakingly into a basic work. Success and failure were apparently equally spectacular for Mark Twain. His renown as an author and lecturer was counterpointed by his ineptitude in handling assorted inventors and panhandlers who came to him for money. One of his spectacular dislikes was reserved for Bret Harte. Like all artists, Mark Twain relished the passing pageant of hunmankind, which he regarded with a blend of vitriol and affection.

The Waist-High Culture, by Thomas Griffith (Harper): A survey of present - day American life by a thoughtful writer who is not so concerned with supplying answers as with making sure his readers understand the questions.

"We are in danger of becoming a vibrating and mediocre people," says Griffith. "Who would say that quality is any phase of our culture outracing the spreading debasement? Have we sold our souls for a mess of pottage that goes snap, crackle and pop?"

Griffith, foreign news editor of Time magazine, devotes most of his book to deploring American concentration on the mass market to the detriment of quality in almost every field. He views as another serious situation the complexity of living which makes for "fragmented men" each knowing his specialty to the exclusion of almost anything else.

Between Day and Dark, by Charles Angoff (Thomas Yosdloff): In which the story of the Polonsky family of Boston is continued. This is the fourth volume concerning the life and times of the Polonskys in particular against the larger saga of Jewish life in the United States. In this novel David Polonsky starts his career as a reporter and writer which will enlarge his horizon beyond Boston but never beyond his family ties.

Main Street, U.S.S.R., by Irving Levine (Doubleday): For those who have read their share of analyses and histories of the Kremlin masters and their actions, this is a refreshing and engrossing venture into what life is like for the average Russian. Although traveling in Russia is opening up for Americans, it is still difficult and comparatively expensive. It will be a long time therefore before Russia is as well known to Americans as England and France. Books of this intimate type are of particular value in the absence of travel opportunity.

NEW YORK (UPI) — There is no doubt that Gwen Verdon is potent insurance in the musical comedy theater of today, and "Redhead" at the 46th Street Theater is fortunate to have her.

No matter what you may think of her execution of the singing chores assigned to her since she achieved leading lady status — I try not to think — the fact remains that she is a dancing doll of tremendous ability. And she projects from the stage a piquant personality — except when she gets trapped in something sombre like her previous show "New Girl in Town" — that captivates most playgoers.

It is difficult to imagine anyone looking better in a pair of tights or any sort of abbreviated dancing costume. Because of this and the type of roles and routines she has had in "Can-Can" and "Damn Yankees," she has come to be regarded as a very sexy performer.

This, of course, is bound to appeal to the males. But women are ardent fans, too, which means something else must be involved. I believe that that something is Miss Verdon's refusal to take the sexy stuff seriously. In short, she kids it, and that is also true of two other performers whose names have become synonymous with sex in show business. Mae West and Marlene Dietrich.

Men may not realize or understand this, but women do appreciate the difference between a glamour gal who takes herself and her status seriously and one who knows how to leaven such a reputation with humor.

This is not a prelude to advertising "Redhead" as a sexy frolic, because it isn't. It does display the Verdon figure to advantage, but essentially it is quite an innocent and wide-eyed affair such as you might expect of a musical comedy story steeped in a London background of 55 years ago.

The fact that a strangler of women is at large and that much of the action takes place in the eerie atmosphere of a waxworks museum should not be alarming. It is all done with a light touch.

The music of Albert Hague, for which Miss Fields fashioned the lyrics, is breezy and bouncy and serves well for the dancing creations of choreographer Bob Fosse. But there is nothing really memorable in the song line.

What you have to settle for is a show that is long on good dancing and Miss Verdon. If that's enough, you should have a fairly good time.

PAUL PARAY

Paul Paray Is Conductor Of Recognition

Paul Paray is a great man of music, French hero and the one who developed the Detroit Symphony Orchestra into a magnificent group recognized the world over since his appointment as permanent conductor in 1951.

A graduate of the Paris Conservatory, Paray won the Grand Prix de Rome for composition in 1911 and began his conducting career in earnest after World War I. In 1920 he was appointed associate conductor of the Lamoureux Orchestra, then under Camille Chevillard. In 1923, at the death of Chevillard, Paray became principal conductor.

In 1928, Paray became the conductor of the Municipal Orchestra of the Casino of Monte Carlo and in 1932 succeeded Gabriel Pierne as conductor of the famed Concerts Colonne. He held this position until his Detroit appointment in 1951 and ex - officio until 1955. During this period he conducted on numerous occasions Wagnerian works at the Paris Opera.

Paray was one of the first of many important French artists to join the underground movement of his country in World War II. A target for the Nazis for refusing to name Jewish members of his Concerts Colonne, Paray went into voluntary exile. He directed the opera of Monte Carlo until the liberation on the invitation of Prince Louis II.

Paray made his American debut July 24, 1939, with the Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra at New York's Stadium Concerts. Since 1945 he has conducted the orchestras of Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Cincinnati. In the summer of 1957, he conducted a series of concerts at Robinhood Dell, Philadelphia, and opened the summer series at the Hollywood Bowl in Los Angeles.

Riotous Comedy At Paramount

Set in an average - sized American town, the Twentieth Century - Fox production traces the hilarious adventures of a public relations man (Newman), whose busy - body wife (Miss Woodward) leads a resentful town's crusade against the Army, which plans to use the community as its site for a top secret project. In the course of the story, mounted in lush De Luxe Color settings, the well - meaning husband almost loses his wife, because of another woman's (Miss Collins) flirtations intentions toward him, and he alienates the entire U. S. Army, particularly the blundering captain (Carson) in charge of the project.

How this innocent by - stander resolves his dilemma, at one point to the extreme of re-activating his status in the Naval Reserve, has kept millions of readers in stitches and with McCarey's experienced hand, should be echoed in the nation's movie theatres with the release of this film. McCarey purposely chose a cast featuring several performers with no previous comedy experience. Paul Newman, Joanne Woodward and Joan Collins thus make their comedy debut in "Rally 'Round the Flag, Boys" and McCarey is evidently pleased with the result. He plans another fun - fest soon, teaming these same personalities. To add proper balance to his supporting cast the film has such professional laugh-makers as co-star Jack Carson, and a supporting cast headed by Dwayne Hickman, Tuesday Weld, Gale Gordon, Tom Gilson and O. Z. Whitehead.

"Rally 'Round the Flag, Boys!" promises to send the laugh barometer rising to un-precedented heights and should be one film everyone will want to 'Rally 'Round.'

Mummified remains of Apache Indians have been found in caves along the Apache Trail near Phoenix, Arix. They were victims of marauding tribes centuries ago.

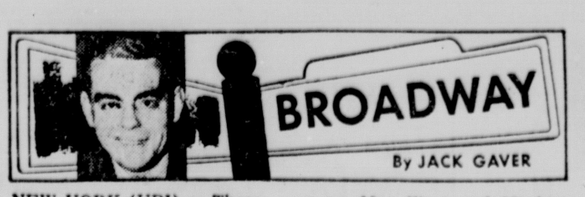
ROCK-A-BYE BABY



NEW YORK (UPI) — There is no doubt that Gwen Verdon is potent insurance in the musical comedy theater of today, and "Redhead" at the 46th Street Theater is fortunate to have her.

No matter what you may think of her execution of the singing chores assigned to her since she achieved leading lady status — I try not to think — the fact remains that she is a dancing doll of tremendous ability. And she projects from the stage a piquant personality — except when she gets trapped in something sombre like her previous show "New Girl in Town" — that captivates most playgoers.

It is difficult to imagine anyone looking better in a pair of tights or any sort of abbreviated dancing costume. Because of this and the type of roles and routines she has had in "Can-Can" and "Damn Yankees," she has come to be regarded as a very sexy performer.

This, of course, is bound to appeal to the males. But women are ardent fans, too, which means something else must be involved. I believe that that something is Miss Verdon's refusal to take the sexy stuff seriously. In short, she kids it, and that is also true of two other performers whose names have become synonymous with sex in show business, Mae West and Marlene Dietrich.

Men may not realize or understand this, but women do appreciate the difference between a glamour gal who takes herself and her status seriously and one who knows how to leaven such a reputation with humor.

This is not a prelude to advertising "Redhead" as a sexy frolic, because it isn't. It does display the Verdon figure to advantage, but essentially it is quite an innocent and wide-eyed affair such as you might expect of a musical comedy story steeped in a London background of 55 years ago.

The fact that a strangler of women is at large and that much of the action takes place in the eerie atmosphere of a waxworks museum should not be alarming. It is all done with a light touch.

The music of Albert Hague, for which Miss Fields fashioned the lyrics, is breezy and bouncy and serves well for the dancing creations of choreographer Bob Fosse. But there is nothing really memorable in the song line.

What you have to settle for is a show that is long on good dancing and Miss Verdon. If that's enough, you should have a fairly good time.

PAUL PARAY

Paul Paray Is Conductor Of Recognition

Paul Paray is a great man of music, French hero and the one who developed the Detroit Symphony Orchestra into a magnificent group recognized the world over since his appointment as permanent conductor in 1951.

A graduate of the Paris Conservatory, Paray won the Grand Prix de Rome for composition in 1911 and began his conducting career in earnest after World War I. In 1920 he was appointed associate conductor of the Lamoureux Orchestra, then under Camille Chevillard. In 1923, at the death of Chevillard, Paray became principal conductor.

In 1928, Paray became the conductor of the Municipal Orchestra of the Casino of Monte Carlo and in 1932 succeeded Gabriel Pierne as conductor of the famed Concerts Colonne. He held this position until his Detroit appointment in 1951 and ex - officio until 1955. During this period he conducted on numerous occasions Wagnerian works at the Paris Opera.

Paray was one of the first of many important French artists to join the underground movement of his country in World War II. A target for the Nazis for refusing to name Jewish members of his Concerts Colonne, Paray went into voluntary exile. He directed the opera of Monte Carlo until the liberation on the invitation of Prince Louis II.

Paray made his American debut July 24, 1939, with the Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra at New York's Stadium Concerts. Since 1945 he has conducted the orchestras of Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Cincinnati. In the summer of 1957, he conducted a series of concerts at Robinhood Dell, Philadelphia, and opened the summer series at the Hollywood Bowl in Los Angeles.

Riotous Comedy At Paramount

Set in an average - sized American town, the Twentieth Century - Fox production traces the hilarious adventures of a public relations man (Newman), whose busy - body wife (Miss Woodward) leads a resentful town's crusade against the Army, which plans to use the community as its site for a top secret project. In the course of the story, mounted in lush De Luxe Color settings, the well - meaning husband almost loses his wife, because of another woman's (Miss Collins) flirtations intentions toward him, and he alienates the entire U. S. Army, particularly the blundering captain (Carson) in charge of the project.

How this innocent by - stander resolves his dilemma, at one point to the extreme of re-activating his status in the Naval Reserve, has kept millions of readers in stitches and with McCarey's experienced hand, should be echoed in the nation's movie theatres with the release of this film. McCarey purposely chose a cast featuring several performers with no previous comedy experience. Paul Newman, Joanne Woodward and Joan Collins thus make their comedy debut in "Rally 'Round the Flag, Boys" and McCarey is evidently pleased with the result. He plans another fun - fest soon, teaming these same personalities. To add proper balance to his supporting cast the film has such professional laugh-makers as co-star Jack Carson, and a supporting cast headed by Dwayne Hickman, Tuesday Weld, Gale Gordon, Tom Gilson and O. Z. Whitehead.

"Rally 'Round the Flag, Boys!" promises to send the laugh barometer rising to un-precedented heights and should be one film everyone will want to 'Rally 'Round.'

Mummified remains of Apache Indians have been found in caves along the Apache Trail near Phoenix, Arix. They were victims of marauding tribes centuries ago.

Nation-Wide Honors Given Parish Agent

Mrs. Mildred Swift, Associate Home Demonstration Agent, Ouachita parish, has recently been focused in the national limelight for three successive times and has thereby won recognition not only for herself and her community but for the organization she represents. Ouachita parish can indeed be proud of the accolades won by the local Extension worker.

First on the list of honors was when Mrs. Swift was asked to prepare an article to appear in the Extension Service Review, a publication issued in Washington, D. C., and circulated among some 10,000 Agricultural Extension workers and other allied groups. Her subject was "Spotlighting Audience Interests." Occupying more than one page, Mrs. Swift's article appeared in the November issue of this publication and reader-audience response to the article has been rewarding, says the author.

NEXT

Next on the list was the inclusion of Mildred Swift's name in "Who's Who of American Women." This new volume recently off the press states that the American woman has made a name for herself in scores of fields. Mrs. Swift is recognized in the fields of home economics and communications.

The third honor came in the form of a request to assist 60 other women in the nation with making a survey of coffee drinking habits of families in the Ouachita parish area. This survey was conducted by McCall's magazine.

Engineers To Hold Banquet Next Tuesday

A joint dinner meeting Tuesday for mechanical and electrical engineers in the Monroe area will commemorate national Engineer's Week, February 22-28, according to A. C. Thigpen, president of the Monroe sub-section of the Louisiana Engineering Society.

The banquet meeting is slated for 7 p.m. at the Highland Park Country Club in West Monroe. Members of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers in the Monroe sub-section and the Monroe Group of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers will attend the meeting, Thigpen said. He urged all members to make reservations for themselves and their wives.

R. G. Hart, program chairman, has secured a film on the construction of the Mackinac Bridge, a feat of interest to all engineers.

Nation-Wide Honors Given Parish Agent

Mrs. Mildred Swift, Associate Home Demonstration Agent, Ouachita parish, has recently been focused in the national limelight for three successive times and has thereby won recognition not only for herself and her community but for the organization she represents. Ouachita parish can indeed be proud of the accolades won by the local Extension worker.

First on the list of honors was when Mrs. Swift was asked to prepare an article to appear in the Extension Service Review, a publication issued in Washington, D. C., and circulated among some 10,000 Agricultural Extension workers and other allied groups. Her subject was "Spotlighting Audience Interests." Occupying more than one page, Mrs. Swift's article appeared in the November issue of this publication and reader-audience response to the article has been rewarding, says the author.

NEXT

Next on the list was the inclusion of Mildred Swift's name in "Who's Who of American Women." This new volume recently off the press states that the American woman has made a name for herself in scores of fields. Mrs. Swift is recognized in the fields of home economics and communications.

The third honor came in the form of a request to assist 60 other women in the nation with making a survey of coffee drinking habits of families in the Ouachita parish area. This survey was conducted by McCall's magazine.

Engineers To Hold Banquet Next Tuesday

A joint dinner meeting Tuesday for mechanical and electrical engineers in the Monroe area will commemorate national Engineer's Week, February 22-28, according to A. C. Thigpen, president of the Monroe sub-section of the Louisiana Engineering Society.

The banquet meeting is slated for 7 p.m. at the Highland Park Country Club in West Monroe. Members of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers in the Monroe sub-section and the Monroe Group of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers will attend the meeting, Thigpen said. He urged all members to make reservations for themselves and their wives.

R. G. Hart, program chairman, has secured a film on the construction of the Mackinac Bridge, a feat of interest to all engineers.

TO COMPETE WITH U.S.

Soviets Revamp Jet Transports

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Russia, apparently stung by the flashing performance and swank luxury of new U. S. jetliners, is reported beefing up its own jet transports.

The unofficial but authoritative publication "Air Force" said it has learned that the vaunted Red jetliner TU104 is undergoing extensive modifications so it can compete with America's new Boeing 707 and the forthcoming Douglas DC8.

The magazine said the Russians are coming out with a new version of the TU104 called the TU104B. It said the plane will have a fuselage four feet longer than the original model and probably will use more powerful engines.

The report confirmed suspicions in aviation circles that the Russians are a lot unhappier about their "show piece" jet than they would ever admit publicly. Soviet officials have long bragged that Russia put commercial jets into operation two years ahead of the United States.

The Soviet Union achieved this, however, by the simplest shortcut possible: It merely modified a medium bomber into a transport plane. The result was a hybrid jetliner with numerous weaknesses.

U. S. aviation experts have criticized the TU104 for these shortcomings:

—Its brakes are weak; several TU104's are reported to have overshot runways.

—Its pressurization system is inferior; passengers who have flown in the Red jet complained of leaking fountain pens and physical discomfort.

—It is considered far overweight; one recent report said it weighs 40,000 pounds more than jetliners of similar size and performance.

"Air Force" called the TU104 a "ground - loving airplane with unspectacular performance." It indicated the plane required more takeoff room than comparable U. S. jetliners. The magazine said the new TU104B will have larger wing flaps and bigger engines to improve its takeoff performance.

Despite its known faults, the TU104 has put the Red star of Aeroflot (Russia's state-operated airline) into areas the West will not be serving with jets for some time.

Last December, for example, Aeroflot started direct Moscow-Cairo service with TU104's. The planes also are being used by CSA, the Czechoslovakian airline, between Prague and Cairo. Even though the TU104 is an inferior transport by Western air standards, it speed makes it a formidable competitor to U.S. - built piston engine airliners.

The Russians have tried hard to sell the TU104 to European airlines, without success. The price tag is said to run hundreds of thousands of dollars under American-made jetliners. But most European experts who examined the Red transport turned it down as being too costly to operate.

"Even if they gave the plane away, we couldn't afford to fly it," one European airline official said.

Sen. Symington Requests Ike To Replace Dulles

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (AP) — Sen. Stuart Symington (D-Mo) called on President Eisenhower Saturday to appoint a successor to Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, ill with cancer.

"I don't think Dulles can run the State Department from a hospital," said Symington, mentioned as a possible presidential candidate in 1960.

"I would hope that the President would appoint a successor promptly to continue such delicate negotiations as those over Berlin and the current Geneva conference."

MAY AFFECT FLYING COSTS

CAB Seeks Data On Airline Fares

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A Civil Aeronautics Board examiner is working on a report that could have far-reaching effects on airline passenger fares.

Examiner Ralph L. Wiser, working from 13,357 pages of testimony and stacks of exhibits, is writing a recommended decision which will attempt to determine:

—How much airline fares should be now.

—What standards the CAB should use, now and in the future, to determine the level of fares.

Wiser's recommendations to the board in its three-year-old general passenger fare investigation are expected soon. But the five-man board might not take final action for months.

The case is of major significance to the airlines, the flying public and other segments of the transportation industry because the CAB never has developed explicit criteria for setting air fares.

The airlines are grappling with the problem of how to pay for $2,500,000,000 worth of jets they are acquiring.

Several already have jets in use. Others plan to join the jet club soon.

The carriers have argued, before Wiser and elsewhere, that they must have higher fares to generate earnings necessary to attract more capital.

The CAB has suggested in official statements and through members' speeches that the airlines develop mass markets through aggressive promotion.

The airlines point out that they already have spent heavily to advertise the advantages of jet flight and have developed family fare plans, specially - priced excursion tickets and other promotional lures.

But the questions immediately facing the CAB are:

—How should the rate-of-return concept—profits as a percentage of fixed investment—fit into the air fare-making procedure?

—What would a fair rate of return be? Both the carriers and the CAB's Bureau of Air Operations, which represents the public in CAB matters, agree that a fair return would be substantially higher than the 6 per cent usually allowed public utilities.

—What depreciation method should the airlines be permitted to use in writing off the cost of their new equipment?

From them he may come up with some thoughts about fares that could bear significantly on the future of the airline industry.

Steel Union Pay Demand Limits Urged

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Sen. Estes Kefauver urged the United Steelworkers Union Saturday to limit its demands for wage increases if steel companies agree in turn not to raise prices.

The Tennessee Democrat, chairman of the Senate Anti-Trust and Monopoly Subcommittee, said in outlining the proposal that if the union did this there would be no justification for a price increase because there would be no appreciable rise in the cost of steel.

But if "big steel" rejected such an offer and raised prices, Kefauver said, "the entire country would know on whose shoulders rests the responsibility for any further contribution to the inflationary movement."

Keafuver's proposal, outlined in a statement, called for the union to offer to limit its wage hike demands to an amount equal to the average increase in steel industry productivity. He said an impartial board could determine the rate of productivity.

Kefauver said the union could make its offer on condition that the companies would not raise prices.

He said he would urge Union President David McDonald to make the offer and Roger Blough, board chairman of U. S. Steel Corp. to accept it.

Kefauver noted that President Eisenhower recently urged that wage demands not exceed rises in productivity. However, he said, "This position only goes part of the way, since it ignores the existence of the demonstrated power of large companies in concentrated industries to make price increases substantially greater than the increases in cost resulting from wage advances."

If the steel companies raised prices despite the restricted union demands, Kefauver said, the union then would be justified in asking its "proportional share of the price increase."

He said the nation cannot afford another steel price rise because it would bring more inflation and less employment throughout the economy.

"Even if they gave the plane away, we couldn't afford to fly it," one European airline official said.

Steel Union Pay Demand Limits Urged

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Sen. Estes Kefauver urged the United Steelworkers Union Saturday to limit its demands for wage increases if steel companies agree in turn not to raise prices.

The Tennessee Democrat, chairman of the Senate Anti-Trust and Monopoly Subcommittee, said in outlining the proposal that if the union did this there would be no justification for a price increase because there would be no appreciable rise in the cost of steel.

But if "big steel" rejected such an offer and raised prices, Kefauver said, "the entire country would know on whose shoulders rests the responsibility for any further contribution to the inflationary movement."

Keafuver's proposal, outlined in a statement, called for the union to offer to limit its wage hike demands to an amount equal to the average increase in steel industry productivity. He said an impartial board could determine the rate of productivity.

Kefauver said the union could make its offer on condition that the companies would not raise prices.

He said he would urge Union President David McDonald to make the offer and Roger Blough, board chairman of U. S. Steel Corp. to accept it.

Kefauver noted that President Eisenhower recently urged that wage demands not exceed rises in productivity. However, he said, "This position only goes part of the way, since it ignores the existence of the demonstrated power of large companies in concentrated industries to make price increases substantially greater than the increases in cost resulting from wage advances."

If the steel companies raised prices despite the restricted union demands, Kefauver said, the union then would be justified in asking its "proportional share of the price increase."

He said the nation cannot afford another steel price rise because it would bring more inflation and less employment throughout the economy.

Pair Captured For Mississippi Torture-Slaying

KOSCIUSKO, Miss. (UPI)— Attala County authorities began moves Saturday to return two suspected killers to Mississippi.

Albert Leopard, 25, was arrested at the home of his brother near Cullman, Ala., Friday night about two hours before his cousin, Joe Edwards, 20 was nabbed as suspects in the death of their great aunt, Mrs. Mary Young, whose body was found in the smouldering ruins of her country home Wednesday night. Officers said she had been robbed, beaten and tied before her house was set afire.

Leopard, a red-haired escaper from the Attala County Prison Farm, and his younger cousin were driven from the area of the fire to Durant Wednesday night, Sheriff Roy Braswell said. He said they caught a train to Memphis and split up.

CAN'T GET OVER IT! MEETIN' YOU HERE! POLICE INSPECTOR BUD BEAN! STILL IS BUD BEAN, AIN'T IT? HAVEN'T CHANGED YER NAME?

NOT ME, SUSIE! IT'S BUD BEAN, SAME AS WHEN I WAS TOWN MARSHAL, BACK THERE.

YEAH! "BACK THERE"—THAT HIRED FAST GUN, AS KILLED MY MAN, COMIN' 'CROSS TH' STREET FROM PEASLEY'S SALOON THAT MORNIN'.

I'D JUST COME OUT OF THE HOTEL. FIFTY PEOPLE SAW IT ALL!

YOU WAS WEARING RED'S GUN BELT! THAT KILLER KNEW WHY YOU'D COME INTO TOWN! HE WAS FAST, LIKE A FLASH!

RECKON SO! ME, I WASN'T NOTICIN' HIS HAND! HAD MY EYE ON TH' SPOT I AIMED T'HIT!

WELL, I WAS WATCHIN' HIS GUN HAND AND MISSED TH' WHOLE THING, JUST ABOUT! HE GOT HIS GUN ABOUT HALF DRAWED, AND HE WAS DEAD!

REMEMBER DOC, SAID HE'D NEVER SEEN TWO BULLETS SO CLOSE TOGETHER—RIGHT WHERE I'D AIMED 'EM!

CAN YOU STILL TURN A PISTOL LOOSE THAT FAST FROM SCRATCH, SUSIE?

RECKON SO, BUD. BUT ONLY IF I WAS T'BE MAD ENOUGH! BUT WE'RE GETTIN' OFF TH' SUBJECT!

WAS YOU REALLY TRYIN' T'ARREST MY NEPHEW, T. T. TIGER?

WHOA, NOW, SUSIE! WE COPS WERE TOLD TO HELP THE TAX BOYS! BUT TIGER'S IN SWITZERLAND NOW! JUST GOT THE WORD!

STICK TO CASES, BUD! MY NEPHEW NEVER BROKE A LAW! MAYBE HE FOUND A HOLE IN TH' LAW, BUT IS THAT A CRIME?

WELL, WHEN YOU PULL A FEW MILLION THROUGH THAT HOLE, SOME PEOPLE DON'T LIKE IT.

I'M NO LEGAL EAGLE! I'M ONLY A COP! BUT AS I GET IT, HE WAS LEGAL! BUT SOMEBODY FIGGERED IF THEY COULD HOLD HIM LONG ENOUGH MAYBE THEY COULD FIGGER HOW HE'D DONE SOMETHING ILLEGAL!

YOU SEE, THERE WAS A LOT OF MONEY INVOLVED! MILLIONS! THAT NEPHEW OF YOURS SURE PLAYED IT SMART!

SWITZERLAND, Y'SAY, BUD? THAT'S WHERE, IF Y'PUT IT IN A BANK, TH' BANK TELLS NOBODY NOTHIN' EVER! I LIKE THAT!
